Parking Fines To Be Raised

You've seen them, those long, narrow pieces of white paper, flapping beneath your windshield wiper when you returned to your car after a shopping trip in the Center.

And you either paid them (they're cheap at $1 a piece) or you've filed them away somewhere and never given them a second thought.

However, Police Chief John McHugh has made a number of recommendations on parking violation fines that might cause you to rethink your old reactions to those tickets.

Following a presentation by McHugh last week, Selectmen voted to increase parking violation fines for overtime and meter violations from $1 to $3. Those fines can go as high as $15 for violations during times of snow removal.

In addition, all tickets will cost $20 if not paid within 21 days.

While he was unable to provide definite figures concerning the number of tickets that currently have not been paid, McHugh did say there were "quite a few."

He thinks the increase from $1 to $3 will make motorists pay more attention to parking regulations in the Center.

"I think it will have an impact in getting people to adher to parking regulations," McHugh said.

McHugh told Selectmen Monday Winchester's fine schedule was much lower than schedules in communities in the surrounding area.

"I'm not out to raise money," McHugh told the Board. "I just want to correct an injustice. I don't advise stringent rates. I simply want them in line with those in other communities."

In discussing parking violations in the Center, Selectman Edward F. O'Connell said, "I'm not going to be gentle to those who violate our parking laws in town."

O'Connell and Board Chairman Wade Welch had advocated increasing the fine from $1 to $5.

"I'm upset that we are raising the fees for the transfer station and the Recreation Department, while we keep the cost of a ticket down," O'Connell said. He also said he didn't think (5 was an unreasonable fine.

Welch agreed, calling town parking meters "the best bargain in the Commonwealth." The meters require one

Group Studies DPW Post

Winchester could have a new Department of Public Works director by March 1 of next year if a six-member screening committee reviewing applications and resumes meets its target date.

The committee will be trying to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of former DPW director Walter Tonaszuck, who left the post to take a similar position with the town of Lexington this fall.

Town Manager Tom Groux said the committee will probably meet on Wednesday evenings, beginning Jan. 7, to begin the screening process.

With a target date of March 1, Groux said a new DPW director will be "if not on board, perhaps identified by that time." Groux is currently serving as acting DPW director.

The six-member committee is chaired by John G. McElwee, of Longfellow road, former chairman of the town's Personnel Board. He is President of the John Hancock Insurance Company.

Other committee members include Donald E. Cullivan of Sheffield road, President and Chief Executive Officer of the International Division of Camp, Dresser and McKee Inc.and James J. Fitzgerald Jr. of Church street, of William Caci-Realtors. A former member and Chairman of the Board of Selectmen, Fitzgerald has owned and operated a construction firm in Winchester for a number of years.

Also serving on the screening committee are Thomas H. Kuhn of Pilgrim drive, John P. Larkin of Ledyard road and State Rep. Sherman "Whip" Saltmarsh of Mt. Vernon street.

Kuhn has most recently served as Director of Engineering for the Massachusetts Port Authority and was Region I Director of the Federal Aviation Administration for airport planning, design and construction.

Larkin is a former Assistant Attorney General and is currently Chairman of the Massachusetts Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission.

Saltmarsh is a former member and chairman of the Board of Selectmen, the town's representative to the General Court and a member of the House Committee on Transportation. He is the

The Tradition Survived

The 57-year tradition of caroling on the Common on Christmas Eve almost ended this year. Proposition 2.5 cuts had eliminated funding for the stringing and lighting of Christmas lights and the caroling was canceled. Temporarily, as it turned out.

Cynthia Barone, of School st., who had helped organize the annual caroling years ago, lept into the void. She contacted the pastor of the First Congregational Church, Rev. Walter B. Davis, who agreed to turn on his church lights so the caroling could take place across from the Common. She then called all the area churches, asking them to announce the caroling at Sunday services. With the churches' help and other publicity announcements, the caroling went off without a hitch. Dozens of carolers came and sang for almost an hour. And Barone also somehow managed to get it to snow for the affair.

"I'm an obstinate person," she said. "If people say somthing can't be done, I like to do it. Everyone was saying we couldn't have caroling because of Prop 2.5. I think there are a lot of things that can be done in town without any expense; I don't think we're tapping all the community-spirited talent in town."

It all worked out. Because the town couldn't supply a tree, Mahoney's Rocky Ledge agreed to donate one. Electrician Walter Stockwood agreed to donate his time and volunteers did the non-electrical work. Priscilla Miller led members of the Winchester High School Band and directed the singers. The Chamber of Commerce also pitched in to help out.

Committee To Discuss School Cuts

The School Committee will be meeting Monday night to discuss $448,000 in budget reductions at the high school designed to comply with Prop. 2.5.

It is the second of five budget meetings scheduled by the committee to discuss the $1.4 1982 budget reduction recommended by the administration two weeks ago.

School Committee Chairman Catherine Alexander said there were a number of areas slated to be "discussed philsophically."

Specifically named were the five-course cap for students, increase in teaching loads for directors from two sections to three, the elimination of coordinators, reduction in the foreign language program and elimination of the AID program.

Alexander said by implementing a five-course cap (students can now take six classes) the town would save $74,000. Should the committee find that option unacceptable Alexander said the alternative at this point would be to eliminate all the guidance counselors at McCall Junior High ($50,000), the study hall monitors ($11,000) and a custodial position at McCall ($13,000).

She added that she wasn't sure how many students took six classes now but expected to have those figures in time for Monday's meeting.

Proposed High School Cuts:

•12 Teachers •AID Program

•Five-Course Caps

In the administration's preliminary recommendations presented to the committee two weeks ago, the elimination of the coordinators for Home Economics, Business, Industrial Arts and directors of Music, Physical Education and Music, Science' English, Foreign Language, Social Studies and Mathematics was suggested. That would result in a savings of $125,000.

The language program at the high school will be looked at "in its entirety," Alexander said.

"I expect there will be lengthy discussion of how many languages we should commit ourselves to offering," Alexander said. She said there were five languages offered now, including two levels of French and Spanish. She added that the committee will also debate the merits of offering third and fourth year classes that are attended by few students.

The AID (Alternatives for Individual Development) program began during the 1978-79 school year and is geared to offer in-school alternatives to suspensions for disciplinary reasons.

The administration estimated that 12 high school teachers will be laid off because of the seven percent enrollment drop and if the five-course cap is installed. That would save $250,000.

The position of Guidance Department head, MaxEd Coordinator, 8.5 instructional aides and three clerical aides should also be cut, the administration recommended. Those reductions would save $73,500.

The meeting will start at 7:30 at Sanborn House. Future budget meetings are scheduled for Jan. 8 (the junior high and elementary school budgets), Jan. 10 (the school lunch, community use of schools and central office budgets) and Jan. 12 (high school athletics).

penny for 12 minutes worth of parking time.

However, that suggested increase drew little support from other Selectmen.

Selectman Michael Saraco, along with Alan Macdonald and John Williams said they thought such an increase would penalize shoppers in it's attempt to deal with park commuters who park their cars in the Center, leaving them all day to take a train into Boston.

"I'm not out to bleed the citizens of Winchester," Saraco explained. "I think $3 is enough. I know how easy it is to forget to put another penny in the meter."

The largest number of tickets, McHugh told the Board, come from overtime violators at meters.

He said Winchester might encounter additional problems if the MBTA shuts down train service to Woburn Jan. 1.

"Winchester will become a magnet area for Boston commuters, and if they cut out a bus line around here we'll become the main carrier for the entire area."

McHugh pointed to the cost of printing the ticket bookets and the cost of labor needed to process the tickets in asking that fines be increased.

Other fines increased by Selectmen Monday raise from $2 to $10 the charge for obstructing a private drive or roadway. McHugh had advocated an increase to $5 but that fine was further raised following a suggestion by O'Connell.

The new fines must draw approval from the State Department of Public Works and be advertised in a local newspaper before they become effective.

McHugh expects them to take effect "sometime in the late winter."

Groux said he had initially turned over 15 resumes to the committee but said he expected that number to grow with the advertising.

TALENT SHOW—Winton Club Cabaret Talent Chairman Mrs. Karl Sorger, Director Chris Brown, and Chairman Mrs. Richard W. Swanson showing off costumes for "Sea Scape" (Staff Photo By Marc McGeehan)

Club Plans Cabaret

As the old year passes, a sparkling month of January will begin with preparations for Winton Club's Cabaret, "Sea'Scape," to be presented Jan. 27-31. The official "all aboard" will sound Jan. 5 at 7 p.m. when Talent Night will be held at Winchester Town Hall.

Talent Chairmen Mrs. Joseph B. Twichell and Mrs. Karl Sorger will be on hand to welcome all the hopeful performers who come to try out for the Cabaret, and Director Chris Brown will select the dancers and singers who will appear in each number of "Sea'Scape."

Cabaret Chairman Mrs. Richard W. Swanson met recently with Chris Brown andmembers of her commmittee to put the finishing touches on "Sea'Scape" plans, lining up the song and dance numbers which will carry along the story of a cruise on the ship S.S. Winton.

Talent Night will start the actual casting for the show and is the first step in the January activities which will produce a professional quality show by the end of the month.

Since Winton Club's "reason for being" is to support the Winchester Hospital, every member of the Hospital community is especially welcome at Talent Night. Local residents always enjoy seeing familiar medical professionals performing on stage, while some of the Caberet's most talented stars for many years have been Hospital employees.

Everyone over high school age is invited to try out at Talent Night, and daners are asked to wear leotards and medium heels, while vocalists should bring their own music.

School Paper Wins Award

The Red and Black, The Winchester High School newspaper, has been awarded a Medalist ranking in the annual Columbia University Journalism Competition. The Medalist ranking is the highest award that Columbia bestows upon a high school newspaper.

Responsible for the Red and Black's national recognition as a publication of exceptional quality are all those editors and writers who have performed so commendably under the guidance of William F. Penzin, the faculty advisor of the Red and Black.

The two students who especially deserve to be praised for their exceptional ability and dedication are Louise A. Mawn, Editor-in-Chief, and Julie A. Derry, Junior Editor.

Mawn has spent countless hours organizing meetings, layout and coordinating the selling of the newspaper. She has also contributed to both the High School and Winchester community by being a member of the Winchester High School Band, the Chairman of the Student Advisory Committee and a columnist for the Woburn Daily Times.

Mawn has been ably assisted by Derry, who has quickly learned and mastered those skills that will be required for her to be a successful Editor-in-Chief beginning in March, 1980. Besides being Mawn's dependable right hand "person", Derry also serves as Co-Chairman of the Model Congress, Parliamentarian for the Student Union and a member of the high school band.

The Red and Black could never have achieved Columbia University's Medalist Ranking without the support and cooperation of the following additional editors, Lynne Melilli, Senior Layout Editor; Maureen Kennedy, News Editor; Alice Greene, Feature Editor; Mary Cresse, Girls' Sports Editor; Mark Merritt, Boys' Sports Editor; Janette Pamir and Jenny Parsignault, Co-Business Editors; Lisa Keay, Circulations Editor; and Billy Baron and Mark McGeehan, Co-Photography Editors.

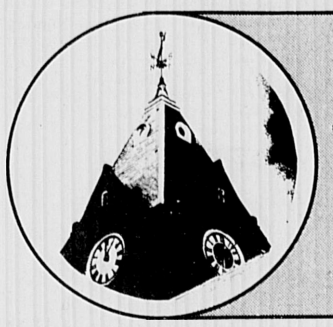

It should also be noted that many of the Red and Black's student contributors are not members of the editorial staff and that without these additional writers, the Red and Black could not be considered such a representative voice of the Winchester High School community.

Special Education

The School Committee will be sending letters to State Rep. Sherman "Whip" Saltmarsh and State Sen. Samuel Rotondi urging that they support any legislation that would provide for full funding of state mandated special education programs.

That action was taken at the committee's meeting last week in the first of five scheulded budget meetings to discuss $1.4 million that must be cut from the 1982 budget because of Prop. 2.5.

The state currently picks up 64 percent of the costs incurred by meeting the mandate of Chapter 766.

The administration recommended to the committee two weeks ago that $124,000 be eliminated from the Special Education budget as its share of the $1.4 million.

There are currently 649 students receiving various levels of assistance under 766, according to the records of Special Education Director Frank Bianco.

The elimination of two full-time special education teachers, two specialists in speech therapy, 1.2 counselors and a reduction of secretarial substitutes, summer workshops and secretarial overtime was recommended.

Carolyn Howard of Central St., urged that the committee not eliminate the speech therapy positions and suggested that if that recommendation was approved by the committee, there could be a suit filed against them.

She further suggested that the committee consider waiving transportation of 766 students as an alternative to cutting teachers. The committee said the administration would look into the "logistics" of such action.

School Closings

A three-person committee has been established and will meet Jan. 6 to begin discussions of the possibility of closing of two elementary schools or the McCall Junior High.

Business Manager Jack Fallon, Art Sarno and Martha Grenzeback were named to the Committee to Study School Closings that will work with Superintendent William MacDOnald to determine which schools will be closed.

The administration recommended to the School Committee that because of the cuts necessitated by Prop. 2.5 and the projected continuing declining enrollment, that two elementary schools or the McCall Junior High be closed. That recommendation comes on the heels of the closing of three elementary schools in June because of declining enrollment.

The closing of the junior high would save close to $220,000 while the closing of two elementary schoools would save approximately $260,000, Fallon said.

If the final recommendation is to close the elementary schools, MacDonald suggested that the committee look closely at three areas:

If the schools are closed to what schools would the students be redistricted?

What would the new transportation needs be?

What future flexibility should there be if the demand for additional space occurs in the future because of increasing enrollment?

School Committee Chairman Catherine Alexander said a decision would be made in time to present a recommendation to Spring Town Meeting.

Some helpful ideas on drinking

- Know your limit.
- Eat while you drink.
- Don't drink fast.
- Accept a drink only when you really want it.
- Cultivate taste. Choose quality rather than quantity.
- Skip a drink now and then.
- When dining out, if you must drive home, have your drinks with dinner, not afterward.

Editor's Note: The following article was submitted by James Ferrera, a Winchester resident and Regimental Recruiting Officer at The Citadel.

"Two roads diverged in a wood, and I — I took the one less traveled by, And that has made all the difference." Robert Frost

In the city of Charleston, S. C. exists The Citadel, one of the finest military colleges in the country. The Citadel was founded in 1842 and at present it is one of the last all-male military colleges. The college prides itself in the "citizen-soldier concept", because it does not require its students to pursue a military career.

However, 50 percent of most graduating classes choose to serve their country, and the remaining graduates pursue civilian occupations. All graduates reap the benefits of the strict military environment that will be to their advantage in their future careers.

The Citadel offers a liberal arts education, which most military colleges don't offer. The degree programs include: biology, business administration, chemistry, civil engineering, computer science, education, electrical engineering, english, history, mathematics, modern languages, physical education, physics, political science, and psychology.

The Citadel educators realize that academics are just part of what makes the "whole-man." The school strives to make a man who excels academically, militarily, spiritually, and physically.

Although, The Citadel is the military college of South Carolina there are 50 cadets from Massachusetts presently attending the college. From Winchester there are four cadets: Cadet Captain Jeffrey Estabrook, Regimental Athletic Officer, (Sr.), Cadet Captain James Ferrera, Regimental Recruiting Officer, (Sr.), Cadet Corporal James Campbell, (So.), Cadet Private David Guthrie, (Fr.).

The Citadel is almost a thousand miles from Winchester so I asked Cadet Ferrera and Estabrook, "why did you decide to attend The Citadel?" Cadet Ferrera - "The Citadel appeared to be the most challenging military college left in the country. I spoke to Cadet Whittle who was a freshman at The Citadel, and he agreed that the college was challenging not only academically, but physically and militarily. (Cadet Whittle later became Regimental Commander) People said that The Citadel was unchanged by time, but I wanted it to be as tough for me as it had been for the men before me." Cadet Estabrook - "There is a common bond between all Citadel cadets. This bond exists because every cadet lives, trains and studies under the same environment. It is an environment that fosters self-discipline, personal sacrifice, leadership, responsibility and professionalism.

Before attending The Citadel, I took part in the Weekend-Visitor Program. This program is designed to give the High School Senior a firsthand look at The Citadel by spending a weekend with a cadet. It didn't take me long to realize that the cadets were all part of something that I too, wanted to be part of.

As a senior, looking back at my years at The Citadel, being part of that something has made all the difference."

The Citadel has a plebe (knob) system that lasts the entire first year at the college, and has been labeled the toughest in the country. Cadet Ferrera explained that the first year at The Citadel "was something I will never forget. I left my sheltered life in Winchester and had to realize that everything in the world wasn't easy, especially as a "knob" at The Citadel. Suddenly, I was nothing with the same identity as the "knob" standing next to me. They shaved my head and took away almost everything that I had. I had to unite with my classmates to make it through the first year. It was a tough system, but it was fair. (I was never hazed) Today, as a senior I look back and appreciate everything more.

Each year I was given more responsibility and learned more about how to deal with individuals under a pressure-type environment. I feel if you can lead people under pressure then when there is no pressure, leadership becomes relatively easy.

Now, I wear the ring proudly to remind me of my Citadel experience, an experience that I will never want to forget."

The Citadel appears to be a school for the High School student who wants a sound education and a little bit more. In the words of General Mark Clark, a WWII hero: "The Citadel will go on, remaining a little oasis of honor, duty and love of God and country."

Letters From Readers

No Raise

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I may be wrong in my thinking, but I do not think it is right for congress and all our big wigs to vote themselves a raise every time they get into the mood which is every year.

They keep telling people not to ask for a raise, when the working people are just barely getting by and cannot have the necessities of life. The way of life is going down hill, and our big men who have plenty - cars, homes country clubs, expense accounts, health insurance, pensions for life — also their wives, etc. Let me know if this isn't true; if you will.

No matter how you slice it, this is not fair. Hope when they are riding in their cady's they think about this.

Isn't it true, this is what makes people uneasy?

Model Support

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

We would like to thank Mahoney's and the people of Winchester for their kind support of the Model Congress Committee at our bake sale on Dec. 21. Model Congress has existed in its present form since 1963; it started in New Rochelle, N.Y.

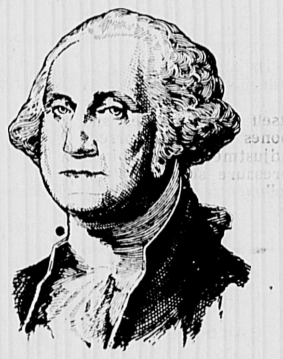

In any Model Congress High School, students take on the roles of Senators and Representatives. These Congressmen write and debate on legislation during the three day weekend at the Congress.

Winchester sent 15 delegates to Model Congress XVI in New Rochelle in March. Interest from that Congress prompted more students to attend another Congress at Fordham Prep. in the Bronx, N.Y. After both of those Congresses, we felt that we had the interest and facilities to run our own Model Congress in Winchester, the first in Eastern Massachusetts.

Since this decision, the Model Congress Committee has grown to over forty members and has received support from both the students and faculty of Winchester High. Invitations have been sent to schools as far away as Chicago for our Model Congress on April 10, 11, and 12.

This venture will cost money to run, and because of Proposition 2½, we are forced to abstain from the use of funds from the school or town government. We hope to always have your support for Model Congress.

—Notes On The Christmas Holiday—

Mixed Emotions

By DAVID A. PURDY
Crawford Memorial United Methodist Church

The days after Christmas bring a strange mixture of emotion. On the one hand, there is relief. "It's over finally," we sigh. The wrappings are picked up, the tree put out on the trash heap, the relatives packed off to the airport and the children ready to go back to school. And plenty of shopping days are left till next Christmas.

On the other hand, there is also deep down inside a sadness, a disappointment. We wake up on Dec. 26, and nothing has really changed. There are still bills to pay, the train to catch to work, the hostages are still held captive, the economy is still deteriorating. After all the hopes of all the years, Christmas has made no dramatic difference in the way the world functions.

Christmas is over, and as Peggy Lee used to sing, "Is that all there is?"

Well, yes; that's all there is — if, IF we believed that by purchasing the right present, putting enough money in the collection plate and going to midnight Mass, life would all be different. As difficult as it may be for us, Holy Scripture (and especially the Gospel readings for the days following Christmas) reminds us that Christmas Day is not the end of the story, but its beginning; not the fulfillment of all our dreams, but the inauguration of a new vision of life for us and for our world.

Howard Thurman, the renowned preacher at Boston University, once wrote:

When the song of the angel is stilled,
When the star in the sky is gone,
When the kings and the princes are home,
When the shepherds are back with their flock,
The work of Christmas begins:

To find the lost,
To heal the broken,
To feed the hungry,
To release the prisoner,
To rebuild the nations,
To bring peace among the people,
To make music in the heart.

In spite of what the post-holiday promotional advertising would have us believe, Christmas is not over, it has only just begun! And in the Church, we recognize this fact not by ending our festivities on Dec. 25, but by beginning the season of Christmas on that day and celebrating it for the next twelve days.

What a transformation there could be in the world, if we who have heard the angel's song, who have seen the star, who have stood shoulder to shoulder with the shepherds in the stable, who have experienced in our lives the birth of Messiah, if we individually and as the Church would become the embodiment in this world of Emmanuel, God with us, in the flesh, yes, in our flesh. Truly, then, the work of Christmas would begin.

Day Of Rejoicing

By JOAN E. FRIBORG
Christian Scientists

To Christian Scientists in Winchester and throughout the world, Christmas is cherished as a special opportunity to rejoice in the life of Christ Jesus. Mary Baker Eddy, the founder of the Church of Christ, Scientists, writes, "This interesting day, crowned with the history of Truth's idea, -its earthly advent and nativity,- is especially dear to the heart of Chrstian Scientists; to whom Christ's appearing in a fuller sense is so precious, and fraught with divine benedictions for mankind."

To the Christian Scientist, the birth of Jesus represents the revelation to human thought of man's spiritual origin and nature, the understanding of which brings healing today just as it did in Jesus' time. Cultivation of this "fuller sense" of Christ's appearing is the purpose of each Church of Christ, Scientist, and the focus of all church activities year-round.

Yet during the Christmas season, special attention is given to accounts of the Master's birth and ministry. Bible Lesson-Sermons, Sunday and Wednesday church services, and Sunday School all provide opportunities to study and explore these events and to seek deeper insights into their meaning for mankind today. Church music reflects the special beauty of the season, and Christian Scientists share their joy with family and friends.

But the observance of Christmas is more a matter of thought than of holding special events. The Church seeks to provide an atmosphere for quiet realization of the ever-presence and power of the healing Christ in order that, in the words of a Bible verse from the Lesson-Sermon for Christmas week, the church members "may be able to comfort them which are in any trouble, by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God."

Crib And Cross

By JOHN J. BISHOP, RECTOR
Parish of the Epiphany

Some years ago now, I was enjoying some free time in the city, shopping in Boston right before Christmas. Walking down Park Street from Beacon Hill, I was attracted by a simple display in a store window. There was a wooden manger set by several bales of hay. Nothing more. I joined other curious folk who were passing by and walked closer to the window to see how the baby was going to be represented in this case. Lying on the straw in the manger was a simple wooden cross. I remember my surprise. In Christian faith, those two symbls, the simple wooden manger filled with straw and the simple wooden cross, signal the true meaning of Christmas. The two go together.

I come back often to what happened to me that day, walking down Park Street. Christmas always has been a glorious time of the year for me. My parents took care in preserving some of the old traditions they knew as children. So today, the smells and the tastes of this season include those associated with German baking, the lebkuchen and the springerle. As children, we never saw the Christmas tree until early on Christmas Day (Ol' Saint Nick had to spend a lot of time with us). Then, as we grew older, we were caught up in the life of our parish church. It still is known as "The Chrismtas Church." We had a pastor-rector who gave so much of himself to all of us. The glorious music, pageantry defying description in the solemnity of the old English "Boar's Head Festival," the gathering of the rich and poor alike — all kinds of folk that you just liked to be with sharing something special with them-all these are memories I cherish and are things that always are going to be a part of me and who I am. Most of us who celebrate the Festival Day can point to personal experiences that provide the content for good memories.

But this is not all. This cannot be all or we would reduce our faith commitment to something that is maudlin at b3st. We praise a baby in the manger. Indeed, we do — the gift of life, He is Emmanuel, God with us. He is God becoming like one of us. He is God involving the divine life with the human life, showing us and telling us what it is all about. He is God, accepting us, each of us, as we are and inviting each of us to accept Him. That is at the heart of the Christmas story. That is what the wooden manger filled with straw is all about. We also praise the cross in the manger. The gift of eternal life, God with us forever, God allowing nothing to stand in the way of the love and the gift of life He has given us.

So this is a time of the year that finds me giving thanks to God for both the Crib and the Cross. "May He who in the Word made flesh joined heaven to earth and earth to heaven, grant you his peace and his favor!"

66 Employees Give Blood At Drive At Local Hospital

Responding to the Christmas tree blood drive appeal, 66 employees and members of the medical-dental staff of Winchester Hospital volunteered to donate blood Thursday, Dec. 18, at the hospital.

A total of 57 pints were drawn from those who presented themselves.

Each blood donor received a red satin Christmas ball ornament to hang on the Christmas tree in the main lobby of the hospital. The Red Cross set up three cots behind screens in the lobby and drew blood from 7 a.m. to 1 p.m.

A young accident victim who was recently rushed to Winchester Hospital required 52 pints of blood to save her life. This near-tragedy served as an incentive for many employees and staff members to donate blood, as well as the desire to give a worthwhile gift during the holiday season.

Jack Hunter, president of the hospital, said, "The decorated tree is a visual symbol of the caring that Winchester Hospital personnel express, not just during a blood drive, but all year 'round." Hunter was among those who donated blood last Thursday.

According to Red Cross statistics, blood supplies are at their lowest during the winter holidays, and again during the summer months.

High in South Tyrol, there is a valley which provides glorious skiing but is known only to very few people. It is called Val Senales. Up over the hills lies Schnalstal, Austria. Munich and Milan provide getaway cities for this cross-country and alpine skiing paradise. Skiing, in fact, only came to Val Senales as recently as 1975, yet it attracts the racing world's elite. Stemark trained there the first year that he won the World Cup. Summer and fall also find world class cross-country teams training on its 30 KM track. In season, tourists will find glorious powder at this relatively undiscovered resort.

Girls Crush Wakefield

In their first meet of the season the Sachemette tracksters rallied with a thrilling fraction-of-a-second victory in the final event to tie Belmont. Last Saturday the girls trounced Wakefield for its first win.

However, despite escaping a loss against Belmont and the impressive performance last week, Coach Tom Kline is concerned. And the reason for that concern is the team's lack of depth which has been further diminished by illness.

"We're still shuffling people around to get some more depth," Kline said as his team prepared for yesterday's meet with Burlington (after The Star's deadline). "We need a sprinter, someone in the high jump and more help in the 300," he explained.

But against Wakefield, depth was hardly the problem as the Sachemettes ran out to an early lead and were never threatened, winning 53-33.

Senior Prudy Horne won for the second consecutive time in the hurdles with Lynda Mooney grabbing a third place finish.

The Sachemettes strolled to a one-two finish in the dash as Missy Meade and Barbara O'Leary (a first time runner) breezed.

Winchester "slipped" in the 600 as Andrea deMars took second followed by freshman Barbara Ahearn. But if the same race was held tomorrow, Kline is convinced the outcome would be different.

"Andrea was really sick and if I'd known that I would not have run her. But she's the type of girl that won't say a thing. She's an outstanding runner and a great competitor," Kline said. "The winning time was 1:40 and Andrea has run 1:35, 1:36 plenty of times. If she was feeling well she would have won easily."

In the 300 Winchester's Susan Vernelli was very healthy and aptured an easy victory.

In the 1000 senior Mary Boland and freshman Laura Weylman finished a strong one-two. Kline was excited about Weylman's 3:01 time, just one second behind Boland. "That's an outstanding time for a girl who's a first year runner," he said of the promising freshman.

Wakefield prospered in the high jump as Meade was the only Winchester athlete to finish in the top three as she grabbed third place.

The rest of the meet was gravy for the Sachemettes as they captured firsts in every event.

Kathy Durante and Joanne Burke finished one-two in the shot. Eileen Conley won the mile in 5:57, a time that pleased Kline. "That's a good mile considering that's not really her event," he said of Conley who usually runs the 1000.

Freshman Laurie Glynn kept the beat going, winning her second consecutive race with a time of 11:30. Sophomore Maria Doocey grabbed third place.

Finally, the relay team of Weylman, Horne, Conley and Boland ho-hummed their way to a 4:33, first place finish.

The Sachemettes didn't have as much success against Belmont, but thanks to a photo-finish win in the relay, Winchester managed to avoid the loss, finishing in a 43-all deadlock.

"That wasn't so much of an upset. But we lacked the depth that we needed to win it," Kline said.

The final event, the relay, set up the thrilling finish and a great showdown between Winchester's deMars and Belmont's Sue Trevithick. deMars managed to hold off Trevithick, who had roared from about 30 yards behind, by about half a step to capture first place and give the Sachemettes a tie.

Depth Helps Sachems To Two Straight Wins

Boys Track Coach Tom Kline didn't think his team would be world beaters, although he was sure they wouldn't be an embarrassment either.

But even he has to admit he's surprised with the performance of his club that has rolled to a pair of impressive wins to open the season. Saturday the Sachems trounced Belmont, 60-26.

"The boys have done really well," Kline said after Saturday's victory. "The boys have a lot of depth. But I am surprised we've done so well because I thought the league would be a lot tougher. We've had a lot of juniors that are really coming on. Our goal is to have each kid improve on his performances. They're doing that."

And much more. Saturday against the Marauders it was absolutely no contest as the Sachems captured eight first places, four one-two finishes and a sweep in the high jump. It was a pleasurable afternoon, to put it mildly.

"We didn't expect it to be that easy," Kline insisted. "They have some good sprinters but a few kids were out. But I didn't expect it to be like that."

Wayne Ciarcia had to "settle" for just a second in the hurdles and Belmont grabbed another first place in the dash followed by Bob Mueller and Bill Macmillan. Belmont took its final win in the 300, sneaking in ahead of John Alcione and Kevin Sargent.

But after that it was Winchester's afternoon. Ken Jacobsen (1:18) and Al Chen (1:20) took first and second in the 600. Mark Merritt finished first in the 1000 with a 2:33.9 in his first run of the year.

'The boys have done really well... But I am surprised we've done so well because I thought the league would be a lot tougher.'
—Coach Tom Kline

The Sachems enjoyed their finest hour in the high jump as Brian Donnellan, Joe Waite and John Wiseman finished 1-2-3.

The romp continued in the shot with Paul Manganaro and Jeff Lavey taking first and second. Manganaro's throw of 49 feet, 11 inches was the league high for the season heading into yesterday's meet against Wakefield (after The Star deadline).

Pat Kennedy's 4:50 mile was the best and Joe Callahan followed him in second place. It was another one-two finish in the two-mile as Peter Quine and John Provenzano breezed for the Sachems.

The relay team of Alcione, Chen, Merritt and Jacobsen ran a 3:45, a time Kline said the quartet can inprove on, but it was still enough to win Saturday.

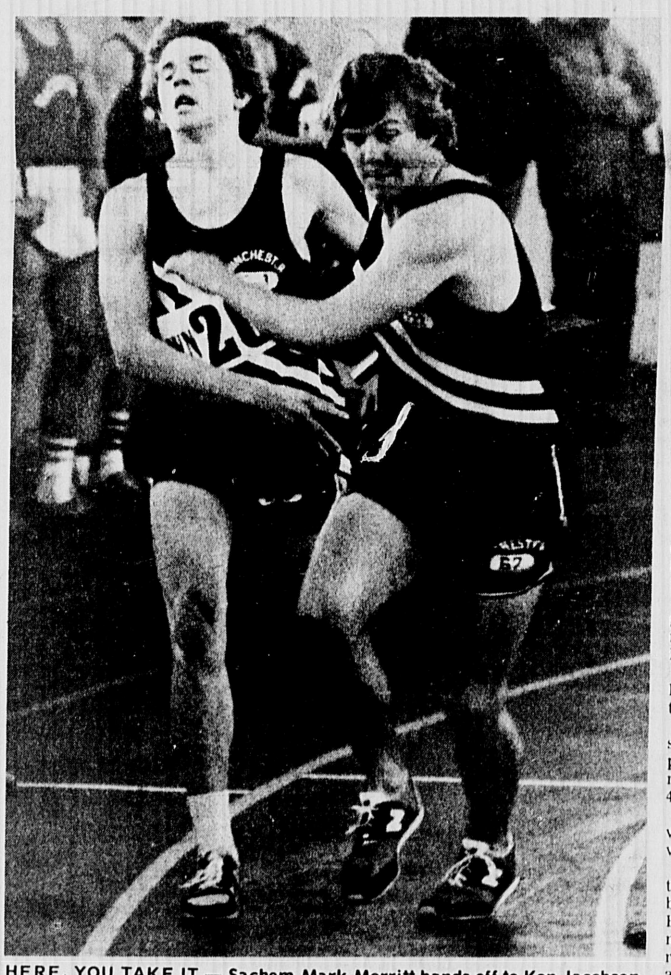

Perusing the list of league-highs so far this season, Kline read off names of Winchester kids in just about every event.

"In a lot of events we've got two people in the top six or seven. That's a lot of depth. It's a pretty good indication of why we're doing so well," he said.

It was more of the same in the season opener against Lexington as the Sachems coasted to another easy victory.

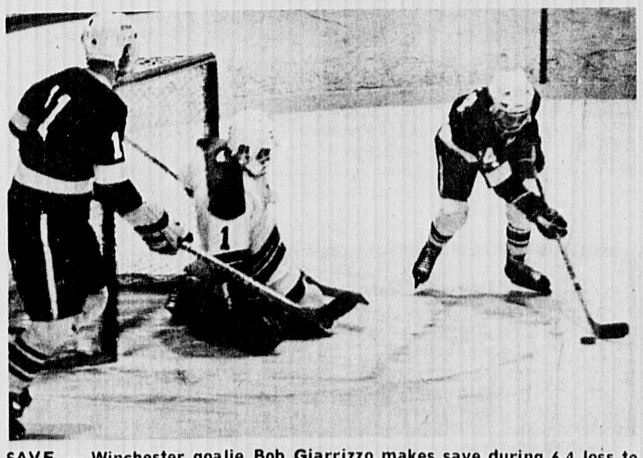

Winchester took 1-2-3 in the shot behind Manganaro, Lavey and sophomore Tom Porell. "We certainly didn't expect to do that," Kline admitted.

Mueller and MacMillan finished one-two in the dash, Jacobsen took first in the 600, Alcione first in the 300 and Donnellan first in the high jump.

Winchester hockey Coach Mike Houghton had only two words to describe his team's effort against Belmont last week and they weren't "nice game."

"To sum it up in two words, we stunk," Houghton said after Belmont had finished off a 6-4 victory Saturday. "It was probably the worst game we've played all year. They beat us to the puck. In the first period I thought we outplayed them. Then we got ahead 2-1 and we stopped skating. We've got to learn to play three periods of hockey, not two," he concluded.

One third of the way into the second period things were looking up for the Sachems. They broke a 1-1 deadlock when Belmont captain defensemen Steve Nally mistakenly put in the rebound of a Tony Celli slap shot into his own net.

That was the pivotal point of the game, but not the way one might think. Belmont took over right after the subsequent face-off and domianated the Sachems (1-2) the rest of the period, scoring four straight times past a beleagured Bob Giarrizzo.

The Marauders' Bob Goodwin scored his second of the game at 9:19 to tie it when he finished off a nice three on two rush. He fired off a 10-footer in the slot that Giarrizzo stopped but the rebound came right back to Goodwin and he didn't miss this time.

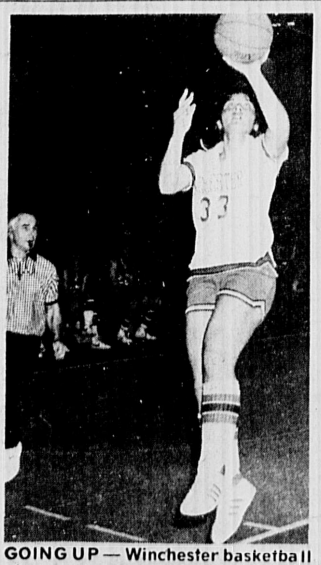

Paul Shea made it 3-2 just 41 seconds later when he broke down the left side, skated in front of Giarrizzo and stuffed a backhander under the pads.

At 10:57 Belmont upped it to to 4-2 when Bill O'Brien took the puck off the boards behind the net, skated in front and tucked another backhander inside the near post.

Jeff Stackpole was sitting out a minute and a half for elbowing when the Marauders' Nally made it 5-2 with a blast along the ice to the stick side corner.

The Sachems Ian Doneghey cut the deficit to a pair when he rifled a semi-slap shot from about 15 feet in front but there would be no miracle comeback like

Sachemette Hoopsters Drop Pair

Aggressiveness, experience and soirit. Any coach knows how important all three components are in producing a winning team. And so, now, do the Sachemettes and they found it out the hard way.

The girls dropped two straight games last week, a 49-35 loss to Burlington and a 53-36 loss to Woburn. But despite sinking only 15 of 54 shots against Woburn, the Sachemettes "haven't given up the ship," Coach Donna Tanner said.

"We realize what we've done wrong and what we must do and we're prepared to do it," she said. "We had a three-hour practice today (Monday) and they really worked. The problem is we're depending on three players and we have to depend the previous week against Watertown. The Sachems were whipped.

And that it made it all the more frustrating for Houghton and his charges because Belmont was a team they figured to beat.

"That's a team that was there for us. If it was a well played game, end to end, that's one thing. But when it's a series of blatant mistakes... We played a pretty good first period and did all right in the third period. But the second period after we got that goal (to go ahead 2-1) we stopped skating. They've got to learn you can't turn it on and turn it off. We're not a light switch," Houghton said.

The teams exchanged a pair of goals late in the third period, Tim Leonard putting Belmont up 6-3 at 12:17 and Winchester's Paul White answering that at 13:59 to finish off the scoring.

Earlier in the week against powerful Lexington, Winchester played their "best period of hockey since I've (Houghton) been here," and left the ice after 15 minutes trailing 2-1.

Doug Ross had tallied a shorthanded goal to get the Sachems rolling but the second period saw the visitors rack up four consecutive penalties and the hosts took advantage of every one of them enroute to a 7-1 triumph.

"We got something like four penalties in a row but they were from overenthusiasm. They weren't stupid penalties," Houghton said. "Lexington has an excellent power play, man for man. The next thing we now know, bang, bang, bang and it's 5-1, 6-1. They got five power play goals."

After playing Reading yesterday (after The Star deadline) the schedule does not cooperate very much with the Sachems. Winchester will be facing, in succession, Melrose, Stoneham, Wakefield, Burlington and Woburn.

Ouch.

Cagers Drop 2 More

Neither of Winchester's basketball opponents displayed that usual Christmas spirit of giving last week as the Sachems dropped their third and fourth consecutive losses to Burlington and Gloucester.

The Gloucester defeat Saturday was the second time in four games the Fisherman had an easy time with the Sachems, this time defeating them 62-36. Gloucester topped Winchester in the season opener, 61-42.

In the opener Winchester had trouble staying with the husky Gloucester team under the boards and Saturday's rematch was more of the same. And with Kevin Thomas, Blair Bradley and Ervin Beeman home in New York for the holidays, the task was made even more difficult for the Sachems.

Those three are part of the program, A Better Chance, that allows kids from out of state to attend high school in Winchester.

Sophomore Steve MacDonald continued his strong play for the Sachems, leading the way with 17 points. John Myers added nine points, Chip Triglione six and Keith McCarthy and John Shirley two each to round out the scoring for Winchester.

Ten players for Gloucester got on the scorecard led by Chris Good (14 points) and Jim Shatford (10).

The Sachems were down by 16 after the first half and never really threatened after that.

Winchester was just plain overmatched against Burlington despite the presence of Thomas, Bradley and Beeman. They fell, 74-38 and were never really in the game after the hosts raced out to a 14-0 lead.

Burlington, which lost its first game to Lexington later in the week, led overwhelmingly at each of the checkpoints. They led 17-4 at the end of the first quarter, 41-18 at the half and 56-26 after three.

Pats Are Winners

Although the New England Patriots didn't make the play-offs, the team scored big for the Boys' Clubs of Boston.

The Patriots tallied 545 points, winning $54,500 for the Boys' Clubs of Boston. This is $4,200 more than the previous season when the Patriots scored 503 points for $50,300 for the organization.

Every time the Patriots scored a point it meant $100 for the Boys' Clubs. This was the fifth season that this unusual community project to assist youngsters was sponsored by Frito-Lay, maker of Lay's brand potato chips and Fritos brand corn chips, in conjunction with the Patriots.

So, in retrospect, it was a good season for the Boys' Clubs of Boston, according to Philip Thomas, Frito-Lay Division Sales Manager.

Gymnasts Fall To Burlington

Winchester girls' gymnastics Coach Pam Rufo had predicted before the season that Burlington would be one of the stronger teams in the league, as usual.

And after receiving a 96.55-84.1 beating at the hands of Burlington last week Rufo isn't about to retract that prediction. The Sachemettes were handled easily.

"They really pretty much dominated the meet," Rufo said simply afterwards.

The only first place finish for the visitors was by Co-Captain Carla Gulino who received a 6.5 in the floor event. She also performed well in the all arounds along with the other co-captain, Hayley Greenberg.

The schedule doesn't get any easier for the Sachemettes. Winchester traveled to Belmont yesterday (after The Star deadline) and face Wakefield Jan. 6.

Along with Burlington, Rufo guessed that those two clubs will be fighting it out for the league title. Hopefully Those predictions will not be quite so accurate as the first one.

The Burlington loss dropped the Sachemette's record to 1-2 heading into yesterday's Belmont contest.

★Basketball

on five or six... the whole bench. I need people to replace those three."

The trio Tanner has lived by so far are sophomore Maria Montuori, junior Martha Doherty and senior Joanne Maloney.

Montuori has been an aggressive sharp-shooting surprise in just her first year of high school basketball. That presents just one problem, complains Tanner.

"We depend on Maria too much. Way too much. We really got stuck Saturday when both Maria and Joanne (Maloney) fouled out," Tanner said.

Both players had accumulated four fouls by the second quarter of the Woburn game forcing both of them to the bench much earlier than Tanner would have liked. She had to put them in early in the third quarter when Woburn started wearing down the reserves and both fouled out at the end of the quarter.

"We've had real problems with fouling Joanne out," Tanner moaned. "She just can't foul out anymore. We need her too badly. She has been a real catalyst on the team. She gets the other players psyched and creates spirit. She has the highest record of steals on the team but also a total of 13 fouls already. We've got to be able to count on her," she said.

But Tanner couldn't find any problems with forward Doherty who is shooting 50 percent from the floor and 60 percent from the line, both of which are much higher than anyone else on the team.

"She gives 100 percent all the time. She is our best and most consistent player. I expected a lot from Martha but her play has been a pleasant surprise," Tanner said.

Doherty is one of the few returnees from last year and that's one of the problems, Tanner said. Experience.

"We are just worn down by aggressive teams. We are intimidated. I just don't think we have enough experience. We've been working on being more aggressive at practice but we really need the games to give us more chances to play," Tanner explained.

Tanner has been shuttling a lot of playe rs from the junior varsity team up to the varsity and one of the more pleasant surprises against Woburn was the play of freshman Kristin McNamara. "She did a super job. She was my one bright spot Saturday," Tanner said.

PeeWee AA's Wipe Out Malden

"Movin Marc" Todisco and "Pistol Pete" Cote were the big guns Saturday as the Winchester Pee Wee AA's upended Malden 8-2. Todisco with two goals and two assists along with Cote and his one goal and three assists were the difference as the two linemates really broke loose.

Captain Brian Griffin playing well did not wait long when 30 seconds into the game he slapped one in from heavy going in front with Mike White and Pete Regan assisting. Cote kept the heat on when he set up at the right post at the right time and zinged home a burner in the lower corner with Griffin and Todisco setting him up.

Todisco closed out the first period scoring when he found the range from the left slot and uncorked a high shortside blast after a break in

Todisco liked the taste and came right back with number two to open the second period attack as he pulled the trigger from the left slot into the lower left corner with Greg Winn and Cote the springers. Regan wrapped up the second period points when he blew down the slot and blasted one home

Scott "The Shot" Paine playing real solid defense did it early in the third period when he moved in over the blue line and teed up a 20-footer in front for goal number six.

Jim Chute looking strong in goal and Nick Geannaris started this score from the deep end.

Wrestlers Stun Newton

Wrestling Coach Larry Tremblay said he couldn't promise any miracles before the season began. But after beating perennial state powerhouse Newton North last week, 32-31, he admitted the future looked pretty rosy.

"It's the first miracle we've pulled off," he laughed afterwards. "Now I just hope we can get some more. But that was the greatest win in my two years of coaching. And the kids are really excited about it. They're believing in themselves and in the program now," Tremblay said.

The victory evened the Sachems record at 2-2.

Winchester dropped a 39-19 decision to Concord-Carlisle in the tri-match but Tremblay wasn't too concerned about that. He had been gunning for Newton North and he got them.

Ed Welch had a big day, pinning both his opponents in the 100 pound class. Lee Fotsch added a pair of decision wins at 121 but what really got Winchester moving against Newton North was a pin by Scott Carzo at 128 pounds.

"That was a good win. It was a big pin that seemed to turn things around for us," Tremblay said.

Ed McKenna followed that with a tight 7-6 win at 147 pounds. "That was a real gutsy performance," Tremblay said of his senior grappler. "Plus, I think I intimidated the ref a little bit. He was a young guy and we'd go back and forth. He'd call it, then I'd call it," Tremblay laughed.

Gary Errico added a pin at 169 and Jim Barger clinched it with a pin at 187. "We needed a pin (from Barger) to win and he got it," Tremblay said.

But two Sachems who made major contributions in losing efforts were Scott Rapallo (114) and Chris Dobbins (157). Although both lost superior decisions, they saved the victory by not getting pinned and Tremblay was quick to laud their performances.

"That was an excellent job by those kids by having the guts to stay off their backs and not get pinned. If they'd been pinned we'd have lost," Tremblay said, explaining tht Newton North would have got 16 points for a pin instead of the five they received for a decision.

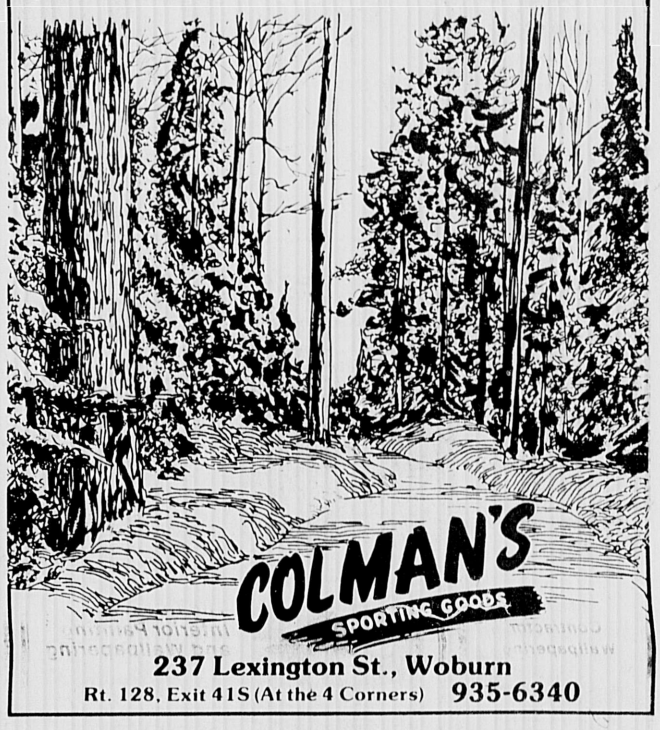

Tremblay also cited a group of wrestlers who performed well on the junior varsity squad. He said Jeff Ewing, Eric Paskerian, Steve Cullen and Tony DeGregorio all wrestled well in the tri-meet.

BORROWING POWER

Many homeowners borrow against their property when they need large amounts of cash to make major improvements, pay college costs, handle emergencies, make a down payment on a second home or on some investment property. The two major borrowing routes are refinancing and second mortgages.

If the rate on your present mortgage is less than the current interest rates, financing can be costly. On the other hand, rates and monthly payments on long-term financing are lower than short-term credit. Even if the total amount you pay in interest is greater, monthly payments on a long-term loan may fit your present financial needs best.

You might also obtain a sizeable amount of money on a short-term basis in the form of a second mortgage or a personal loan. Both are based largely on the strength of your financial position as a property owner. However, second mortgages are more costly because the risk is higher for the lender and generally last for about five years in length.

In all your real estate needs — buying — selling & rentals — appraisals — consultation — please phone or drop in at:

Teapot Tourney

It's almost face-off time again for four ECAC Division II rivals as the second annual Teapot Tournament approaches.

Sponsored by Busch Beer, the contests will take place in the Boston Garden on Jan. 5 and 11. Vying for the TEAPOT trophy will be Bowdoin, Merrimack and Salem State colleges and the University of Lowell.

Competition for this year's Teapot title will begin where last year's left off. The first game starting at 6:15 p.m., will be a rematch of last year's final, with the Vikings of Salem State trying to avenge their loss to the Bowdoin Polar Bears. That game will be followed, at 9 p.m., with the traditional rivalry between the Merrimack Warriors and the Lowell Chiefs.

The winners of the first round games will battle in the TEAPOT final at 9 p.m. on Sunday, Jan. 11. The championship game will be preceded at 6:15 p.m. with the conso ation match.

The tournament, designed last year to showcase the talent that abounds in Division II, was very well received for a first time effort. Due, in part, to the tremendous hockey fans in the Boston area and great individual school support, the inaugural Teapot outdrew the first Beanpot (29 years ago) by a substantial margin.

All four teams are doing exceptionally well this year despite losing several key players to graduation. The combined record of the squads is 19 - 4 in division play.

Tickets are $5.00, $4.00 and $3.00 and are available at the Garden box office.

Hockey Players Go On Major League Road Trip

By RICHARD McSWEENEY

There were the typical complaints of any team that has had a a tough time on the road. You've heard them all before; tired because of the traveling, victimized by the refs, the dirty play of the other guys and crummy food from the hosts.

"They put us against the team in Leningrad. We lost the games something like 17-0. Yeah, it was 17-0. Boy, that first game we really got shelled"' Masiello said.

But both boys felt there were devious, typical Communist tactics involved.

"We were real tired," Masiello continued. "There was real jet lag and then a lot of kids got sick on the food. It was really awful. It was reindeer."

"For the rest of the trip everyone survived on bread and Pepsi," Boyle laughed.

But Rivers - sporting their Olympic

Papas Requests Salary Freeze

By RICHARD McSWEENEY

School Committee member Constance Papas says her suggestion for teachers to forego their salary increases next year is a great opportunity for the teachers to gain a great public relations victory statewide.

But Winchester Education Association (WEA) President Steve Gorrie says it simply means the teachers would be subsidizing the education of Winchester students.

Papas says the teachers have a choice — money or their jobs.

But, again, Gorrie says a decision to sacrifice the pay raises, which would be about $2,000. per teacher, would be "devastating to morale."

Papas says she hopes the WEA decides to delay the increase for one year but doesn't think they will.

And Gorrie says she is absolutely right. They won't.

The debate is sure to continue following Papas' suggestion at Monday's meeting that the teachers, in an attempt to save jobs and maintain the present quality of education in Winchester, allow a freeze to be put on all salary raises for next year. The freeze would save a minimum of $400,000 and a projected 18 - 20 teaching jobs.

The School Committee is debating where close to $1.4 million can be cut from next year's budget to comply with Proposition 2.5. The administration has recommended the elimination of at least 20 fulltime teachers and many more specialists and aides to meet the goal.

Papas emphasized that the freeze should be system-wide, from the teachers to the principals to the administration. The principals are in the midst of negotiations for next year's contract now and the School Committee has yet to decide on pay hikes for the administration next year, Papas said.

After listening to proposed cuts in high school personnel and programs for over an hour Monday night, Papas made her pitch.

"There is another option. We have agreed to the bargain in good faith and we intend to honor it," Papas said. "But it is a viable option. I tell you, the public employees of Winchester, that you have a choice. You can either have your salary increase or you can save positions. If someone asked me to give up $2,000 of my salary I'd have to think long and hard about it," she admitted.

"But I would invite you to think about it and I would invite you to sit down with the School Committee," and seriously consider the option, she concluded.

The WEA signed an agreement with the committee almost a month into this school year which provided for raises of 7.25 percent each year. The pact hiked the average salary of the teachers next year from $22,000 to $24,000.

"I'm sure I won't be the most popular person in Winchester. But I really feel strongly about it," Papas told The Star afterwards. "People profit in the good times and have to suffer a little in the bad."

She added that the amount of money the committee has to cut from the budget dwarfs the "nicklel and diming" approach it is currently applying.

"When you are looking for that kind of money ($1.4 million) then you've got to get big chunks of it. This nickel and diming is really hurting the educational system," Papas insisted.

Papas admitted she wasn't especially optimistic that the WEA would take her up on her offer.

"I would like to believe that they would but I don't think so," she said. "What they would gain in public relations, what they would gain across the state for what they did for education in Winchester would far outweigh any $2,000 they'll get. I mean, what's $2,000? About $50 a week?"

5-Course Cap Plan Rejected

The School Committee and the administration overwhelmingly decided against implementing a five-course cap at Winchester High School.

However, as an alternative to the $74,000 savings the cap would offer, Superintendent William MacDonald recommended the elimination of the entire guidance department and one custodian at McCall Junior High.

The Monday meeting to discuss the high school budget, the second of five meetings scheduled to debate the proposed $1.4 million cut in next year's budget because of Prop. 2.5, was greeted by an overflow crowd at the Sanborn House.

The lengthy four-hour session was punctured by bursts of applause as people argued in favor of programs and personnel that had been included in the proposed cuts.

Along with the five-course cap the committee heard arguments to salvage various other people and positions. Those included:

— The elimination of coordinators for Business, Industrial Arts, Home Economics and directors of Art, Music and Physical Education. Directors of Math, English, Science, Social Studies and Foreign Language would increase their teaching load from two sections to three.

- Elimination of the positions of Guidance Department head and Max-Ed coordinator.

- Elimination of 12 teaching positions with 3.51 of those positions coming through declining enrollment.

Bus Service Over But The Calls Keep Coming

By STEVEN AUSTIN

Ken Cereghino's phone at the Recreation Department was still ringing Tuesday.

Some people wanted to know where to wait for the mini-bus.

Cereghino had to tell them that the mini-bus was no more.

Town Meeting voted Dec. 4 to make cuts totalling $717,000 in town and school budgets in order to comply with the provisions of Proposition 2.5. Among those cuts was the elimination of mini-bus service in Winchester.

"Since the decision to eliminate the mini-bus Dec. 4," Cereghino said, "we've had quite a number of calls. People have expressed concern and dismay over the closing."

The mini-bus made its last run Dec. 31. The three buses, a contracted service from the Medford-based Transportation Management Company, are now back with their owners.

"I had a call today from someone who wanted to know where the bus was stopping," Cereghino told The Star Tuesday.

Currently, he said, there are no plans to provide alternative transportation that Cereghino is aware of.

"We haven't been given any directive to make any contingency plans," Cereghino said. "No funding mechanisim exists to do this."

Marcia Bentley, former Mini-Bus Coordinator whose job was eliminated when bus service was, told The Star in an earlier interview that ridership on the bus had dropped from 300 to 250 passengers a day since the Dec. 4 announcement of elimination was made. Revenues, she said, also dropped on a corresponding basis, from an average of $100 a day to from $85-$90 a day.

While the bus drew riders from a variety of age groups, the elderly were probablly hit hardest by the elimination of bus service. Elderly passengers composed about 20 percent of the bus' ridership.

At a Selectmen's meeting Monday, Shelley Ober, new Program Administrator at the Jenks Senior Center said transportation for the elderly was an area of need in town.

"There's a very great need for it," Ober told the Board. "We've had some calls."

Selectman Chairman Wade Welch agreed, saying he was interested in alternative forms of transportation for seniors.

He suggested that Ober meet with Cereghino and Town Manager Tom Groux to discuss alternative transportation.

However, Selectman Edward F. O'Connell was not optimistic.

"There's no money," O'Connell told the Board. "We'll have to get the money from outside (sources)."

The battle over the mini-bus has been a heated one with Mini-Bus Advisory Committee Chairman Gary Watros charging the bus system was the victim of confusion and political pressures to make substantial, visible cuts in the budget in the face of Proposition 2.5.

Watros said in an interview with The Star published a week after Town Meeting voted to eliminate the service that the chances of regaining the service at a latter date were virtually nil.

He also said that the listed $105,000 saving due to the elimination of bus

Drum Theft Affects Concert Plans At WHS

The theft of band equipment from Winchester High School Dec. 30 has left high school musicians in something of a bind.

With the annual Winter Concert coming up Jan. 28, Band Director Priscilla Miller said the band would "have to do the best we can."

Valued at approximately $1,000, the stolen equipment includes two cymbals valued at $150, a pedal bass drum valued at $80, a cymbal stand with cymbal valued at $200, a snare drum valued at $250 and three other drums valued at $250.

The stolen instruments were used in the high school's Jazz Band. Miller said the musician who plays the instruments would be able to substitute personal equipment for most of the stolen pieces.

Police are unsure of the method of entry in the incident. The items were taken from the school's band room.

Draft Goes Smoothly

Registration for the draft is going smoothly at the Winchester Post Office, according to Post Master Daniel Moynihan.

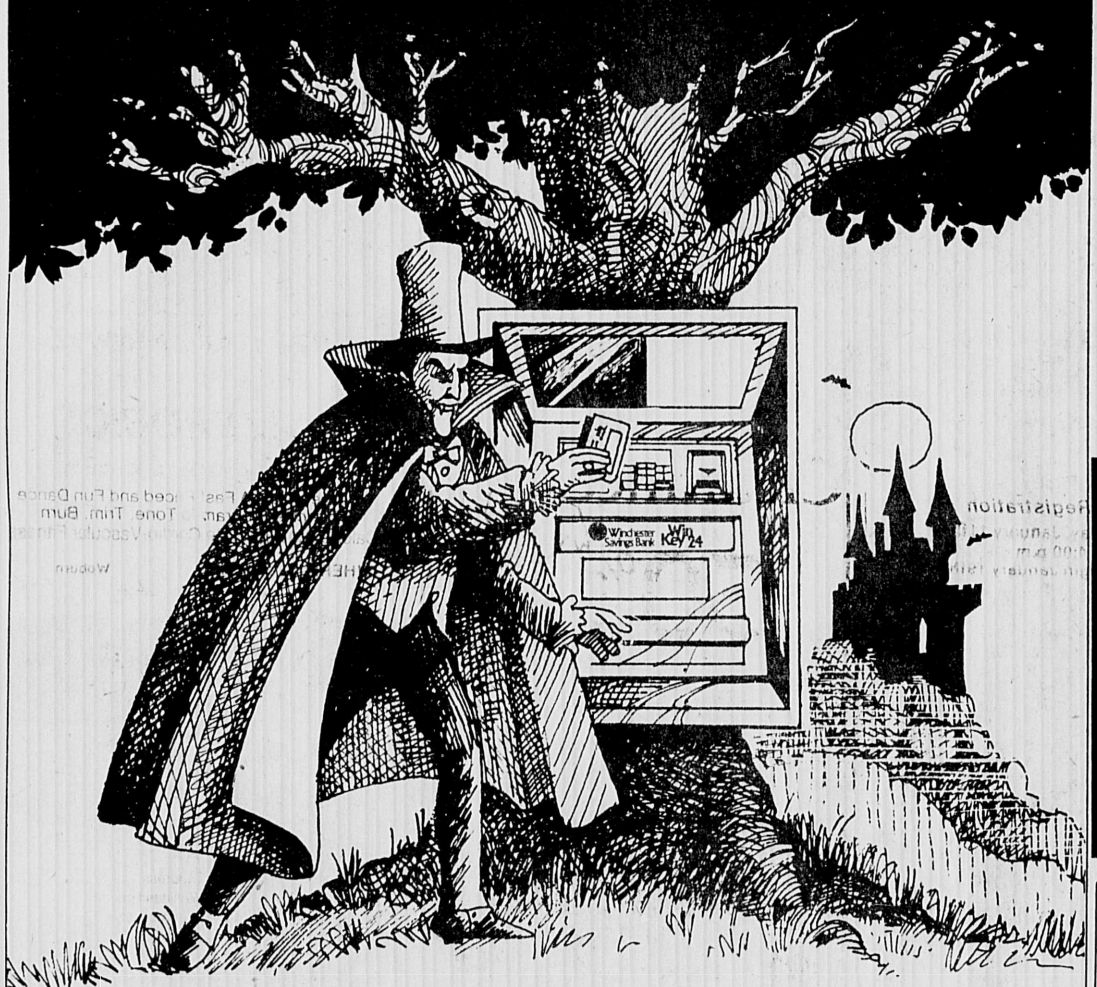

"Things have been going fine," Moynihan told The Star Wednesday. "We haven't had any problems and we don't anticipate any."

As of noon Wednesday, 60 young men had visited the Post Office and filled out draft registration forms. Young men born in 1962 will be registering through the end of the week, Moynihan said.

The schedule for registration had those born in January turough March registering Monday while those born from April through June registered Tuesday. Those born from July through September registered Wednesday while those born from October through December will fill out registration forms today.

Young men born in 1963 are required to register within thirty days after their birthday.

- Elimination of the AID program.
- Elimination of the second level of French (Grades 9-12 as opposed to the first level, 7-12 section) and total phase-out of German.

The possibility of the five course cap was disposed of surprisingly quickly. MacDonald urged that the committee no longer consider the idea of implementing the five-course cap, saying the money would simply have to be found elsewhere.

High School Principal Vincent Larocco said that 78 percent of the ninth graders took a sixth course, 71 percent of the 10th graders, 52 percent of the 11th graders and 27 percent of the seniors. All students are required to take a minimum of five courses.

The five-course cap would have eliminated 3.7 teaching positions .

School Committee member Roger Bauman urged that the committee and administration take a closer a look at other potential high school cuts before dipping into the junior high school to make up the $74,000. (The junior high and elementary school budgets will be discussed at tonight's meeting starting at 7:30 o.m.)

The most fervent and emotional discussion was saved for reductions in the foreign language program and the elimination of Guidance head Anthony DiBiase.

Larocco said after considering various alternatives which included elimination of the seventh and eighth grade language programs and consolidation of third and fourth year classes, he decided to recommend that the second level French and entire German program be eliminated.

"By doing it this way we would not be depriving them of a language, just depriving them of a certain choice of a language. That's a major distinction," Larocco said.

After scores of students and teachers rose in support of the German program the committee urged that people send letters to Larocco with other alternatives and suggestions and those would then be passed onto the committee for consideration.

Both Larocco and MacDonald said they were very reluctant to recommend the elimination of DiBiase as Guidance head but said economics forced the decision.

The elimination of a guidance head will save $11,000. DiBiase's time is split between 60 percent actual counseling and 40 percent as department head.

If the recommendation is approved DiBiase would remain as a full time counselor but would also be in the same categories as other counselors and teachers who are eligible to be laid off because of declining enrollment.

School Committee member Mary Jean Weylman expressed concern over complaints she had heard about the guidance department in general and asked if there might be better ways of organizing the department.

DiBiase, whose work as department head was highly acclaimed by several members of the audience, said he was unaware of any complaints about the department.

"If there were complaints they were never brought to my attention because I'm the type of guy that would have done something to correct them," he insisted. "Historically, at one time the department did not have a leader, it was leaderless and it did not run well," he added.

Committee Chairman Catherine Alexander also announced where the 12 teacher cuts would occur.

Art will lose a .5 position, Business 1.4, English 1.8, Home Economics .6, Industrial Arts .5, Foreign Language 1.6, Math 1.4, Music .4, Science .75, Social Studies .7, Physical Education .36, AID 1 and Reading specialist 1.

After originally saying that the sophomore writing specialist would remain, Larocco later said he wasn't sure after English director Fran Russell said the proposed staffing would not allow for either reading or writing specialists.

Those two are expected to sit down with MacDonald this week and iron out the conflicts.

Reading teacher Miriam Reid argued that because she is the sole member of the reading staff, if the position is "reduced" it is, essentially, eliminated.

She said that in Arlington, for 1,877 students, there were 3.5 reading specialists. In Belmont, for 1,357 students there were two specialists and in Lexington for 1,849 students there were three specialists. In Winchester Reid is the only reading teacher for 1,446 students.

Finance Committee Chairman Robert Frank suggested that school officials look closely at ways of consolidating services more efficiently to save programs from being eliminated.

"A ringing defense can be made of every single service being discussed tonight," Frank said. "The goal is to look at cost savings that can be realized in the most efficient and educational way."

Curriculum Director David Ackerwas especially distressed at the probability of the AID program being eliminated.

The Alternatives for Individual Development program began in 1978 and is designed to offer in-school alternatives to suspensions of students for disciplinary reasons.

"I consider discipline to be the cornerstone of any curriculum," Ackerman said. "If a school does not have good discipline then it usually doesn't have a good curriculum."

Physical Education director Jan Dolan came to the defense of the proposed elimination or reduction of the coordinators and directors.

The coordinators whose position was eliminated would resume full time teaching duties. The move is expected to save $125,000. The amount of people the directors and coordinators supervised ranged from 3.6 (Business) to 9.3 (Physical Education.).

Those directors that have additional teaching duties would still be responsible for developing curriculum, grades Kindergarten through 12. Dolan said such a change would not benefit the Winchester school system.

"I hope you truly realize that it represents change, it represents rapid change and it represents regressive change," Dolan said.

She added that an alternative solution might be to have the administration - from the assistant principals to the superintendent - pick up teaching responsibilities.

"Could the superintendent teach a math class at 8 o'clock? I don't know, but why not," Dolan asked.

But School Committee member Constance Papas maintained that having administrative people - who haven't taught for many years-resume teaching would not improve the quality of education.

I would rather cut something completely than do something not as well," Papas argued. "And that's how I'll be voting. I will not vote for something just for the sake of saving it."

After meetings on other portions of the budget tonight, Saturday and Monday, the committee expects to have a budget ready for publication in the local newspapers by Jan. 15 in anticipation of the Jan. 24 public hearing on the entire budget.

The committee hopes to vote on a final budget by Feb. 16 that will be presented to Town Manager Thomas Groux two days later and to the Finance Committee on Feb. 25.

Selectmen's Notes

Saltmarsh Donation

State Rep. Sherman "Whip" Saltmarsh has donated half of the funds he received from a raise voted legislators on Halloween of 1979 to the Town of Winchester.

Saltmarsh appeared before Selectmen Monday to give them a check for $926, half of a $1,853 raise he received as the result of a vote by the State Legislature almost two years ago. He had voted against the measure. The remaining half of the raise was given to the Town of Stoneham, the other town Saltmarsh represents.

That raise was repealed by voters Nov. 4.

Saltmarsh said he learned he would be taxed on the raise , whether he accepted it or not.

"With Proposition 2.5," Saltmarsh told Selectmen, "the towns are much more worthy of the funds than the state."

In accepting the check, Board Chairman Wade Welch said, "We could use it."

Selectmen Edward F. O'Connell went further, saying, the check should be accepted "not for its monetary value but for what was in back of the act."

Greene Appointed

Stephen Greene, a Church st. resident, was appointed to the town's Forestry Committee on a unanimous vote by Selectmen Monday.

Greene will fill the vacancy left by the resignation of former DPW Director Walter Tonaszuck, who served as chairman of the committee and left his position with Winchester to direct the Public Works Department in Lexington.

Debate On School Cuts Continues Tonight

The School Committee will continue debate tonight on the proposed $1.4 million to be cut from next year's budget because of Proposition 2.5.

The committee will meet tonight to discuss the $74,600 cut projected at McCall Junior High and a $440,700 cut in personnel services at the elementary school level.

The committee will also be considering the closing of two elementary schools or the junior high at an estimated savings of $220,000 to $260,000

The administration presented its recommendation to the committee three weeks ago and the committee has met since then to discuss individual portions of the budget.

The committee will also meet Saturday morning at 9:30 a.m. to discuss the elimination of the school lunch program and possible changes in the policies governing the community use of schools.

On Monday the committee will debate a recommended $75,000 cut from the athletic budget at the high school. That figure is approximately one-third of the entire athletic budget.

Among the proposed cuts at McCall are the elimination of 3.2 teaching positions for a $64,000 savings. Custodial overtime and some part-time social workers and proctors were also recommended to be cut for a savings of $10,600.

If the committee decides against implementning a five-course cap at the high school the alternative plan would call for the elimination of all guidance services at McCall and one custodian for a savings of $63,000.

The elementary school budget reduction by $440,700 could rise significently if it is decided to close two of the schools. Business Manager Jack Fallon said the closing of two elementary schools will save approximately $260,000.

If two schools are closed the elimination of the two principals would save close to $40'000. The laying off of five teachers and 7.3 teacher-specialists would save almost $250,000.

All elementary guidance counselors, two secretaries, and three custodians would save approximately $118,000 at the elementary level.

A further reduction in secretarial substitutes, custodial overtime and the elimination of lunchroom supervisor substitutes, summer custodians and the elementary intramural program would save $28,700.

WEA Demands Meeting

The Winchester Education Association (WEA) is demanding to sit down with the School Committee and negotiate over the possible effects the budget cuts being considered by the committee now will have on the membership.

WEA President Steve Gorrie sent a Western Union telegram to the committee Tuesday night demanding the session with the School Committee. He said the WEA was not contesting the committee's authority to make the cuts but just wants to take precautions against potential adverse effects on the bargaining unit because of them.

He didn't name specific concerns but said the union just wanted to talk about a variety of matters that the cuts could affect.

"Our stand for the moment is that the contract is sacrosanct," Gorrie said. By meeting with the committee he said he is hoping to insure that it remains that way.

WINCHESTER'S FIRST BABY was born Jan. 2 in Winchester Hospital at 11:12 a.m. He is Angelo Joseph Marotta II, son of Ralph and Francis Marotta of Glenwood ave. The child has two sisters, Linda, 16, and Marie 14. Winchester Hospital gave the child a case of diapers. Another New Year's baby from Winchester, Eileen Dean, was born in Beth Israel Hospital Jan. 1 at 4:14 a.m. (Staff Photo By Noreen Murphy)

Gorrie wouldn't buy the argument and predicted the membership would also reject it. The WEA Representative Council has discussed such an alternative and had reacted overwhelmingly against such action, he said.

"We are not about to subsidize the education in Winchester for whatever the amount may be," Gorrie told The Star. "That's about the long and short of it. We may sit down with them (School Committee) but not to discuss that."

"Other public employees haven't been asked to do that. Granted, they might be but they haven't yet. This would be absolutely devastating to the staff morale," Gorrie said.

In the final analysis, Gorrie repeated that in no way could be envision himself or the WEA "subsidizing education" in Winchester.

"I just don't think it's right. Many of us pay taxes in other towns. This would be like having to pay twice," Gorrie said.

Holidays Can Be A Time Of Hassles

By John Kennedy

With the holiday season gradually slipping farther away, the days facing us in the new year are best exemplified by that haunting ghost of Christmas past. In the wake of yuletide cheer, for many the holidays are now reduced to a mass of crumpled wrapping paper, broken toys, and pine needles permanently imbedded in the living room carpet.

Even if the holidays proved to be a source of fond memories for most of us, every year about this time, we tend to examine our depleted spirits and checkbooks and wonder if we couldn't have done things a bit differently — maybe in a fashion that might've eliminated some of the exasperation, frustration and blues often associated with the holiday season.

As Dr. Edward Heck, a psychologist on the consultant staff at Winchester Hospital emphasizes, "Though most people can and do enjoy the holidays, for others the Christmas season is a time for hassles, disappointment and depression. We have great expectations for the season, drummed into us from childhood with the 'naughty or nice' idea that implies we'll be rewarded for our past year's efforts." Heck believes that, when rewards don't come, or when we just can't muster a cheery holiday visage, we feel as though somehow the holidays are passing us by.

Just as predictable as choruses resounding the virtues of "Jingle Bells" and "Home for the Holidays," Christmas is a time for noticing a marked increase in family disputes, drinking, and medical problems associated with stress and diet. Even mental disorders show a tendency to rise in the period just following the holiday whirlwind.

People most susceptible to the blues at this time are usually those whose family situation doesn't measure up to the classic Christmas card scenario. Families who cannot afford the exchange of material goods, so inspired by media hype, can be particularly affected by the holiday blues, as can children of broken families and divorced parents. Those living alone, or feeling disjointed due to living a long way from home, the elderly, hospital patients, prisoners, non-Christians, and even those who prefer quiet to the forced joviality of the season can feel especially depressed at this time of year.

"You've got to remember," says Dr. Heck, "that the Christmas season wasn't invented by the department stores. Our moods are affected by many factors, including weather and the seasons and, throughout history, even in primitive societies, this time of year had particular relevance.

"Many of our holiday customs reflect beliefs founded in ancient rituals surrounding the winter solstice," Heck says. "These ceremonies inspired people to look for the return of the springtime sun; were a time for putting things in perspective while looking forward to the new year and reflecting on the old; and included festival rites that demanded fasting, purification, an invigorous renewal of life, and a jubiliation phase marked by reunion with family and renewal of faith in the world as it was then known.

"We get some of these very traditional customs passed down to us through history," Heck says, "and society has expectations of us at this time."

"I feel that there's a bigger picture than meets the eye regarding the holidays," says Heck. "There's a purpose and wisdom in these age old traditions, and we shouldn't buck the natural rhythms of history. If we are lacking in any of these eternal societal virtues, or if reflection on the past year is difficult or uncomfortable, we may find ourselves feeling rather out of sorts at the holiday time."

There's no quick solution for avoiding the stress and let-down of the holiday blues. Instead, people should plan methods well in advance designed to keep the holidays in perspective.

"Break traditions that have proved upsetting to you in the past," Heck cites, "and be selective about the new traditions you plan." "Try to keep busy through the holidays to avoid that 'left out' feeling, and bring some imagination into your holiday festivities."

If all the hassles of shopping — which Heck compares to "sharks in a feeding frenzy" — and the arrival of swarms of holidays guests becomes distracting, maybe its a good idea to give yourself a Christmas present. Taking a vacation over the holiday weeks or, perhaps, having a party catered or going out to eat is a good solution for encroaching holiday blues. Going to special church services, limiting your attendance at parties and social events and, generally, placing controls on our usual runaway holiday behavior patterns are other ways to reduce the general anxiety often associated with Christmas week.

New Year's Day is a time for resolutions, and for those simmering in the pot of post-Christmas burnout, maybe now is a time for looking to the next holiday season as an opportunity for change.

"You can enjoy the holidays by keeping a handle on your own capabilities," Dr. Heck reminds. "Don't try to combat excess with excess."

Barcley To Serve Youth At First Baptist Church

The First Baptist Church as called William Barcley, a junior at Gordon College in Wenham to guide the programs of the youth and young adults.

Barcley grew up in a Baptist church in St. Petersburg, Fla. and attended a Christian high school there. During that time he was active in church youth groups and school activities including student government.

At Gordon College, he is a Bible major preparing to enter theological seminary to train for the pastorate.

Barcley joins Rev. Earl Robinson, pastor, and Aram Marashlian, assistant pastor, to complete the pastoral ministry team to serve all ages in the church.

Music Program Offers Lessons At McCall Beginning Feb. 2

There is a new opportunity in Winchester for beginning and experienced students of all ages to take private instrumental lessons through the Winchester Music Program. Weekly lessons will be offered Monday and Thursday afternoons at McCall Junior High School beginning on Feb. 2.

This pilot program, organized by Corie Nichols and Sandy Thompson in collaboration with the Belmont Music School, will include flute, percussion, and trombone lessons and ensembles. There are several openings for flute students, and one for percussion. Trombone lessons and ensembles are fully subscribed.

The flute teacher will be Kathleen Boyd, who earned her bachelor's and master's of music degrees from the New England Conservatory. She currently teaches with the NEC Preparatory Division and the Newton school system.

Several junior high and high school students have already registered for flute lessons, but there are still openings on both Mondays an- Thursdays. When feasible Boyd will teach students of comparable ability in adjoining lessons, to facilitate duet playing.

The McCall Parents' Association is sponsoring this pilot program of instrumental lessons and ensembles. The music staff of the Winchester Public Schools has endorsed the program, and the Friends of the Winchester High School Music Department have contributed to help the program offer financial aid.

Many families have requested lessons and ensembles on other instruments for next fall. To register for flute or percussion lessons this spring, or to express interest for the fall, call the coordinators of the Winchester Music Program, Corie Nichols (729-7446) or Sandy Thompson (729-8063).

John Burciaga To Speak Sunday Before Unitarians

During the church service on this coming Sunday, Jan. 11, those attending the Winchester Unitarian Church will have the opportunity to hear a Southern writer-Unitarian Universalist leader, presently minister in Clearwater, Fla. talk about the New England experience in religion. He is John Burciaga. Before becoming a journalist, Burciaga was a Southern Baptist minister, a calling that to him was natural to his very special background of fundamentalist Basque ancestry in the American South.

Since 1965 John Burciaga has been serving Unitarian churches in Bethlehem, Pa., Atlanta and presently Clearwater. Along the way, however, he has pursued his journalistic interests in a number of ways. Before moving to Florida he was the editor of the investigative newspaper Atlantan.

His formal sermon topic for this Sunday is a line of Alexander Pope's "The Feast of Reason and the Flow of Soul," With his background in the American university system, Basque as well as Baptist roots, experience in the working press, and the liberal ministry, John Burciaga offers a fresh perspective.

Studio Guild Has Holiday Party At Eddy Residence

The Studio Guild celebrated Christmas with a luncheon at the home of Sally Eddy Dec. 17.

Following their Wednesday morning class with King Coffin at the studio, members moved to the party site with food and wine, presents and poetry. Club activities came to end for 1980 after members read poems and exhanged gifts.

Class at the Studio Guild will resume Jan. 7 at 9:30 a.m. in the studio at 9 Mt. Vernon st. Value studies in all media (watercolor, oil or acrylic) will be the area of endeavor this winter for most of the members. More advanced members will be encouraged and helped with individual projects.

There are a few openings for new members. Interested people may drop in on Wednesday mornings at the studio or call M. Helmreich, 729-8136, or pres. R. Lynch at 729-2675.

Letters From Readers

Guidance Support

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

It came to our attention recently, on reading the letter of the Parent Faculty Association, that among the possible areas in the high school identified for cuts was the position of Guidance Department Head (this, incidentally, was not included in the Star's news article on the subject two weeks ago, which is one reason we are sending this letter to the Star as well as to the school authorities).

From our experience, having put three of our children through Winchester High School, while taking considerable advantage of the Guidance Department, and having some knowledge of college admissions departments, we feel this would be a serious mistake. We are not arguing against a reduction in the size of the Guidance Department. This, in any event, is inevitable given declining enrollments; and we are not arguing against a modest increase in the number of students per counselor (note that the department head is also a counselor). The reduction in size of the department will already correspond to a significant reduction in its budget. The further elimination of the position of head of the department (not corresponding to a further reduction in size) would correspond to only a minor additional budgetary reduction, but it would seriously jeopardize the effectiveness of the department, and impair the services it renders to our students (not to speak of their parents).

Obviously one cannot take a group of people and call them counselors and expect the results to be good. They themselves need a common philosophy, coordination of their efforts, and guidance from someone who not only has a vast experience in dealing with young people and helping them find their way through high school and on into college (to which 80 percent of Winchester students go) but who also knows his way around college admissions offices and has an established reputation with college admissions officers. We have been very fortunate in Winchester, in that for the last ten years we have had Mr. Anthony N. DeBiase as head of the guidance department. He not only brings all the qualities needed in the leader of a guidance department, but has spent the ten years in building up a program which has been enormously useful in putting so many Winchester youngsters on the path to success in life.

What does a guidance department do? First, there is the academic advisory role — all students are assisted in choosing their course programs and in defining an academic direction. In addition, there is the advisory role on a personal level, a function which has become more and more important, particularly in recent years. With the divorce rate in America now at 50 percent and more of our students coming from divided families, and with the greater tendency of 1980's young people to speak more freely about their personal problems, this type of advisory activity will become even more important. Finally, we come to the role in which graduating seniors are assisted in moving into the next phase of their lives, and for the great majority in Winchester this means college. The guidance department helps the students to get into the college of their choice, or to choose the college which might be most suitable for them. Each year several hundred students apply to several colleges each, meaning the Guidance Department handles as many as a thousand applications. This also requires a major effort of coordination and continuous monitoring of changes in admissions standards and procedures.

It is most fortunate for our Winchester students that our present guidance head, Mr. DeBiase, has built up over ten years close, and trusting, relationships with so many college admissions officers. To see the value of this, take as an example, the case of a student who for some reason has not lived up to his potential in terms of grades, but who applies to a college which generally requires high grades for admission. The student's teachers know his potential and may write very good letters of recommendation. Still, it is natural that a college admissions officer will be suspicious of these letters in view of the grades. In the case of Winchester High this officer may simply pick up the telephone and call Mr. DeBiase and ask him what the story is on this student — is he as good as the letters say. He knows from past experience that he can believe the answer he is going to get.

The quality of our school is determined primarily by the quality of the teaching corps and of the students. The connecting link in establishing a national reputation for quality with the colleges is the Head of the Guidance Department. Eliminate that position and our reputation, and hence our graduating students, will suffer.

We presume that the intent of the Superintendent, in suggesting the elimination of this position, would be to turn its function over to some other, already existing and probably overburdened, administrator. This sound like a recipe for disaster. You simply cannot turn over ten years of experience and personal contacts, particularly to someone who is already burdened with many other responsibilities.

What we see then is a proposal which is basically cost ineffective. The savings of a few thousand dollars envisioned by, effectively, turning the head of guidance into a full-time counselor (not actually eliminating a person) is certainly not worth the very serious consequences to our guidance program which would ensue, and provides negligible help in achieving the cuts dictated by Proposition 2½.

We very much hope the Superintendent and the School Committee will reject this particular proposal and would urge other Winchester parents and residents to make their opinions known on this matter.

Jack Schneps
Lucia Schneps

Editors Note: The Star reported that the position of Guidance Departrment head is among the high school cuts being considered on a Page 1 story of the Jan. 1 issue.

Child Care

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Three weeks ago, an article appeared in The Star describing the League of Women Voters' study of after school child care programs and inviting interested people to contact the committee. If in the rush of the holidays some people forgot to call us, it is not too late.

For those who did not catch the article, after school programs are designed primarily, though not exclusively, to meet the needs of working parents and their elementary school age children, for whom quality after school care is often difficult to find. The best after school programs in other communities provide a comfortable, stimulating environment where children continue to grow, learn and play together under adult supervison during the two to three hours each day after school, release days and school vacation weeks.

A group from the League of Women Voters will be conducting a needs assessment for such a program in Winchester.

In the meantime, a committee is investigating programs in communities comparable to ours. If a need in our own town can be documented, the League will attempt to identify what kind of after school program parents in Winchester desire. The actual work of planning and establishing a program would be done by an independent coalition which the League committee is in the process of forming.

If you would like to be part of the coalition or can help out in even a small way, call the League committee chair, Jeanne Duffy, at 729-5956, evenings after 8 p.m. or during the week-end.

Saltmarsh Praised

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Like most of us, this is the time of year when I reflect on the past and anticipate, to some degree, the future.

It was when looking back on the past year that I realized that I would be remiss if I did not make a public statement on behalf of a fine piece of work by Representative Whip Saltmarsh of Winchester and Stoneham.

Rep. Saltmarsh prevented a ten dollar increase in the M.D.C. water rate. That's right — Ten Dollars.

How could it happen that another price increase was threatened and most people never heard of it? Simply put, when bad things are prevented from happening they generate little interest. They are non events. Yet, one of the most important functions of an elected official is to prevent occurrences which are detrimental to his or her constituents.

Let me briefly summarize the facts of this matter.

The M.D.C. owns and operates a waste water treatment plant in Clinton, Massachusetts. The purpose of the plant is to protect the Metropolitan Water Supply. Due to the fact that the construction of the M.D.C. water works in Clinton damaged the existing Clinton waste water treatment plant the M.D.C. rebuilt the facility and, under state law, guaranteed Clinton the free use of the facility.

The Environmental Protection Agency has ordered the M.D.C. to upgrade the treatment plant and the cost of the work is estimated at about 20 million dollars. Ninety percent of this cost, or 18 million dollars, is reimbursable from the Federal Government if the district which applies for the reimbursement complies with Federal regulations.

One of the above mentioned Federal regulations is that the applicant district must collect sewer use charges. But, the state law prohibited the collection of such charges. Herein was the conflict.

Legislation was drafted which would require Clinton to collect sewer use charges and thus satisfy the Federal Government. The charges would then be returned to Clinton by a 'credit' on the "cherry sheet" thus preserving their historic position. Riding on the outcome of this legislation was a reimbursement of 18 million dollars which, while large enough by itself, would grow to be 36 million if it had to be bonded over 20 years at a minimum interest level of 6 percent. This sum of 36 million dollars would be paid by an increase in the M.D.C. water rate.

The legislation became House Bill No.2553 which was filed and steered through the House of Representatives by Rep. Saltmarsh.

Senator Francis Doris &(D) of Revere was the prime mover of this legislation in the Senate and deserves equal billing with Rep. Saltmarsh in this matter.

This is a case where both branches of the Legislature and both political parties cooperated to prevent a needless cost increase to the citizens of the Metropolitan Water District.

The good news, then,, was that there was no bad news.

And so I send this public "thank you" to Whip Saltmarsh and, also, to Fran Doris and I conclude with the following thought. This is the final test of a good public official: His or her willingness to handle those issues which have no publicity value for them.

Paul F. McDevitt, M.D.C.
Legislative Director

—A Clean Slate—

By STEVEN AUSTIN

Our breath came cloudy in the cold and the wind was sharp and bitter, rifling over the red-bricked floor of City Hall Plaza.

On New Year's Eve, twenty minutes before midnight, we stood in the crowd, stamping our feet, the cold like a heavy, ice mask on our faces and waited for the fireworks to start.

My friend was lost in a gold-colored down jacket and her cheeks were flushed bright red in the cold. Her breath hid her mouth when she smiled and occasionally, we heard a bottle explode against the bricks; shatter the way the cold would if you could drop it.

In front of us, on an elevated platform, dancers moved in time to the music, their breaths hanging over them like chilly, gray smoke. We moved from the open plain of the Plaza to the platform where there were more people and, we hoped, more heat. There was a bitter-sweet smell in the air; the smell of alcohol and cigarette smoke and the dancers held one anothers shoulders, dancing together in a curling line around the platform.

One of the dancers, a boy about sixteen with a gash that ran from his right cheek, across the bridge of his nose to his left cheek, shouted to me over the noise of the music and the laughter.

"You see this?" he said, pointing to the cut on his face. "A bottle did this. Someone I didn't even know threw a bottle and it hit me. They didn't mean to though. It hurts like hell but they didn't mean to hit me and besides, its New Year's Eve and I don't care." He was swaying slightly, more from alcohol than the music.

I smiled at him and refused the pint of whiskey he offered me.

The other dancers moved and bumped against you and smiled and shouted and when we were warmer, we left the platform for a spot which offered a better view of the fireworks.

They exploded high above the floor of the Plaza in balls of blue and yellow and red and green and the crowd moaned in unison under their colors. We bounced on the balls of our feet and watched the fireworks and my friend smiled her cloudy smile again and someone near us said, "A clean slate. Everything bad's gone now and I have a clean slate."

When the last color had faded, we left the Plaza for a resturant, moving slowly in the crowd that continued to dance and shout and sway to the last sounds of the music

Twenty minutes into the New Year, we were at a table in a warm room and I said, "I never know from one year to the next where I'll be on New Year's or who I'll spend it with."

My friend's face was less flushed and she'd shed the down jacket. Her eyes smiled when her mouth did.

"Me either," she said. "I mean, a year ago, I never would have guessed I'd be here."

The waiter brought our food and we ate slowly, watching the resturant fill quickly; watched bundles of down coats and gloves and scarfs become people.

A group of kids at a table behind us were loud and rowdy and a waiter asked them to quiet down. They laughed instead and then the waiter laughed and they wished one another a Happy New Year and the waiter went back to work and the kids went back to being loud and rowdy.

Later, a girl at the table stood up uncertainly and fell against a coat rack. They both fell with a crash and her friends at the table laughed.

"Don't look at me," she said as she got up. "You can laugh but just don't everybody look at me."

"She handled that well," my friend said.

The restaurant was full then and everyone was drunk or happy or both and I listened to someone raving about how wonderful the fireworks were.

"The guy in the Plaza was right," I said. "Everyone has a clean slate now. It begins tonight."

My friend smiled and after we'd paid the bill, we left the restaurant for the car, walking quickly through the sharp, clean coldness. The wind cut at our coats and we passed occasionally late-night celebrants.

They smiled and said Happy New Year and pulled their heads further down into their coats.

They all looked as if they had clean slates too.

CENSUS WORK began last week at Town Hall as Town Clerk Carolyn Ward (R), members of the office staff and area Girl Scouts prepared the census for mailing. Deadline for responding to the census is Jan. 12 and a spokesperson for the Clerk's office said Tuesday responses were running well. The mailing contains a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Drama Workshop Slates Series

Registration for a new Drama Workshop series for four through six graders as well as for other winter programs opens Saturday, Jan. 10, from 10 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the Recreation Office at the rear of the Town Hall.

Until the limited enrollment is filled, boys and girls will be enrolled free of charge for sessions on Wednesdays from 3:15-5 p.m. in the carpeted Social Studies open area of the High School, second floor front.

Both newcomers and former participants will begin the sessions together with: yoga to stretch and relax the body; sensory awareness exercises to stimulate the imagination; mime and movement for organic communication; and theater games to develop spontaneous ensemble playing. Finally, small groups will improvise scenes with the help of the leaders; here former participants may wish to develop previous scenes into a theater piece. All will participate in an April demonstration open to the community.

Through this expressive arts process boys and girls learn to work from within themselves toward more effective outer communication in both theater art and daily living.

For further information the leaders may be contacted through Paulett Taggart, Winchester Drama Workshop, 17 Ridgefield rd., 729-6669.

With the weather cooperating it was indeed an ideal crisp December evening for the Westley Street Garden Club. As always the residents looked beautiful in their party clothes. One would never taken them for senior citizens.

The hall was beautifully decorated with the Christmas Crib in the background. The Christmas Tree sparkling with lights and laden with gifts. The hall was tastefully decorated as always. After a delicious catered turkey dinner, Santa (Joe McKee) and Mrs. Santa Claus (Betty Walsh) put in their appearance. All present received their gifts.

Fish Story

WHS Students Get Seafood Short Course

The Winchester High Home Economics Department had a demonstration on fish by John and Jennifer Frongillo of the Pisces Pantry, Shore rd. on Monday, Jan. 5.

The three Creative Foods classes of Jean Dillon, Ginny Laats and Harriet Nelson had the presentation and discussion during their regular class periods.

Students were able to observe the proper filleting of a fish, stuffing of shrimp, cutting open and stuffing clam shells and baking them.

Frongillo told the students that he makes daily trips to the Boston fish market early in the morning in order to have fresh fish to sell each day.

He described the characteristics of fresh fish such as a very firm white flesh and full and shiney eyes. He discussed the rich resource of the George's Bank off the New Engand coast for the best source of fish in the world. He pointed out the high nutritional value of fish for the consumer's dollar. Fish is a high protein food, low in calories and cholesteral, that can be prepared quickly with a gourmet flair.

The following recipes were demonstrated:

Fillet of Haddock

One fillet of haddock, cover it with small amount of mayonnaise. Sprinkle approximately four or five crushed ritz crackers over the fish. Bake at 400 degrees, 12 to 14 minutes. (Butter can be used instead of mayonnaise.)

Stuffed Clams

Open the cherry stone clams and remove the meat. Chop the meat and add equal amounts of butter and cracker crums with the chopped clams. Restuff shells and bake in 400 degree oven 12 to 15 minutes.

Baked Stuffed Shrimp

Buy jumbo shrimp (10 to a lb.)-three to four per person should be allowed. Peel, devein and butterfly (split down the back without separating) the shrimp. Place shrimp on foiled baking sheet. Stuff with mixture of butter and crumbled Ritz crackers. Bake at 400 degrees for 10-12 minutes.

School Paper Feels 2½ Crunch

Staff Trying To Keep Paper Alive

By Janette Pamir

When voters went to the poles on Nov. 4, high school journalism in Winchester was put to the survival test. The question was whether the editorial staff could raise enough money to print for the rest of the school year.

As a result of Proposition $2\frac{1}{2}$, $1.5 million out of the $9 million Winchester school budget will have to be cut. A number of club activities and funding will have to be reduced totally or partially, including the Winchester High paper, the "Red and Black."

Although it is not yet definite how much money will be cut from each club at the high school, for the time being, all the funds are frozen.

Vincent Laracco, high school principal, says he has never seen such a drastic proposal cut and hopes that the school will be able to obtain as balanced an extracurricular program as possible. He said every effort will be made to maintain as many activities as possible.

For the "Red and Black," these cuts mean the possibility of no more funding or very little funding.

Previously the "Red and Black" was allotted $700 at the beginning of the year and depending upon the financial situation later on in the year, would receive more.

With Proposition $2\frac{1}{2}$, all that changed. Before staff members could print anythi,g, the "Red and Black" had to raise enough money in advance to cover several issues or there would be no high school newspaper. Each issue costs about $300 to $400 to print and even with advertising and sales there is usually a deficit, which was covered by the $700 given annually to the club.

By mailing letters and phoning the parents of students at the high school, the editorial staff was able to rais enough money for two or three more issues. To complete the school year they need five more issues.

In order to help complete this year's funding, the "Red and Black" has a magic show planned for Saturday, Jan. 17. The Volcane Magic Show will have a matinee and evening performance. It's been a success at other high schools and staff members hope to raise money through it.

In November, the "Red and Black" received the Medalist Award from Columbia University. The award is the highest that Columbia gives for high school journalism. The good response from the subscriptions drive indicates that parents and students want to continue the paper.

Louise Mawn, the e-itor of the "Red and Black" and the rest of the staff are pleased by the outcome and support shown by the town.

While staffers have worked hard since November to keep the paper running, Mawn believes that self-sufficiency is a good experience for the students, not only in journalism, but in business as well.

Julie Derry, the junior editor who will inherit Mawn's post in March, is a little apprehensive and hopes staffers will have enough funds to last through the beginning of next year. While it will take a lot of hard work, Derry is determined to print the paper and keep up the "Red and Black's" Medalist rating.

It Started With Pigeons, Ended In Friendship

By FRED CORNETTA

Did you ever wonder what "the old man in the park" feeding the pigeons is thinking?

Several summers ago, I saw one such "old guy," seventy-five, maybe eighty years old, sitting on a park bench in the center, feeding the pigeons. This somber-looking gentleman would remain for hours, sometimes breaking the monotony by pacing with his shillelagh. After the brief exercise, he'd return to those infernal birds.

I observed this man throughout the warm July and August months. Always alone, he spent countless hours pondering. There were occasional passersby who would tip their hats, or say, "Hello," but I never noticed him engaged in any lengthy conversations.

Autumn passed and I suddenly realized that the old man hadn't been around for a while. In fact, his disappearance didn't even occur to me until I spotted him about a month ago. It was too cold to sit and feed pigeons. He just walked. If he stopped, it was only to rest. He would stand for several minutes, take a few short breaths, and continue his journey.

I felt as though an old friend had returned from an extended holiday. I accosted the fragile individual cloaked in his full-length tweed coat, which would have been very chic in the mid-forties. "Hello," I said heartily as I passed by. He acknowledged me with a nod and continued. There was something different about the gaunt little man, but I wasn't quite certain what it was. For about a week, I would encounter him in much the same manner on my way to lunch. Finally, I decided to engage him in conversation. As I approached, I realized what the change had been. Instead of that disconsolate person of the summer, he had a warm expression. Though he was not exactly effervescent, I detected a bit of a twinkle, even a slight smile as he bid me "good day" each afternoon.

With that, I reached for the telephone and dialed. 'Hello Mom. How are you ?

This time, instead of a "hello," I began with a formal introduction and asked if he'd care for some lunch. He was so surprised he dropped his cane.

"Come on," I continued as I stooped to pick it up. "I'm on my way, why not join me."

"Certainly," he replied after some thought.

We became fast friends and chatted for more than an hour and a half. I discovered that, after staying apart for ten years, he was finally going to visit his son whose marriage he hadn't approved of. It would also be the first time he would meet his granddaughter. After his wife died a few years ago, he was left alone with anger toward his only living blood relative and animosity for his daughter-in-law. I never found out why he felt this way, and I think even he had forgotten.

The daughter-in-law had contacted him recently and for two hours they had had a very poignant conversation about his granddaughter and how much she wished to see her grandpa.

"Such a fool I've been," he confided. "All those wasted years sitting in the park and feeling sorry for myself."

He reminisced about his marriage and family. After lunch, I felt as though I had known him for years, almost like my own grandfather.

"Those damn self-indulgent, pitiful days of loneliness are gone," he stated. "I'm going to visit them out in Denver for Christmas in a few weeks.

"It'll be wonderful to see them again. You take care of yourself, young man," he said with a slap on my back.

I left on business for several days, and when I returned, I discovered that my new friend hadn't been on his daily constitutional. Perhaps he left early for his Christmas vacation, I thought with a smile. Two days later, on the way to lunch, I bumped into one of those occasional passersby who would nod a greeting to my adopted grandfather. I stopped him and asked if he knew the whereabouts of my comrade.

"Oh, haven't you heard?" he responded. "Old Jim (not his real name) died last week. Heart attack. Too bad, he was a nice fella."

Shocked by the news, I passed by the restaurant and drove out of town to a pub where I drank my lunch. I never made it back to work that day. Saddened by the cruel irony of the situation, I kept wondering about his family. "What a horrible situation," I thought. "He'll never really know them, nor will they understand what pain he has been through these last years."

With that I reached for the telephone and dialed. One ring. Two rings. "Hello, Mom. How are you and Dad?...."

Christmas Caroling Popular

The Christmas spirit was kept alive.

The Community Carol Singing on Christmas Eve has continued to receive rave reviews, especially in light of the fact that the event took place in spite of being temporarily cancelled two weeks before Christmas.

Mrs. Cynthia Barone had talked with the Caroling Leader, Mrs. Betsy Ewing, and then proceeded to find a new location for the singing, the lighted patio of the First Congregational Church.

Starting only a week before Christmas, the event was rescheduled and came off successfully. Mrs. Barone said she has been receiving telephone calls, letters, and personal comments, many of which came from complete strangers who had been shocked when the event was cancelled.

One of the out-of-state letters received by Mrs. Barone was written by a man who had grown up in Winchester. According to Mrs. Barone, the letter expressed the views of many others; "Congratulations on your effort to keep the Christmas spirit alive in the Town of Winchester. You are to be commended. I am sorry that they did not have the Common observance this Christmas. It was a highlight of my days in Winchester and a wonderful tradition. I have never forgotten it."

To correct a statement in last week's Star, Mrs. Barone said that although Mahoney's had originally offered to donate a tree and Walter Stockwood offered to donate his time to do electrical work, these offers could not be accepted due to the town's failure to supply funds for electricity. Also, although the Chamber of Commerce tried to retain the Common lighting, it did not take part in the final effort to continue the carolling, as reported by The Star.

"I do not remember when the Community Singing originated," said Mrs. Barone. "But, in an effort to increase the attendance on the Common for Mary Rantin Withim, the leader of the singing for over forty years, I did conduct a December-long publicity effort through the Winchester Star and the churhces many years ago." This effort drew special attention to the carol-sining and was the beginning of the large, town-wide turnout that presently takes place," she said.

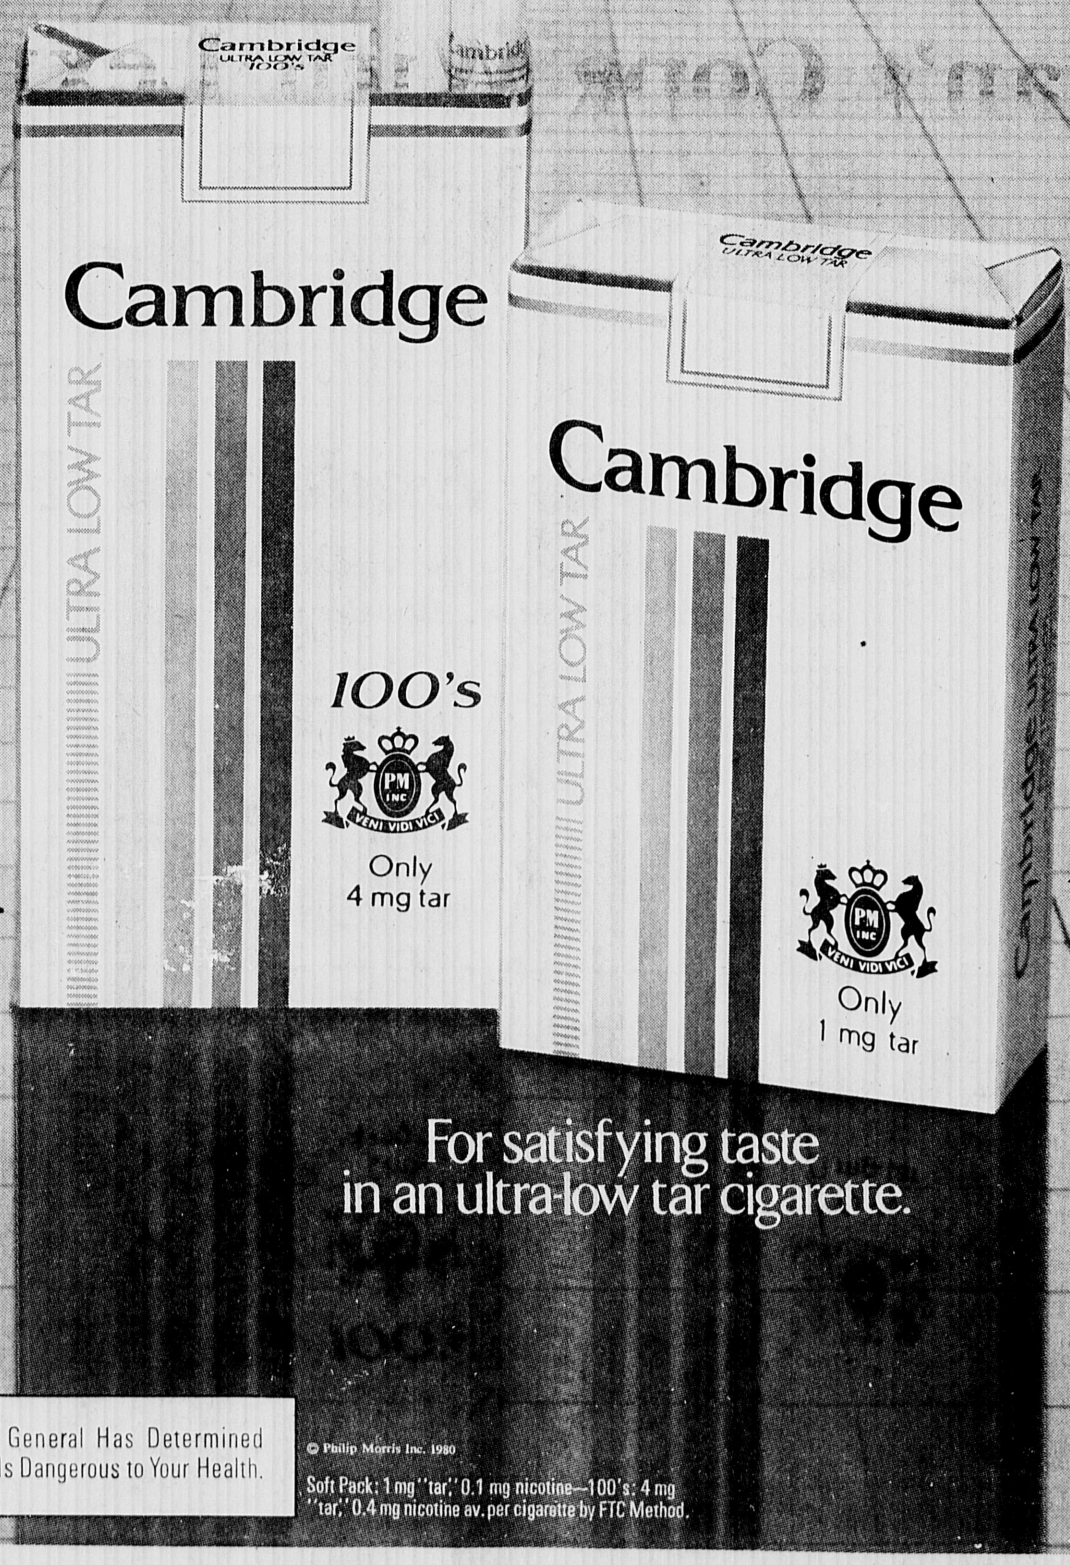

"If even one year was skipped, it might have been difficult to regain the following and spirit another year." said Mrs. Barone. "And it was a home-town family tradition too meaningful to lose.

"Proposition 2.5 is being blamed for many things" remarked Mrs. Barone. "But considering the donations offered by Mahoney's, Stockwood and the Chamber of Commerce, the su. needed from the town, in this instance, was small and probably could have been covered by private individuals if they had known about it earlier. Let's all help to do better next year!"

Trackmen Roll To 4th Straight

The undefeated Sachem trackmen trailed Melrose by three points heading into the last leg of the relay, the final event of the meet.

But Coach Tom Kline breathed an early sigh of relief because when Mark Merritt handed off to Ken Jacobsen for the final quarter, the Sachems had a two-stride lead despite a little mix-up on the hand-off.

"If Jacobsen is out front, you are not going to beat him," Kline said simply after Winchester had eeked out the 44-42 victory, its fourth in a row. "He doesn't look like he's going anywhere the way he runs but he's a heck of a runner."

And sure enough Jacobsen held on, leading all the way to the finish for the win. But if Kline was confident of victory when his senior runner took the hand-off in the relay, he wasn't nearly so optimistic earlier in the meet. The Red Raiders (1-2) had swept the hurdles to put the Sachems in an early hole.

"When they swept the hurdles I said, 'oh oh, that's it.' I figured we couldn't lose any points that we figured to get," Kline said.

But on this day it was okay because a number of Sachems came up with season-high performances, including Paul Manganaro in the shot put, whose 52-4 throw tied the school mark in that event.

After being blanked in the hurdles, the Sachems bounced right back in the dash with Bob Mueller taking a first in 5.5 while Bill MacMillan finished third.

Winchester dominated the 600 with Jacobsen grabbing first (1:18.3) and Al Chen taking second (1:21).

Jon Alcione finished second in the 300, just two-tenths of second behind the winner but Kline thought his junior speedster8 "He had the lead, might have won it. he should have beaten him. At least it looked that way to me. But he came back in the rela and ran an excellent quarter," Kline said. Alcione started the relay followed by Chen, Merritt and Jacobsen.

Merritt ran the best 1000 on the team this year but it was only good for second place. Although it wasn't good enough to win, Kline was pleased. "That was an excellent time," he said of Merritt's 2:29 finish. "I didn't think we'd place in the event at all."

Brian Donnellan (5-8) and John Wiseman (5-6) took second and third places in the high jump that preceded Manganaro's equaling of Brian O'Connor's indoor mark in the shot. Jeff Lavey took third with a throw of 38-10. But Manganaro, who has yet to be seriously threatened this season in the shot, was the star of the moment.

"He can do better than that, too. His four throws in the meets so far have all been over 50 feet. Nobody else in the leage has been even close to him," Kline said.

Joe Callahan breezed to a victory in the mile with a time of 4:47.3 and Peter O.uine bettered his previo us best in the two-mile by 31 seconds when he finished second in 10:32. Pat Kennedy, fighting off illness, took third right behind Quine in 10:32.8.

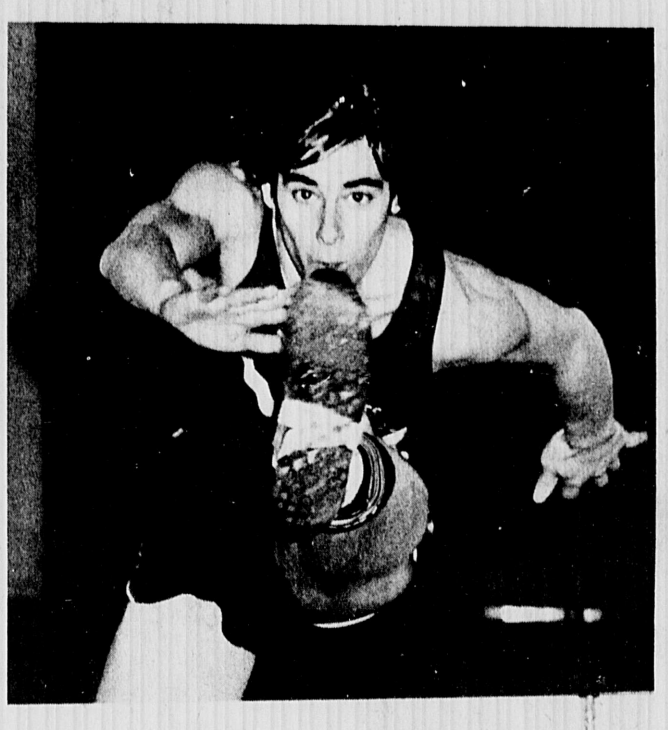

That set for the stage for the relay and the Sachem foursome made sure of the victory. The four straight wins is the best start of any of Kline's seven Winchester teams. And although he isn't promising any league title yet - after all there remains Reading and Woburn to be contended with - he's quietly optimistic.

"There's no team that's going to do a number on us," Kline promised. "There's nobody in the league that's going to run away with it. Everyone is pretty competitive with each other."

Well, maybe. But one would be hard pressed to include Wakefield in that group.

Wakefield was victim number three as the Sachems inflicted a 56-30 thrashing on the outmanned Warriors.

Cagers Can't Cope With Lexington

It Was A Foul Day For Sachemettes

By JULIE DERRY

It had appeared that the Sachemettes were on the comeback trail for good. They had grabbed a win over Belmont and battled heralded Wakefield right down to the final buzzer before losing.

"Inexperience hurt us Friday (against Wakefield) but I was very proud," Coach Donna Tanner said as the team prepared for Tuesday's match-up against Lexington.

The Minutemaids have been the surprise of the league, runnning off to a quick 6-0 start but despite this the Sachemettes were confident they ahd turned the corner.

And after three quarters, who would have doubted it? Winchester was up 42-34 and rolling. But the Sachemettes were ambushed once again and came away losers by a 42-35 count.

Although Winchester had dominated the entire game they got nervous in the fourth quarter and began to lose control. They sped up the pace which translated into turnovers. Lexington capitalized, ripping off 20 fourth quarter points to nearly double their output of the first three quarters.

"We choked in the end," a disappointed Tanner said afterwards. " No one had a cool enough head out there to calm us down. It didn't help us with Joanne (Maloney) fouling out in the fourth quarter, either. She is a real catalyst and that really put a damper on o' ' game."

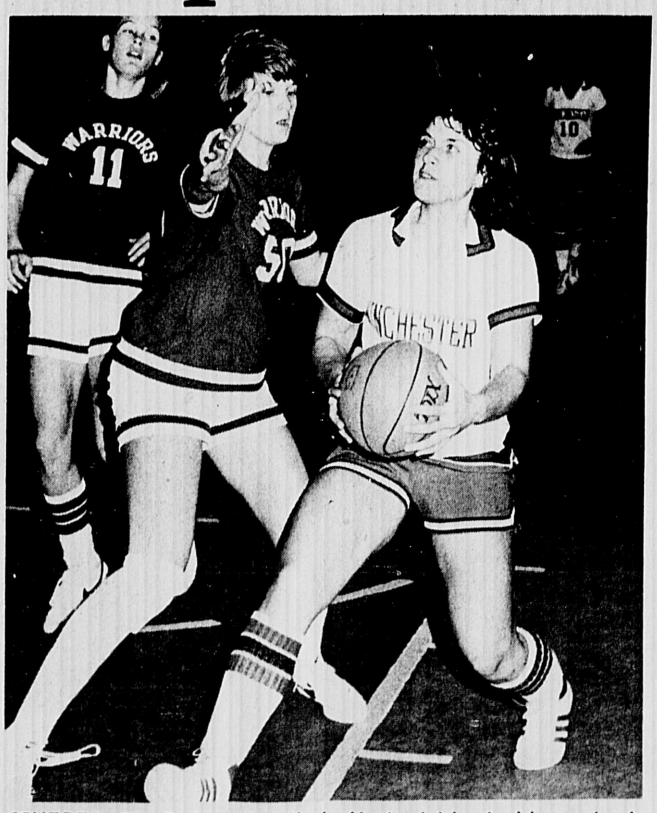

After a 16-16 first half, the Sachemettes came out running and stretched the lead to four points right at the start of the second half as Maria Montuori and Ann Porell sunk a pair of fast break baskets.

But after racing out to the 42-34 lead the Sachemettes would score just one more point while the Minutemaids ran off eight points for their seventh straight win.

"Although fouls are something Tanner keeps harping about to the club, she is more concerned now with the number of foul shots her girls are missing.

"We missed 20 foul shots Friday, 20! If we had scored those we would have easily won. Today (Tuesday) is a carbon copy of Friday. Although we missed only nine foul shots, we choked in the end. We had both games and we blew it," Tanner said.

"This really frustrated me, giving a game away. I'd rather be swamped," she continued. "We are playing better now. We work well together. Margaret Dokus is really coming along and so is Ann Porell. The season started too early for us. With three underclassmen it was hard because we had no experience. Still, I don't know... I was proud Friday, but I don't know," she sighed.

Boys Stumble After Getting First Victory

There just isn't a heck of a lot anyone can say after a 49-point defeat.

Just ask Winchester basketball Coach John Myers after he watched the Lexington Minutemen trample his young squad Tuesday by an 84-35 count.

"We made it easy for them," he shrugged afterwards. "In the first half we had 14 turnovers for 10 hoops. That's 20 points. How can you win with that?"

Last Friday it was more of the same as the Sachems (now 1-6) dropped a 76-48 decision to powerful Wakefield but three days before that Winchester notched victory number 1, a 69-57 triumph over Belmont.

But against Lexington the Sachems couldn't recover from an early full court press and the incredible shooting of Minuteman guard Mark Hedtler (26 points, 18 in the first half).

Winchester tried to keep running with the taller and quicker Lexington squad but were simply outmanned. Afterwards Myers dismissed the idea of his team slowing it down to keep the score down.

"Sure we could have played it differently and it (the final score) wouldn't have been as bad but would we have gained? I don't know. What did we lose by, 50? So if we played it differently and lost by 30 would that have been any better? I don't think so," Myers said.

Now he hopes it doesn't demoralize the troops too much. With Watertown (Friday), Stoneham and Reading the next three opponents, Myers sees an opportunity to grab a couple of W's.

"This will be a good test for them (against Watertown). We can play with them. It's a game that's there for the taking. The next three games are. We'll see what these kids are made of. See if they have the pride to come back after this."

The final score indicated that the Sachems were never in the game and they weren't. Lexington had healthy leads at all the checkpoints, 21-4 after one, 42-19 at the half and 59-25 after three quarters.

Sachem sophomore Steve MacDonald led the team with nine points followed by John Myers and Matt Groux who had eight each.

But if Lexington was the lowpoint, then the win over Belmont, obviously, was the high point.

After trailing by two at the half, the Sachems came out and ran off a 17-4 burst to put the short Marauders away for good.

And the key man in the second half dominance was Myers who scored all of his season high 22 points in the last two quarters.

After a run of 9-0 turned a 33-31 lead into a 42-31 margin Winchester coasted the rest of the way, opening a 17- point lead at 62-45 at one stage of the fourth quarter. It was an easy one.

Myers hardly was the only one to turn in a stellar performance, however. MacDonald had another fine game adding 14 points and the third sophomore starter, Chip Triglione snared 16 rebounds to go along with his 11 points. Groux and Blackwood also reached double figures, adding 11 points apiece.

Gymnasts Get Education

The best thing that can be said about the early season schedule of the Sachem gymnasts is that it has been a learning experience.

Not a pleasant one, mind you, but definitely educational.

Lincoln-Sudbury turned back the winless Sachems Monday afternoon, 105-75. Earlier Winchester dropped meets to Masconomet Regional High School, 62-48 and Burlington, 109-71.

But as discouraging as the scores may appear, Coach Steve Hood is pleased with his club's progress, particularly his sophomore gruoup.

And besides, those three opponents are all long-time members of the post-season tournament club. Hood is not surprised that he is 0-3 at this stage. In fact, he doesn't think the slow start, as far as the win column is concerned, will really hurt his team's confidence. It's been a learning experience.

"I like to get these meets at the beginning of the year so the guys can see some of the things those kids can do now. It gives them something to shoot for. I hate to see them shellshocked later in the year. You can show them film clips and they can watch TV but it's not the same as seeing their peers do it," Hood said of the talent-laden opponents the Sachems have faced so far.

The sophomore trio of James Waite, John Doherty and Matthew Going lost by about 11 points to their more experienced Lincoln-Sudbury counterparts in the floor exercises but Hood was pleased.

Fifty percent of the score is based on form and execution of the exercise and the other half on the amount of difficulty of the exercise. The Sachem group scored in the 3's (out of a high of 10) and Hood said that was fine at this stage.

"At their level they are picking up points for the form," Hood said. "The difficulty comes later. They're all doing very well for sophomores."

Top performers for Winchester in the other events included Russell Leach in the Side Horse (3rd), Paul Abbanat in the High Bar (3rd), Dave Lawton in the parallel bars (3rd), Jonas Bjarngard in the Vault (4th) and Abbanat in the Rings (3rd).

Hood was especially encouraged with his team's performance in the vault. Abbanat compiled a 7.0 scored, and sophomores Doherty and Waite notched 6.5 and 6.25 totals. "That's a one-point difference but for soohomores that's a heck of a thing for them to do at this point. The sophomores have been doing well in the floor exercises and in the vault and that's surprising because that's what usually comes last," Hood said referring to the apparatus events.

The Masco defeat was an excruciating exercise in frustration for the Sachems, particularly Lawton, Abbanat and Paul Fuller.

That group had been working almost exclusively on the high bar in preparation for the meet and "were really looking forward to it," Hood said.

"They had really worked hard all week on the high bar and neglected the rest. Then when we got up there the high bar was broken. So there was no bar. When they saw that they all said, 'ahhh.' I groaned with them," Hood said.

With the three tough ones out of the way Hood hopes the club has learned their lessons well and can rack up a few wins. If they don't, it won't be due to a lack of exposure to the way the big boys do it.

WHS Athletic Budget To Be Presented

Winchester High School Athletic Director William Colella will present his recommendations to the School Committee Monday night on where $75,000 should be cut from next year's athletic budget.

Colella met with the coaching staff Tuesday morning and was expected to run the proposals past School Committee member Mary Jean Weylman yesterday in advance of Monday's formal presentation to the full committee. The $75,000 represents about one-third of the total athletic budget.

Although he declined to comment on specific recommendations, transportation and sub-varsity sports are expected to be hit the hardest.

The meeting will start at 7:30 at Sanborn House.

Icemen Lose To Penalty Box, Melrose

By RICHARD McSWEENEY

The 1-3 record may seem familiar. Losses like 7-1 to Lexington and last week's 6-2 defeat by Melrose might conjure up memories of seasons past. The Winchester hockey team is up to its usual tricks. Right?

Not so, says Coach Mike Houghton who feels his team could easily be 2-2 or even 3-1 and the best period of hockey any of his teams have ever played was in the first period of the 7-1 loss to Lexington.

No, Houghton says, it is not a replay of '79. And '78. And '77...

"The score wasn't any indication of the way we played," Houghton said after the Melrose game Saturday which saw the Red Raiders break open a 4-2 game in the third period and then saw both clubs get mired in a penalty-marred contest the last half of the period. "If we had played like this against Belmont (a 6-4 defeat) we definitely would have beaten them. We had a good game. We just couldn't score. We outshot them in the first period and played them evenly in the second period. It was 4-2 at the end of the second period. Next goal wins and they got it," he said.

'If we had played like this against Belmont we definitely would have beaten them. We had a good game. We just couldn't score.'
—Coach Mike Houghton

But once again against Melrose, the Sachems old bugaboo, penalties, dashed hopes of an upset. Three of the Melrose goals were on the power play, one in each period.

Melrose forward John Ferreira started the scoring in the first period while the Sachem's John Ferullo was in the box.

Steve LaMarche made it 2-0 at 4:37 but the Sachem's Jeff Stackpole, playing on the third line to give him more scoring opportunities, blasted one home from the slot to make it 2-1 at 7:59.

Melrose ripped off two more goals in the second period, one on the power play and one while both were shorthanded before Ferullo clicked on an unassisted power play chance to make it 4-2.

Superb Melrose forward Danny Muse added a pair of goals in the final frame that saw the two teams combine for 13 penalties whistled as the Red Raiders skated off with the win.

"We are doing better offensively even though it's not showing on the scoreboard," Houghton said later. "We had their goalie down and out a number of times but couldn't score. We had four on three's, five on three's but we just couldn't put it in."

Along with finding a scoring touch, Houghton says the team must learn to avoid penalties - or learn how to kill them off with a little more proficiency. In the Lexington loss the Minutemen compiled five power play goals to break open a 2-1 game in the second period.

RACING—The Sachems Tom Sullivan (dark uniform) outraces Melrose player to the puck during last week's 6-2 loss to the Red Raiders. (Staff Photo By Noreen Murphy)

"We're getting better, no question about it," Houghton said. "We're going to be a lot better than our record of the past couple of years has showed. What I want is to see a little more offense and staying out of the penalty box. And when we do get them we've got to start killing them off," he added.

Well, if the Sachems are going to become scoring sensations overnight and penalty free just as quickly, they couldn't pick a better time to do it.

After last night's game against Stoneham they have to face the likes of Wakefield on Saturday, Burlington next Wednesaday and Woburn the following Saturday.

Not the most comforting prospects.

Girls' Gymnastics Drop 2

With Girls' Gymnastics Co-Captain Carla Gulino out sick for the last two meets the Sachemettes just weren't the same and a pair of losses to a tough Belmont team and to Wakefield on Tuesday illustrated that.

"Carla has been out the last two meets and that's really hurt us," Coach Pam Rufo said of her club, which saw its record drop to 1-4 with the 90.95-82.4 loss to Wakefield. "I think yesterday (Wakefield) could have gone either wa! if we had had Carla. But I'm still pretty satisfied. We've had our tough meets early in the season so we should do better as the season goes along," Rufo said.

With Gulino missing, it was the Sarah Gagan Show for Winchester against Wakefield. She took second in the bars with a 5.25 score, first on the beam with a 5.75 and second in floor exercises to pace the Sachemettes.

The only other Winchester girl to place was Co-Captain Hayley Greenberg who grabbed second behind Gagan on the beam. winchester wide selectmen's notes

Youth Hockey Teams Kick Off Season

The Junior Division at Winchester Youth Hockey formed three teams last Friday named the Flyers (Red) Islanders (Blue) and Hawks (Yellow) with one more team to be formed next week.

In Junior Division pre-season games the Flyers defeated the Islanders 4-1 with the high Flyers being goal scorer Jim Saunders with two, Robbie Bourque and Eric Saunders while the boys assisting on these four goals were Doug Jordan and Mike Rauso with two along with Mike Jordan, Rick Walsh, John Rauseo and Matthew Olson. Sean Donlon scored the Islanders goal assisted by Rick Mawn and Mark Howard.

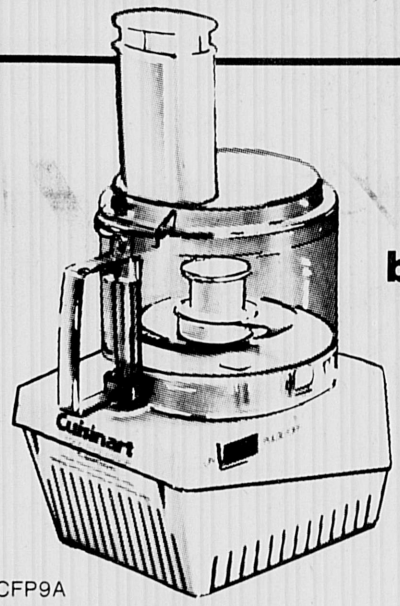

In the second game the Hawks beat the Flyers 1-0 on a rink length rush goal by John Cucinatti who was assisted by Keith McClearm and John Wadman. Playing well in goal were Kevin Marshall, Dave Durcharme and Dave Butt.

Friday the program continues as the Senior Division teams will be selected and team shirts given out by the directors. The Junior Division (six-nine years) will report at 5 p.m. and the teams will skate the last round of pre-season games before their league season starts the following week.

Registration continues through the season and a $25 deposit is expected at registration. Youngster may start in the program at anytime during the season. Goalies play at a reduced fee with equipment provided.

style USA jackets with Rivers stitched underneath it - almost turned the tables two days later.

The second time around they dropped an honorable 6-3 decision and Masiello has no doubt what the outcome would have been had the teams met a third time.

"If we had played them one more game we would have beaten them," Masiello said. "And I think we could have beaten any of these teams if we played them back here," he concluded confidently.

The National Hockey League All Stars complained a few years ago about the clever stick work the Soviets use - on the body that is, not the puck - and Rivers ran into the same stick mastery.

"They're unreal with their sticks," Masiello said. "You should see them throw them around."

And the refs didn't call a tight game?

"The refs, were, ah, very lenient towards them," Boyle grimaced.

If the play of the Russians didn't especially surprise the American kids, the reaction of the fans certainly did.

"The fans were strange. They didn't make any noise. I don't know whether they are allowed to or not but you didn't hear from them the whole game. And that was a 17-0 game. They score 17 goals and you didn't hear a thing from them," Masiello said.

If the Rivers kids thought the play was a little rough during the opening game blow-out, it was nothing compared to the 6-3 game that followed.

"They were very frustrated, you could tell," Boyle said. "They got a little more chippy than they had been."

"I think at least everybody got a stick on the of back of the neck," Masiello added. "They don't hit hard but they're dirty."

Depite some of the host's tactics, Boyle and Masiello came away impressed with the sharp passing game of the Russians. "They were a semi-pro team," Masiello said. "They were very good passers' picture perfect. Their shots weren't that hard - they never take any shots from the blue line but the way they pass..."

After a scheduling snafu canceled a game scheduled in Helsinki, Rivers went on to Stockholm, via a "Love Boat" duplicate, the Viking Line. There were 8,000 people on the boat, a disco, bars and live entertainment. It was hot stuff for a couple of high school kids, especially when it was coupled with the reaction of the Swedes and Finns traveling with them.

"All of them loved us," Masiello laughed. "It was incredible. For all of them, their dream was to come to America. They saw our jackets and they were all cheering, 'USA, USA.'"

Although Rivers also dropped both games to the Swedes, lowering their non-league slate to 0-4 (they're 2-0 in their Independent League) Boyle and Masiello both broke into the scoring column in the 9-5 and 8-5 setbacks.

Boyle notched a goal in each contest and Masiello had one in the finale. Although Sweden employs the same passing game the other European countries do, the carving majors weren't quite as evident.

"They weren't dirty at all. They were much nicer. Even when they knocked us down they'd help us up," Boyle said.

Part of that might have been because the Swedes felt like they were playing against their sons. This was also an older group, with one player being born the same year Harry Truman was elected.

Naturally, the trip was much more than hockey and the Winchester pair came away impressed with the Russian architecture. They visited the renowned Hermitage Museum in Leningrad, that takes a reported six years to complete the tour through the entire building.

And Masiello had to smile when asked if all the Swedish girls had blond hair down to their waists.

"Everything you hear about the girls over there is true," he chuckled. "But my Mom told me not to go into details about the girls."

Oh, Mom.

"I was really kind of pleased," Myers said of the first victory in '81. "We had three sophomores going pretty much the whole way. Triglione had 16 rebounds. And last year was his first year of organized ball. And MacDonald has done some good things for us. He's not that big but he's aggressive and he's pretty strong. Yeah, it was good to get that first one," Myers smiled.

Now if the cagers can get over the Lexington and Wakefield drubbings they have a couple of games they can win. One gets the impression Myers and his club will agree that it's pretty good to get that second one, too.

CAR CARE CORNER

Mario Scenna, Serv. Mgr.

Choke — this is a gadget that comes into operation automatically when the engine's cold. A cold engine needs a richer gas-air mixture to get started and to run evenly while the engine's warming up, and the choke is the dude that makes this richer mixture. Then, as the engine warms up to its normal operating temperature, the choke is supposed to gradually shut itself off. Occasionally, the choke can get out of adjustment, but its most common malfunction is sticking on and keeping the mixture rich when it's not supposed to be. We suggest that you step on the accelerator pedal two or three times before you do anything else to start the car. This will spray gasoline into the carburetor and prevent flooding also.

Travel Along with

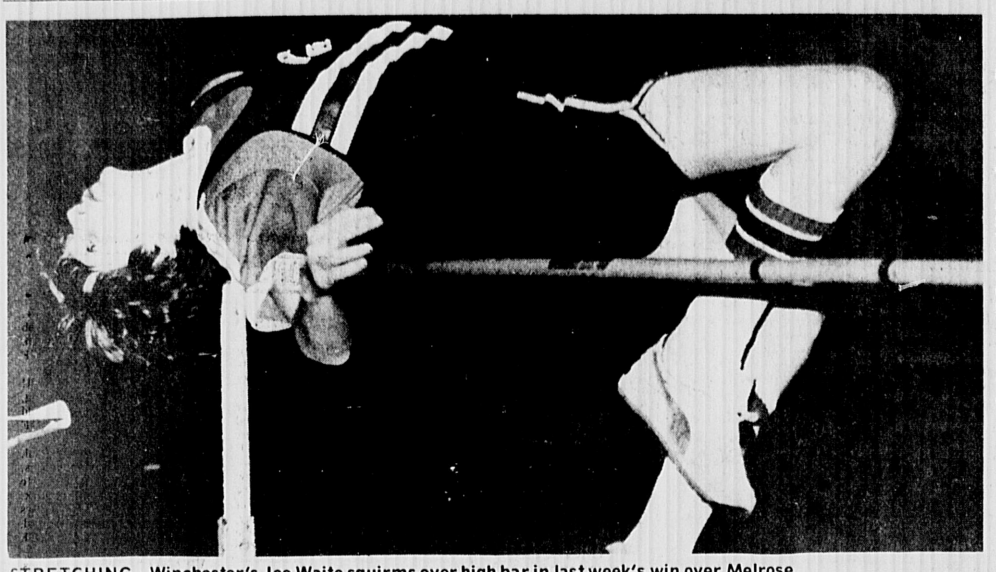

MAVIS

Hawaii is comprised of many more scenic attractions than Honolulu. The Big Island, for example, has open fields of petroglyphs. Puako is where 18th century warriors carved hundreds of these stick figures into the rocks. Making crayon on cheesecloth rubbings of these art-works will yield unusual souvenirs. The island of Mauii has numerous hiking trails, one of which leads from the Seven Pools to Waimoku Falls. The island of Kauai displays the spectacular 3600 foot deep Waimea Canyon. Add to these attractions black volcanic beaches, the Fern Grotto on Kauai and a snorkeling expedition.

Whether you are planning a vacation to Honolulu or to one of the more exotic spots in Hawaii our staff at McGRATH TRAVEL SERVICE, 14 Easton Ave., Woburn, 935-0600 look forward to making this a trip you will never forget. Sometimes we get folks coming in to see us who are not really sure where they wish to travel ... so we sit down with them and go over the marvelous travel brochures we have on hand and come up with some terrific suggestions. Open: Mon. - Fri. 9-5, Sat. and evenings by appt.

TRAVEL TIP:
On Oahu, Pali Lookout offers a sky-high view of mountains and the ocean and is steeped in mysticism.

STRETCHING—Winchester's Joe Waite squirms over high bar in last week's win over Melrose. (Staff Photo By Marc McGeehan)

The hurdles what type of day it was going to be when Wayne Ciarcia, Bob Tse and Joe Waite swept to a 1-2-3 finish.

It was more of the same in just about every other event. Mueller and Macmillan took one-two in the dash, Jacobsen and Chen 1-3 in the 600, Alcione and Kevin Sargeant 1-2 in the 300, Merritt and Wiseman 1-3 in the 1000, Donnellan and Wiseman 1-3 in the high jump, Manganaro and Lavey 1-3 in the shot, Callahan a second in the mile and Kennedy and Quine a 1-3 in the two-mile.

But it was the Melrose victory that Kline really savored. "The Melrose meet was really exciting and not just because we won," Kline laughed "It was a really close meet. Our depth won it for us."

Kline thinks the Sachems should be able to dispose of Watertown and Burlington, Winchester's next two opponents before the Big Guys square off.

Winchester battles Reading Jan. 24 and Woburn Jan. 31 in the regular season finale.

Now, if the Sachems can just make sure that Jacobsen has the lead in the relay when he gets the baton...

This Week's Sports

GIRLS' BASKETBALL - The Sachemette cagers hit the road with games at Watertown Friday and at Stoneham Tuesday. Both games will start at 3:30 p.m.

WRESTLING - The surprising grapplers have a couple of road contests, on Saturday at Wakefield (1 p.m.) and Tuesday at Belmont (7 p.m.).

HOCKEY - The icemen face Wakefield at Stoneham Saturday at 5 p.m. and Burlington at Woburn on Wednesday (6 p.m.).

GIRLS' GYMNASTICS - The Sachemette gymnasts host Lexington Friday afternoon and Watertown on Tuesday. Both meets start at 3:30 p.m.

BOYS' TRACK - The boys face Watertown Saturday (10:20 a.m.) and Burlington on Wednesday (5:45 p.m.)

Youth Hockey

To celebrate its exclusive live broadcast of the Bean Pot Hockey Tournament in February, StarCase television service is inviting future hockey greats and their dads from youth hockey clubs throughout Eastern Massachusetts to team up in January for the 1981 Father and Son Bean Pot Hockey Shootout.

The Bruins' Mike Milbury will officiate at the four event contest of precision puck shooting which will mean big prizes for the winning clubs and players and a chance in the limelight if they make the finals to be held during the Bean Pot at Boston Garden on February 9.

The contest will consist of three preliminaries at major shopping malls in the Boston area. Two-man teams of Pee Wee League players and their dads, one father and son team from each club, will shoot at various distances from the goal in an elimination contest which will send one team from each mall to the finals.

The prizes in the preliminaries are a year's free subscription to StarCase for the winning father and son and $100 cash for their club. The teams that go on to the Bean Pot will compete for $1,000 cash for their clubs and a scholarship to hockey camp for the son on the winning team.

The three preliminaries are scheduled for Hanover Mall on Jan. 20, at 6:30 p.m.; Natick Mall on Jan. 21, at 5:30 p.m.; and Liberty Tree Mall in Danvers on Jan. 28, at 6:30 p.m. Clubs interested in competing are asked to contact the coordinator of the event, Lenna Warner, in Boston at 451-0450. The competition is limited to the first 60 clubs that respond, but there are still openings for each preliminary.

WHY POINTS ON FHA–VA LOANS?

Points paid during the closing on an FHA or VA loan is the charge by lending institutions for making a loan at an interest rate below the going rate for other loans. Since the FHA or VA loan bears an interest rate below that charged for conventional loans — and because the borrower need not make a substantial down payment — the lender charges the seller an amount that would make the loan more competitive.

A point is figured at one percent of the loan amount. The number of points charged depend on the difference between the government-insured loan rate and the prevailing market rate.

The number of points charged may vary from day to day and from community to community. If money is tight, the lender is likely to charge additional points because the low down payment, Government regulations on FHA or VA home loans do not allow the buyer to pay more than one point. Any additional points are paid by the seller.

have been wiped out by pirates. Gil Gerard stars as the space hero - Erin Gray returns as his beautiful assistant and Wilfrid Hyde-White is the irascible scientist, "Dr. Goodfellow". Thom Christopher is Hawk. Nice to have Buck back.

9-10PM CBS (8 Central/Mountain) THE DUKES OF HAZZARD. Jan Clayton guest stars as Lucinda, an old flame of Uncle Jesse's.

9-11PM ABC (8 Central/Mountain) TOPPER. An update of the Thorne Smith comedy classic with Jack Warden in the title role previously essayed in the 1930's films by Roland Young and in the '50's TV series by Leo G. Carroll. About two brand new angels, Kate Jackson and off-screen hubby Andrew Stevens, who have a devil of a time getting into heaven. Fun. And how about that Kate... now she's one of Topper's angels.

Here in a contemplative mood. Watch.

SUN., JAN. 11

9-11PM ABC (8 Central/Mountain) HIGH PLAINS DRIFTER. Possibly the strangest flick that Clint Eastwood has ever made (he also directed), wherein he brings an entirely new meaning to the concept of painting the town red.

This is one revenge movie you'd better watch carefully.

MON., JAN. 12

8-11PM ABC (7 Central/Mountain) DYNASTY. A drama of passion and conflict (is there any other kind?) fueled by wealth, love and power in present-day America. Stay glued.

TUES., JAN. 13

SUN., JAN. 18

9-11:30PM ABC (8 Central/Mountain) THE CHOIR BOYS. No, America! This is not about lads in vestments! MON., JAN. 19

9-11PM CBS (8 Central/Mountain) WHO IS KILLING THE GREAT CHEFS OF EUROPE? George Segal and Jacqueline Bisset are top-billed in this comic mystery tale of murder and mayhem in the International Culinary World, but it is co-star Robert Morley who garnishes this spoofery exquisitely. A gastronomic romp for "whodunit" fans and "most" palatable for the rest.

TUES., JAN. 20

★Bus

service was not a real reflection of savings to the town. He said that after the 50 percent cost subsidy from the MBTA and fares were tabulated, the actual cost of the system for the remainder of the fiscal year would be closer to $30,000.

"It really didn't have to be cut out all together," Watros said in December. "It's a real shame that we didn't have the opportunity to make the changes in the system, changes that need a year or so. We didn't get the chance to make the fine tuning which is needed. We just didn't have it."

Watros also expressed concern over the effect of the elimination of bus service on senior citizens.

"I feel badly for the senior citizens. It's for them that we kept working all these years. For them it's not a frill. It's a chance to be useful, to do things for yourself, to be independent. That's pretty fundamental. It's for them that I feel badly."

Arlington Boys Club Co-Ed

On Jan. 2 the Arlington Boys Club completed a transition begun in 1976, and the new Arlington Boys Club will now provide co-educational programs for all age groups effective Jan. 2.

No longer will services be scheduled for girls and boys on different days. Rather, the facilities and programs will be available to youths, regardless of sex, simultaneously.

This decision by the Board of Directors is the result of two years of experimental programming and as well several years of study and planning by the Planning and Development Committee.

Opportunities will prevail for boys as well as girls to use the Club weekdays, Tuesdays through Fridays and Saturdays. The programs will begin immediately following the closing of schools and remain in effect through the evening hours.

We welcome all interested youth and adults to become members of the New Arlington Boys club.

Begin the New Year with a personal commitment to "fitness" and join your New Boys Club.

41 Give Blood At Drive

With a successful Fifth Annual Day-After-Christmas Blood Drive, the Winchester Red Cross achieved three goals.

The first goal was to collect 10 pints of B negative blood for an open heart surgery patient, the second was to collect over the chapter's monthly goal, and the third was to reach a six month increase in blood collection of 10 percent over last year. The 35 pints collected on Friday, Dec. 26 at the Chapter house on Church st. enabled the Chapter to reach all three goals.

Forty-one people presented themsleves. They were: Alice L. Bennink, Christian A. Bosselaers, Liduina J. Bosselaers, Judith Caliri, Michael J. Cashman, Rebecca Day, Arleen H. DeNutte, Stephen J. Deveney, Nancy C. Donnellan, Richard W. Dow Jr., Frances P. Elliott, Karen A. Errico, Susan J. Fitzgerald, Teresa M. Fiumara, Robert M. Gerrity, Jean L. Grote, Arthur L. Hayford, Janet R. Herrmann, Charlotte Hill, Daniel F. Hines, Patricia P. Hitchcock, Dana J. Houlihan, Brian T. Levinson, Thomas R. Maher, Nancy H. Mallio, Michael A. Marino, Paul M. McCarthy, Christopher L. Morgan, Ernestine Ravanis, Ronald H. Richburg, Said G. Signor, Helen C. Stavros, William P. O'Connor, Alice D. Osgood, John F. Waite, John J. Waite, Stephen G. Waite, Thomas E. Waite, Albert J. Wall, John T. Ward, Mary Ward.

Volunteers aiding at the drive were. RNs Joan Wallwork and Nancy Mallio, and Jeff Blank and Becky Day.

"Our efforts this year have increased blood donation in Winchester by 14 percent for the first six months. We're averaging just over 96 pints a month so far," said Bob Gerrity, Chapter executive. "But we need the continued support of our regular donors, and the increased support of new donors, during the coming six months to reach our yearly goal of 1200 pints. With your help it can be done."

The next community blood drive will be sponsored by the Girl Scouts on Thursday, Feb. 12 from 3 to 9 p.m. at the K. of C. Hall, Mt. Vernon st. If you have a child in Scouting in Winchester, mark this date on your calendar.

School Board Takes Aim At Athletic Budget

Transportation, Frosh Teams Could Go

By RICHARD McSWEENEY

There may be just one less sport offered at Winchester High School next year - golf - but the athletic program will nevertheless take on a dramatically different look if the budget proposed to the School Committee this week is approved.

And the biggest difference will be in parent's pocketbooks because traditional givens like transportation and facilities will in many instances have to be paid for directly and not just through tax money.

Athletic Director William Colella presented his proposed $75,000 budget cuts for next year Monday night and aside from the total elimination of the ninth grade program, the major cuts will dip into Mom and Dad's pockets for financial support.

The two major money cuts were the elimination of all athletic busing and the elimination of money to pay for rental of track, swimming and hockey facilities.

To counteract the elimination of busing, the administration has suggested that the four following alternatives be looked at:

- Parents drive participants.
- Students and coaches arrange a fee collecting procedure that will cover transportation costs.
- Each sport develop a booster club that will provide a solution for the particular needs of each sport.
- A booster club for the entire athletic program which would support all transportation needs.

"It will mean a bigger burden to the Athletic Director and to the coaches but we do see $21,000 here," Colella said. "So now we're going to be getting those booster clubs, something we've always been against. We've always felt if you can't run the program with money from the town then probably you shouldn't do it," Colella said.

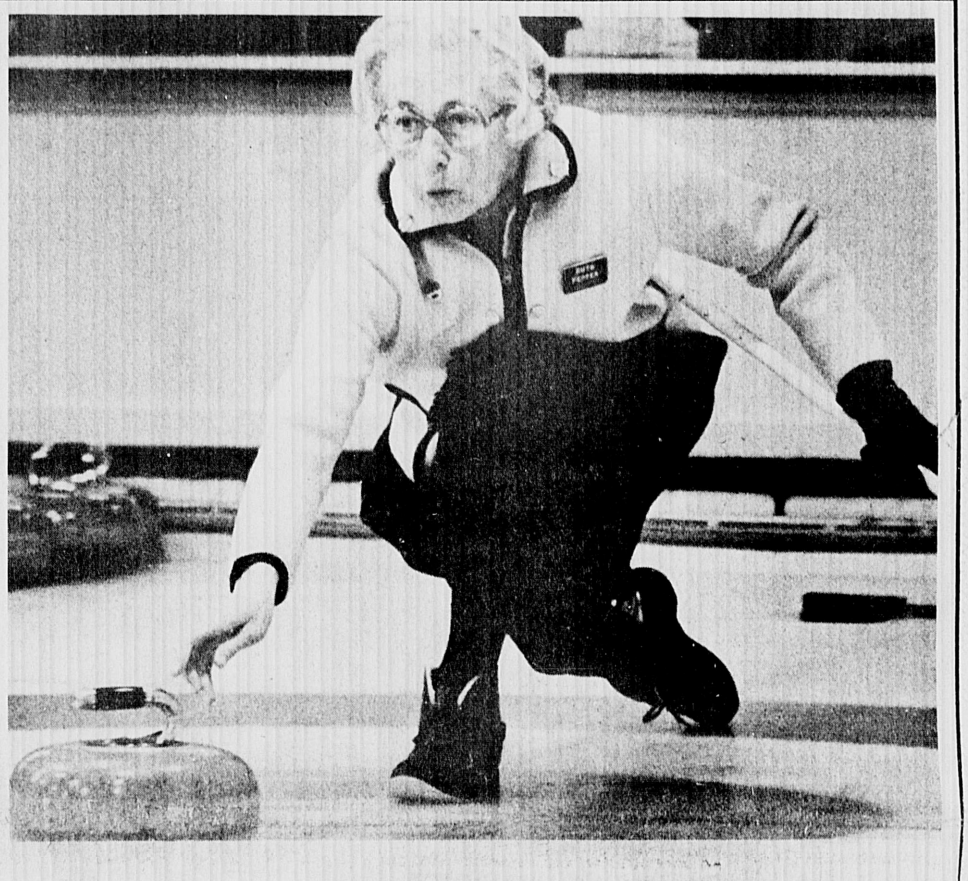

He further added that the coaches in no way should be responsible for transportation of the athletes. "If there's a game scheduled in Reading then it's the parents responsibility to get their child to the game," Colella said.

Of the four alternatives, the private carpooling was viewed as the least attractive for a variety of reasons. One was a question of personal liability if someone is injured enroute to a contest driving in their own or a friend's car. Colella said school attorneys were investigating the liability question and an opinion was expected shortly.

John Noble, father of hockey goalie Steve Noble, expressed concern about trouble after or before games if players had to provide their own education.

He said the "Big Games" like Thanksgiving Day football or other important contests can sometimes bring out the worst in fans and could threaten

Prop. 2½ The 'Last Straw' For Winchester Library Director

She likes to think of herself as one of the few remaining Horatio Algers.

When Leila-Jane Roberts began working with the Winchester Public Library in July of 1957 as a junior clerk, the lowest position in the library, she didn't expect to do it long.

"I figured I'd work there for about a year to cover some medical bills. I took the job purely to help with a financial situation," Roberts said.

Well, 23 years later she is resigning as Director of the Winchester Public Library. The junior clerk and mother of one daughter made a career in an era when mothers didn't have careers. And, as she'll plainly admit, it was the last career she ever envisioned herself spending 23 years on.

She finishes her last day at Winchester Jan. 30 and then leaves for Livingston, N.J. where she will take over the reigns of director at that library.

The major reason for her decision to make the change of scenery was twofold: First, her daughter Jane Gaylord Burr and her son-in-law live nearby and she wants to be closer to her grandchildren. But, secondly, and just as important, Prop. 2.5 has forced her to reduce her budget to the degree that she will be required to rescind many of the changes she was personally responsible for in her 13 years as library director.

"I think that 2.5 was the last straw," Roberts explained this week. "It was extremely difficult to see something you'd been working on for 13 years go down all at once. When you've had 10 years in an administrative job then you've done about what you can do. And I also thought if I was going to change I couldn't wait too much longer without becoming too unattractive," she said.

Roberts has been proud of the changes she incorporated into the library as director. One was a better division of labor between the clerical, paraprofessional and professional staffs. The professionals weren't always doing the job they were trained for. Under Roberts they usually were.

She's also played a major role in the business end of the library from the budget to making sure the storm windows fit.

But she's particularly proud of her effort to get the library open on Sundays. She had to fight with a state arbitration board seven years ago to allow the library to open on Sundays without a custodian to be responsible for the building. Her victory was a costly one. She had to work two of every three Sundays and be personally responsible for the building.

"If I did it now I think I would do it a little differently," she laughed. "So I wouldn't personally have to work two of every three Sundays."

So after having seven years of Sunday service, a day she insists was as busy as many other times during the week, it appears as if it will be no more. She has been directed to reduce her budget by approximately 40 percent.

"Now I'm afraid Sundays will be the first thing to go and I think that's too bad," sh said.

So she moves onto Livingston, a community slightly larger than Winchester and a library that hopes to expand, not cut back. And although she'll miss Winchester she won't miss the challenge of trying to make ends meet at the Winchester Library under Prop. 2.5.

Winchester, she said, has always prided herself in having better services than surrounding communities and the library was no different. That attitude may present unusual problems in light of the anticipated budget cuts.

"(Library work) is much more sophisticated today. Winchester likes to put in a very sophisticated system and then they often can't afford to pay for it. And that's about where we are today. It is going to be a different library," Roberts said.

Whatever happens to the Winchester Library, it will miss the perserverance and dedication that Roberts displayed in her 23 years at the library.

She has been a fighter for all her life. After successfully battling polio when she moved to Winchester at eight years of age she went through the Winchester Public Schools and promptly enrolled at Oberlin College in Ohio, much to her mother's consternation.

Her mother had always wanted her to get into an eastern college and when the family moved to Winchester she figured there could be no doubt that she would go to one of the fine nearby eastern colleges.

So when she enrolled at Oberlin, "the first college to admit women and Blacks, she was disgusted," Roberts laughs now.

In 1945 she returned to Massachusetts as a teacher at the all-girl Northfield School, after discarding the possibility of going to teach in China. "That almost threw the family completely," she smiled again.

After leaving that post because there was "too much of an all-female atmosphere" she left the work force for

Sporting Weekend

It was a busy weekend for Winchester sports. On Friday night, the Sachem basketball team took the Watertown team to the wire before pulling out an exciting one-point victory, the second of the season for WHS. Sachem forward Blair Bradley (right) roars past Watertown's Brian Harvey (12).

And throughout the weekend, two Winchester curling teams were in action at the country club. Ruth Pepper, above, throws the stone in the Winchester No. 2 team's victory Saturday over Gloucester, RI. Neither Winchester No. 1 (John Koslowski, Nancy Wunder, Buzz and Pat Burroughs) nor Winchester No. 2 (Edward and Ruth Pepper, Robert and Rose Thorson) were among the winners or runners-up of the three-day tournament.

Crime 'Runs Spectrum' In Winchester In 1980

While burglaries are Winchester's biggest crime, Police Chief John McHugh said last week that crime in the town "runs the spectrum, from one to 100."

In his annual report to the Board of Selectmen, McHugh said there were 192 arrests in Winchester during 1980.

"These are actual physical arrests," McHugh said. Of that number the majority, 171, were men. Twenty women were arrested by Winchester police last year, the report said.

Arrests of residents out numbered non residents by five, with 98 residents arrested. Juvenile arrests in town totalled 18.

According to McHugh's annual report, liquor law violations accounted for the greatest number of arrests last year, totalling 46, followed by arrests for operating a motor vehicle under the influence, which reached 28 in 1980.

Breaking and entering offenses accounted for 24 arrests while idle and disorderly conduct charges accounted for 20.

Seventeen warrants arrests were made last year while 13 arrests were made for vandalism.

Arrests for the use of a motor vehicle without authority totalled 12 while there were eight arrests for larceny.

Robberies and firearm law violations accounted for six arrests in each category while there were four arrests for assault and battery.

There were five arrests made due to narcotic law violations. There were two arrests made under the offenses versus family category according to the report.

Larceny of automobiles is also a problem town police face. In 1980, McHugh said, there were 93 automobiles stolen in Winchester. So far, the Chief explained, there have been only 12 arrests.

"The success ratio ranges from 10 to 20 percent" in arrests of those responsible for the thefts, McHugh said.

However, while the town does have a certain amount of crime with which to deal, McHugh sees the department's role as not limited to simply arrests and crime solving.

"The role of the Police Department is one of a service organization," McHugh explained. "There are times when we answer calls that are not necessarily crime. The incidents may be annoying or disturbing but they are not always crime."

"In that respect," McHugh said, " we provide a service. We're an agency that has a responsibility to respond to legitimate requests by the community.

"Each call has the potential for being a crime of some magnitude yet the bulk of the calls are those where our mere presence either reassures people" or corrects the situation, he said.

Of youth-related activity, McHugh said most calls involve traffic violations or excessive speed.

Other problem areas on youth calls include noise, parking littering.

Some problems can result fr parties where individuals attend w have not been invited.

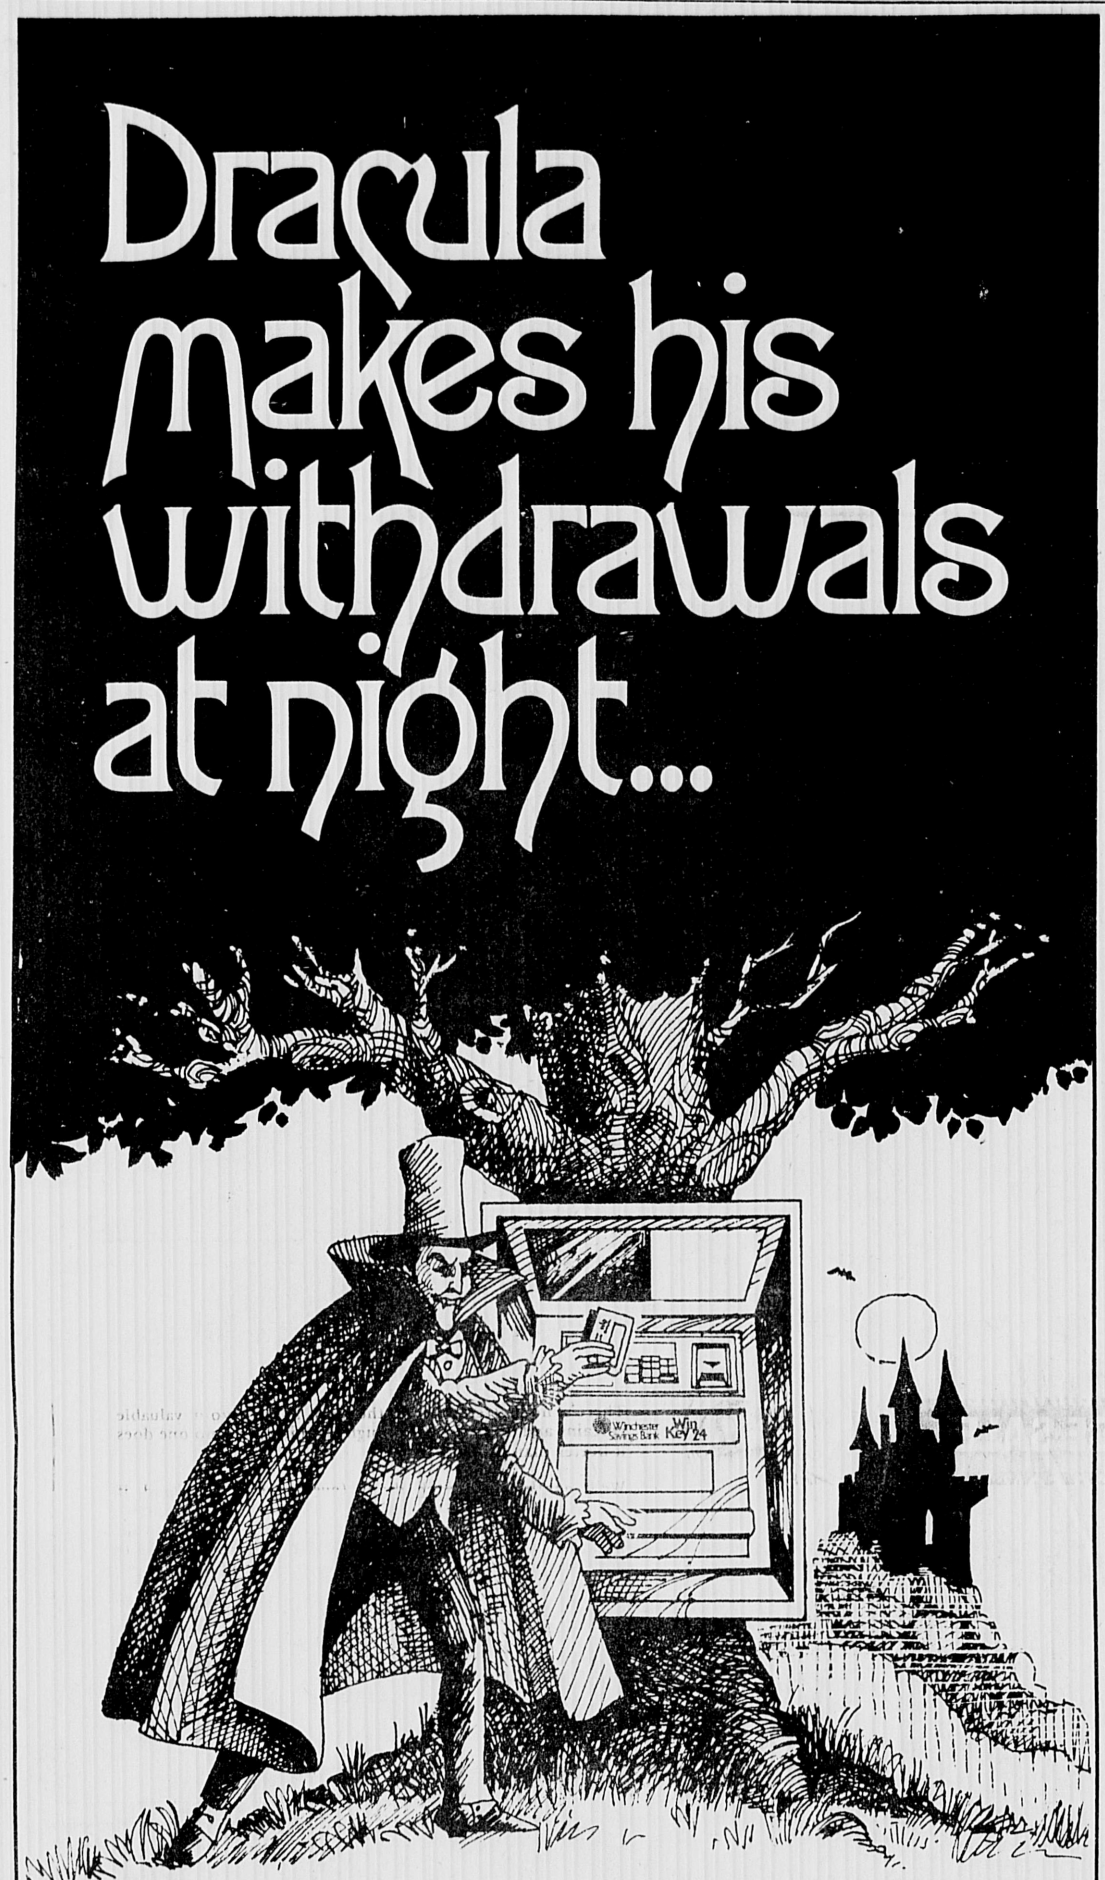

"The general youth problem here no different from other suburban co munities," McHugh said. "Still, it i very small percentage that consistar become involved in malicious activit

"Alcohol (abuse) is a very defi problem for police" in dealing with a youth, McHugh said.

Elderly Housing

The Home Sharing Program of the Woburn Council of Social Concern and the Protective Services Program for the Elderly of Minuteman Home Care Corporation are appealing to the community to help alleviate the great need for short-term, emergency shelter for elderly persons in crisis. The Home Sharing Program and the Protective Services Program are both federally funded and service the sixteen towns in Minuteman Home Care's service area.

Due to various life circumstances, ranging from disasters such as fire or broken heating systems to exorbitant rent increases which leave some apartment dwellers homeless, people are sometimes left with nowhere to live. There is virtually no emergency shelter or temporary housing available in the Minuteman service area.

Although the Home Sharing Program was not originally designed for emergencies, it has been able to provide temporary shelter in several crisis situations. If more people will offer to share their homes on a temporary basis, the lack of emergency housing can be greatly alleviated. Financial compensation is available for the homeowner, as well as support services from the Home Sharing Program social worker, Jean Gardella.

If any readers feel able to open their homes and their hearts to elderly persons in need of temporary shelter, please call Jean Gardella at 935-6495.

Winton Cabaret Includes 'Real' Drill Jan. 27-31

The grand climax of the first act of Winton Club Cabarets is the club members' drill, and in recent years these ladies have been everything from space dwellers to tennis players.

However, this year Director Chris Brown says there will be a "real" drill, meaning that there will be full military pageantry along with the sparkle of costumes and performing dancers.

The nautical plot of this year's Cabaret "Sea Scape" will be carried through in the drill when an emergency at sea requires calling out the Coast Guard. The stirring march "Semper Paratus," the Coast Guard's anthem, will provide the rhythm for sixteen Winton Club members to step through an impressive and intricate drill routine that will ring to the rafters of Winchester Town Hall Jan. 27-31.

Special effects will add an unusual flare to the performance, and drill members are working four days a week all through January to perfect their routine.

Mrs. Robert T. Joyce is in charge of the Winton Club drill "team" which is composed of Mrs. Stephen L. Powers, Mrs. John D. Coakley, Mrs. Robert A. McIndoe, Mrs. Joshua Lombard, Mrs. Anthony Philip Nowicki, Mrs. F. Robert Johnson, Mrs. Evander French, Jr., Mrs. Karl Sorger, Mrs. John H. Culver, Mrs. Lawrence Baruffaldi, Mrs. John Pierce, Mrs. Paul F. Gleason, Mrs. Richard P. Santos, Mrs. Edwin H. Porter, Jr., Mrs. Albert F. Kennedy, Mrs. Edward D. Fitzgerald, and alternate, Mrs. Lane McGovern.

Hanson Receives RCA Award

Richard E. Hanson was one of three RCA Automated Systems engineers who recently received RCA's highest technical honor, the 1980 David Sarnoff Award for Outstanding Technical Achievement.

The three engineers were cited "for outstanding contributions to the design and development of unique and extremely effective Simplified Test Equipment for Internal Combustion Engines."

The system replaces many existing test equipment and eliminates testing by "parts substitution." The unit is adaptable to other vehicles without change and to future vehicles with software changes.

Hanson, Manager, Design Engineering, was born in Winchester and attended Winchester public schools, graduating from Winchester High School in 1963. He received BSME and BSEE degrees from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute and a MSEE degree from Northeastern University. He expects to complete the studies for a MBA degree next spring at Northeastern University.

Hanson is married to the former Cheryl Baldwin of Wellesley. They have two children, Eric and Kristin. They lived on Prince avenue until moving to Acton, a year ago.

Hanson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. P. Roland Hanson who were residents of Prince avenue for thirty-seven years until they retired to Kingston, N.H. in 1978.

Deskin, the son of Mr. and Mrs. R.C. Deskin of 397 Highland ave., is a senior chemical engineering student at Rice and will graduate in the spring of 1981 with a B.S. degree. He resides in Richardson College where he also serves as president.

Rotary Raises $2,000 For Victims

A check for $2,000 for relief of earthquake victims in Italy was presented at the Winchester Rotary luncheon on Jan. 8, to Harry Mallet, past District Governor of Rotary. Mallet will send the check to Rotary District 210 which encompasses that area in Italy which was devasted by the November earthquake.

More than 100,000 survivors of the earthquake now live in tents and mobile homes. A recent three-day snowfall, which in some areas is the first snow in 20 years, has been accompanied by temperatures as low as zero. Supply roads have been blocked to the area.

The Rotary Club has an on-going fund raising project for people in need, and resources for the fund are derived from weekly Rotary Barn sales, and from the club's yearly auction.

three years to have her daughter. She returned to work in 1949 in jobs ranging from IBM Systems Analyst to an English teacher at Winchester High School before joining the library in 1957.

Although the work of a junior clerk didn't exactly impress her, she was promoted to Head of Circulationa and Young Adult Librarian in 1960, and, as they say in show business, she was hooked.

"Once I got on the professional side of it I decided that's what I wanted," she said. "I said I guess I'm the last of the Horatio Algers, starting from the bottom," she laughed.

The petite, smiling woman sitting at the desk, now saddled with a broken arm suffered in a recent fall, doesn't look like the aggressive go-getter her past indicates that she is. But anyone that knows Leila-Jane Roberts, knows she's a battler from way back.

Proposed School Cuts Hit McCall, Elementary Guidance

The Guidance Department continues to be one of the focal points of the proposed school cuts as both the elementary and McCall Guidance Department received heavy support at last week's school committee budget hearing.

The administration is recommending that all three elementary counselors and all the McCall guidance services be eliminated.

The elimination of guidance services at the elementary level will save $60,000 and at McCall $50,000 will be saved. The McCall counselors were not on the original administration list of cuts but were recommended after the School Committee rejected the five-course cap at the high school.

Once the cap was rejected $74,000 had to be cut to compensate. Guidance at McCall, a custodian at McCall ($13,000) and the no longer needed study hall monitors at the high school ($11,000) comprised the $74,000 alternative.

Although the committee had taken a sense of the board vote earlier in the week to reject the five-course cap, committee member Constance Papas, who had been out of the room at the time of the sense of the board vote, said she had serious reservations about eliminating the McCall guidance services.

She said she thought the idea of saving at sixth course for high school students at the expense of the McCall guidance counselors might not be a wise one.

"I'm afraid we're not making a valid trade-off," Papas said. College requirements, in most instances, are for four courses, she added, and five is considered "a luxury" and six the "heavy cream."

The proposed elimination of the elementary guidance counselors also drew strong suppport. Director of Special Education Winchester Schools, Frank Bianco, likened the effects of eliminating the elementary guidance to that of not maintaining a car properly. "You can pay now or pay later. I'm afraid of the impact the elimination of guidance counselors will have on Special Ed.," Bianco said.

Frank suggested that the substitute budget be looked at as an alternative to saving some guidance services at the junior high.

"I don't think there are any pretenses that there is any education going on," when substitutes are teaching a class, Frank said.

So when a teacher is out, instead of having one substitute for every individual class, put 50 to 75 children in one area to be supervised by one substitute, Frank suggested.

McCall Principal Robert Fitzgerald defended the work of the substitutes.

"I've been very pleased with the type of substitutes we get at McCall and the work that gets done," he said. "To suggest that it isn't all that important is just the thing the kids need to go all hell bent of leather."

The substitute budget for McCall this year is $18,000.

Other cuts scheduled for McCall include the elimination of 3.2 teachers due to declining enrollment (the administration is projecting a drop of 30 students next year) as well as the elimination of part-time social workers and proctors for a $7,000 savings.

Major cuts at the elementary level were 7.5 teaching positions because of declining enrollment and an additional 7.3 teacher specialists for a savings of $146,000.

The reduction of specialists in music, art and Physical Education drew the most heated opposition from the overflow crowd in the crammed quarters at Sanborn House.

The changes in those three subjects were listed by School Committee Alexander:

MUSIC - Vocal instruction would be changed to General Music and would be reduced to one 30-minute class bi-weekly. Currently, Grades 1-2 have two 30-minute sessions per week and students in grades 3-6 have one 30-minute session per week.

CHORUS - Chorus would be reduced from one session per week for grades 5-6 to one bi-weekly session for the same grades.

INSTRUMENTAL INSTRUCTION - Instrumental instruction would be halved from 10 sessions per week, per building for grades 4-6 to five for the same grades.

ART - Art would be reduced from weekly, one-hour classes to bi-weekly one-hour sessions.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION - Physical education would be cut in half from two half-hour weekly sessions to one for grades one through six.

School Committee member John Duffy suggested that such a large reduction in the frequency of music instruction made it necessary to determine if it was feasible to have the classes, at all.

"It's something like getting up every other Saturday morning to jog for five miles. When you have to reinvent the wheel every other week then it will be frustrating for everyone," Duffy said.

Curriculum Director David Ackerman recommended that the committee consider continuing the current level of instruction for half a year as opposed to the sporadic bi-weekly sessions throughout the year.

MacDonald said his original recommendation was to eliminate the entire specialist budget but was persuaded against it by the elementary principals.

Resident Mimi Black urged that the committee consider making high school athletics pay as you go as other communities have talked about. She argued that Winchester would probably produce musicians and artists. The same could not be said for professional athletes, she added. Athletics is an extracurricular activity she insisted, not something like art and music that people will enjoy their whole life.

Physical Education director Jan Dolan also expressed dismay at the possible reduction in the elementary athletic budget.

"It is a responsible educational program. It claims to do an awful lot of things. Not only does it claim it, it does it," she said. "The key contribution, the unique value of physical education is the development of a healthy human being. No other course has that as an objective," she added.

The committee will continue to delay discussion of school closings until the Committee to Study School Closings completes its recommendations. The committee made up of Business Manager Jack Fallon, Data Processing Director Art Sarno, elementary principal Martha Grenzeback and MacDonald. The committee met for the first time on Jan. 6.

Public Hearing

The annual public hearing on the 1982 Winchester Public School budget is scheduled for Jan. 22 at Sanborn House starting at 7:30. For a full look at the budget as proposed by the administration see Page 10.

WHS Students See Puppet Show On Handicaps

The Winchester High Home Economics Department Early Childhood class was visited by the "Kids on the Block" on Friday, Jan. 9.

Arrangements were made by teacher, Virginia Laats for this Junior League of Boston, Inc. presentation.

Using life-size puppets, three League volunteers, Pat Dibella of Belmont, Margery Yearout of Weston and Susan Bell of Wayland, presented short skits. Puppet, Ellen Jane, represented a 15 year old Downs syndrome person who became friends with nine-year-old "normal" Melody.

The purpose of the skits is to help children and adults learn that even though the handicapped are different, they can lead full, satisfying lives and are very much the same as other children. Other handicapped "Kids on the Block" include a deaf puppet, a blind puppet, and a multiple sclerosis puppet complete with wheel chair.

Final School Budget Meeting Monday

The School Committee will hold the last of its preliminary 1982 budget hearings Monday evening in preparation for Thursday's annual public hearing on the total school budget.

Scheduled for discussion Monday night at Sanborn House are the School Lunch Program, the Community Use of Schools, Summer School, Community Programs, equipment and other expenses, primarily energy costs.

This will be the last of five scheduled meetings to discuss a proposed $1.4 million cut in the school budget for next year due to Prop. 2.5. In earlier meetings the elementary, junior high and high school budgets were discussed along with high school athletics and special education.

The annual public hearing on the entire proposed school budget, which in the past has been poorly attended, will be held Jan. 22 at Sanborn House.

Junior Library Plans Special Film Program

The Winchester Junior Library has planned a special film program for preschool children. The series will open on Jan. 22 and run for three weeks. Showings start at 1:30 p.m. and last for half an hour. This is a "drop-in" event, held in the Story Hour Room.

Jan. 19 will be the first day of registration for the Pre-School Story Time which will commence Feb. 24. It is necessary to come to the library to sign up four-year-olds, or those children who will turn four by June 1.

Sessions are scheduled for Tuesday and Wednesday mornings and for Wednesday afternoons. The program consists of 45 minutes of stories, games, finger plays and films. For further information please contact the Junior Library at 729-5340.

Arlington Boys Club News

The new Arlington Boys Club opened its doors to complete the co-educational transition on Jan. 2, after four years of planning and experimentation.

"The transition has been a smooth one so far" commented Operations Manager Brian Crowley after the first week. "We still have quite a bit of realigning of programs to complete. The best way to approach this is on a trial and error basis. Some areas will require a great deal of change while others won't need much at all. Both the staff and members are very enthusiastic about the new Arlington Boys Club. The members especially like having the opportunity of being able to come any day Tuesday through Saturday.

The Leaders Club announces that they will be running a Penny Carnival for Boys Club members between the ages of seven and 11 on Jan. 17 at 10:30 a.m. This popular event includes contests, candy prizes and a great deal of fun and excitement. Bring your pennies, join in on the fun and win some prizes. The Penny Carnival will be held in the Junior Games Room.

Crawling, jumping, balancing and fitness are all ingredients for our upcoming special event to be held in the gym on Jan. 23 at 7:30. This is when the always popular Obstacle Course will be held for girl and boy members. The youngsters will be divided into three age groups, 7 and 8, 9 and 10, and 11 and 12. The top boy and girl finishers in each age group will receive a prize. Don't miss the Obstacle Course which promises to be a lot of fun for everyone.

There is still time to take part in our Annual Swimathon which will be held on Jan. 24 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. This is your chance to help your Boys Club and to enjoy yourself while doing it. Participants receive exclusive use of the Club, a free lunch and a special gift. The club will be closed for all other programs on Jan. 24. Anyone interested in being part of this important fund raiser should see Brian or Beth Phinney at the Boys Club.

Both the Intermediate (ages 12 and over) and Junior (ages 7-11) Games Rooms are now featuring on going tournaments. The name of the game is fun whether you enjoy pool, bumper pool, ping pong, table soccer, air hockey, darts or all of the above. You are invited to join in on any of these daily tournaments. You don't have to be here everyday to be part of it.

The Oasis Snack Bar, located in the Junior Games Room, is now open every Saturday from 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. The Oasis features pizza, hot dogs, fried dough, buttered popcorn, cold drinks and candy all at reasonable prices. Why not treat yourself to a delicious lunch on Saturdays. Club members Mike Vigeant and Sean Riley, are there every Saturday to serve you.

Membership in the new Arlington Boys Club is open to anyone from seven years of age through senior citizens. For further information drop in and see us or call 648-1617.

Letters From Readers

No Census

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

This letter is to protest the needless waste of Winchester city money involved in conducting a "town census." This is the time when we are all faced with cuts of police, fire, transportation and local school services.

It seems incredible that the city could waste countless bureaucratic dollars and public employee hours in this way. The accuracy of any census based on voluntary response in our mobile society must be questioned. Our city is willing to [illegible]usands of tax dollars making phone calls to people who don't respond by mail, while at the same time it is perfectly willing to eliminate the mini-bus and our high school newspaper. It seems that things like this census were exactly the kind of bureaucratic garbage the voters demanded to eliminate when they passed Prop. 2½.

Mark A. Conover, D.D.S., M.S.

Rotondi Blasted

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

In last week's issue of The Star, you printed an editorial about Senator Sam Rotondi and his hard work to get the Reorganization Bill for the MBTA passed. You also praised him for his stand against the "powerful Carmen's Union." Now Sam must know the law, yet he led the fight against the Union for passage of the Bill to give MBTA Management absolute power in hiring, overtime, and one-guard trains. Thursday Judge Young ruled against the Legislators and stated that the contract which the unions are working under is a valid one. Therefore, the Reorganization Bill which Senator Rotondi fought so hard for was illegal.

Was this just a show put on by our Senator for the public's benefit, or did he really believe that the Carmen's contract with the MBTA is only valid for the items which management wants?

Jack O'Neill
Member, MBTA Carmen's Union

Fox Hunt

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The town Foxes running from the barn with chickens in their mouths are not qualified to be the people's Judge and Jury.

Ralph Marchesi

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I was up in the country for the week end this week. The lady I was visiting received her light bill. I was amazed at this woman's light bill. The fuel adjustment was $71.54 for a four room cape cottage.

This is ridculous. With light bill for 1 month $119. These are poor working people. Fair share should investigate this. This house is not heated with electric heat. Gas is also bad. What about fuel for our working poor. Groceries are soaring and don't tell me you can get by on minimum wage.

Our working class is discouraged and no wonder.

Now about our elderly who are trying to stay in their own houses. No help for fuel. No help for other bills such as food, lights, gas, etc.

What irks me is that our politicians get free hospitalization, free expense accounts, aren't satisfied with their big raise of 22½ percent that Mr. Carter was going to sign last week.

They must know the poor are suffering, but who cares. I know the politicians need two or three cars, expense accounts, etc., vacations, Caddys. We don't need anything.

Maybe if things get too bad we can all pitch a tent and have tent city.

Louise Chase

Specialist Needed

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The proposed cuts in the Winchester High School curriculum include the position of reading specialist. The present specialist is the only certified reading specialist in the high school, and thus the functioning of the reading specialist is part of the English curriculum. The specialist supports students as they work in the classroom and provides reading instruction for disabled students.

Students can be greatly helped with a diagnostic-prescriptive program. Examples drawn from recent pre-and post-testing substantiate this claim. Students A through G ranged from the 27th to the 60th percentile in the pre-test. After implementing prescriptions to meet needs, reading scores increased significantly.

	Pre Test Score	Post Test Score	Increase
Student A	60	93	(+33)
Student B	40	87	(+47)
Student C	27	73	(+46)
Student D	67	87	(+20)
Student E	40	60	(+20)
Student F	40	100	(+60)
Student G	60	100	(+40)

If the reading specialist is eliminated, there will be no certified specialist in the high school to assist such students.

Miriam Reid
Reading Specialist

A Flurry Of Joggers

By Mary Cresse

The porch thermostat registers fifteen degrees, the wind chill factor is -3, and the pallid beige figure of what appears to be a 75-year old trudging along Cambridge st. is wearing nothing but nylon stretch shorts, a fishnet shirt, and white gloves.

White gloves.

Is he a male candidate for Kathie Gibbs with a circulation problem?

Is he a Hindu guru who has transcendentally absolved all susceptibility to physical pain?

Nope.

What else could he be but a jogger, one of the hundreds of Winchester' itness freaks striving to set the world on fire with cushioned arch supports and a pair of lady Cortezes.

Beware.

They are somewhat of a strange breed those joggers.

They think they're alone, but one sees them, congregating in the back room of the Running Racquet, conspiring to replace the Chrissie Evert tennis shoes with brand new Nikes.

You have to admire their courage, not the jogging, that's easy. Any 65 year old with fallen arches and ingrown toenails could do that.

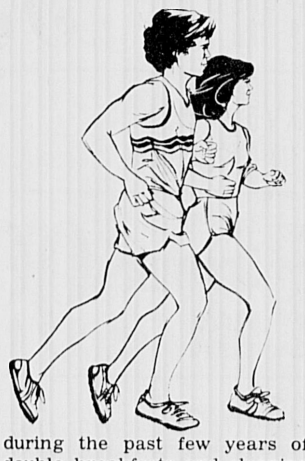

I'm referring to the way they dress.

I sometimes wonder if they pass the mirror before their daily run. I bet they don't.

Usually a certain type of jogger is associated with certain apparel which allows an easy system of categorizing them.

First, there is

The HARRIED HOUSEWIFE, who has, for nearly nine years, tried to erase those "saddle bags" which have slowly but steadily increased during the past few years of double breakfasts and cleaning off junior's plate, "so all that food won't go to waste." She is usually clad in Danskin stretch pants, a pair of hubby's sweatsocks, and old tennis shoes with Junior's sweatshirt hiding the middle age bulge, mommms on her way.

Then one sees

The TRACK STAR, who is unmistakably a WHS varsity starter wearing nothing that doesn't shout "Winchester Athletic Dept," and a pair of well worn nylon Nikes. Usually this type is sickeningly All-American looking, and is running four miles a day, "just for the fun of it."

Next, comes

The STUMBLER, who does exactly that, and gets nowhere in the process. He is usually a middle-aged beer guzzler and Patriots fan who jogs at the insistence of his wife, and usually wheezes to the nearest bar or packy to obtain a Michelob fix to carry him home.

Ane one can't forget

The SERIOUS RUNNER, who occasionally grants passersby a drawn-out "hoi" in reply to their friendly greetings. He is almost always a stuffy intellectual who prefers Bill Moyer's Journal to "those awful commercial, mindless, programs" such as Laverne and Shirley and Mork. He is undoubtedly a vegetarian, who survives his hopelessly professional characteristics with an occasional off-beat remark. He jogs because "it's organically stimulating," and pushes "no nukes, no nukes."

Last, and certainly least, we might like to forget

The OCTOGENARIAN, the crusty, superbly healthy citizens who thrive on Puritan Oil and Geritol, and do knee bends while watching Lawrence Welk.

Their hobbies include gardening, feeding the tropical fish, and occasionally minding the grandkids. They have turned to exercise to awaken themselves to their environment, and are probably the sharpest ones on the block. If healthy enough, they will trip cats and hop over baby carriges in a single bound.

I think I've just about covered them. They appear at the break of dawn and, much to the dislike of motorists, trudge, plod, stride and stomp their way through the streets of Winchester.

I don't mind them, actually. When a human advertisement for Adidas wearing nothing but Poly-flex crosses my path, however, I often suppress the urge to "accidentally" let the wheel slip, and stop them dead in their tracks.

I can't help it. I'm not feeling seven up, and I can quite enjoyably sit home, dressed normally, and watch so I enjoy the show. "Look at me, I'm jogging." I find it rather amusing.

A Kingdom Of Attic Junk

By TERRY MAROTTA

I was up in the attic the other day, storing the Christmas stuff away I guess it was, and I got to looking around. There were the two broken window fans that buzz menacingly when turned on, though circulating the air is an achievement completely beyond them. Here were all those mouse-nibbled department store boxes craftily saved with an eye to passing off Marshall's merchandise as the sumptuous offspring of Bloomingdale's and Saks. Over there was a disemboweled beanbag chair, beached like the carcass of a whale under the eaves...

I got to thinking as I surveyed this fiefdom of junk: we Americans don't have the faintest idea anymore of what to save and what to throw away.

In the old days the guidelines were clear. It was all saved. The womenfolk turned the collars on their families' shirts, darned the holes, and when the things were nearly transparent with wear, tore them up for cleaning cloths, carefully snipping and saving the buttons first.

Yankee frugality flourished right up through the second World War. People saved string and tin foil. They made frothy green stews, like egg nogs gone extravagantly bad, with the slivers of old soap. Knickers and warm hats with earflaps were handed down from one child to the next.

But then came the disposable era, and all our values were stood on their heads.

It started, I suppose, with Kleenex. Then came Pampers. Now it's all made to be used and tossed out: the razor, the pen, even the flashlight. You can't buy replacement parts for these disposable items anymore, and, the message is, you shouldn't want to.

Besides creating a mountain of unnecessary trash, all this throwaway merchandise has spawned deep feelings of unease in most of us. We react schizophrenically, hoarding with one hand and discarding with the other. The choice of what to save and what to dispose of is arbitrary, subjective and often irrational.

Some throw out perfectly functioning black-and-white TV's, but then they saw a bathtub in half, upend it on the lawn and create a grott-shrine for the Virgin Mary. I know one guy who axed his daughter's baby furniture for firewood, no packrat he. But then I know someone else who saved all her son's toys and teddies from 1948, and wrapped a dozen white linen playsuits lovingly in tissue paper for that ex-baby's offspring to one day use. Do you know anyone of any age who wears white linen playsuits anymore? I mean, besides Truman Capote?

It doesn't seem to matter if the choices are sensible or not in the process of selection. The sheer volume of stuff that passes through our hands each year is staggering. That we can winnow it at all saves us from a spinning sense of vertigo.

Many people seem to find small gestures or resistance particularly comforting in the absence of abiding principles of conservation. Some, like me for example, will refuse to purchase a certain disposable item as a matter of principle. I take my stand by writing with a fountain pen, diapering with cloth and religiously avoiding those little snacking cakes that you mix, bake, and serve in the same silver cardboard pan.

But do I stand on some consistent barricade of frugal husbandry and recycling? I do not. I throw away perfectly good shoes scarcely worn, those handy little tubs that margerine comes in, and, every chance I get, Tinker Toy parts and mateless socks.

The point is we are deeply in conflict about the proliferation of Things in our lives. It troubles us, I think, even the most purchase-addicted of us, to go through cars and toasters, radios and tennis balls at such an alarming rate. It's no joke about this being a disposable culture. Any realtor can tell you that the average American is in a constant flurry of moving out of one house and into another. Some folks move out of and into marriages with a commensurate frequency. Having too much, coveting the stuff in the first place, acquiring it, tiring of it, and chucking it can't be very good for us in the end. And isn't it silly really, to be saving paper clips in an old band box in the junk drawer and then go to the store and use no less than eight plastic bags for gathering your produce, only to come home and throw them away?

I think I'll be glad if it turns out that this really is the dawn of an era of limits — if the boom years are over and we can slow down the getting and spending for a while. It may be a relief.

I want to be able to save sensibly in the future, and to throw away with equal sense. Maybe my attic will still burst at the seams but not with more monuments to planned obsolescence.

Let burst with the important stuff: Christmas decorations, a crumbling corsage and maybe a white linen playsuit or two.

The Proposed 1982 School Budget

The proposed School Budget for Fiscal Year 1982 is shown below in summarized form. Details to this budget may be examined at the Office of the Superintendent of Schools during regular business hours. On January 22, 1981, the School Committee will hold a public hearing at 7:30 p.m. at Sanborn House (15 High st.) to discuss this proposed budget.

Note 1. The FY '81 budget is presented as voted by the 1980 Spring Town Meeting. It does not reflect actions taken at subsequent Town Meetings which modified the original budget. These actions were:
A. Add to the School Budget an amount, $399,239, to provide for obligations negotiated with the Winchester Education Association and the Winchester School Food Services Association.
B. Reduce the School Budget by $174,145, to meet the requirements of the Town Meeting in response to Proposition 2½ (loss of excise tax revenue).
The net effect to the FY '81 budget would be to raise the total by $225,094 and increase the total net decrease from $168,093 to $393,187.
Note 2. The proposed FY '82 School Budget does not include any potential costs associated with current collective bargaining with principals, secretaries and custodians.

Groups Appeal For Elderly Housing

The Home Sharing Program of the Woburn Council of Social Concern and the Protective Services Program for the Elderly of Minuteman Home Care Corporation are appealing for help to alleviate the need for short-term, emergency shelter for elderly persons in crisis. The Home Sharing Program and the Protective Services Program are both federally funded and service the 16 towns in Minuteman Home Care's service area.

Due to various life circumstances, ranging from disasters such as fire or broken heating systems to rent increases which leave some apartment dwellers homeless, people are sometimes left with nowhere to live. There is virtually no emergency shelter or temporary housing available in the Minuteman service area.

Although the Home Sharing Program was not originally designed for emergencies, it has been able to provide temporary shelter in several crisis situations. If more people will offer to share their homes on a temporary basis, the lack of emergency housing can be greatly alleviated. Financial compensation is available for the homeowner, as well as support services from the Home Sharing Program social worker, Jean Gardella.

If any residents can open their homes to elderly persons in need of temporary shelter, please call Jean Gardella at 935-6495.

WHS Paper Presents Magic Show Saturday

The Red and Black of Winchester High School will present "The Cavalcade of Mystery" Saturday in the Winchester High School Auditorium.

There will be an afternoon performance at 2:30 p.m. and an evening performance at 7:30 p.m. "The Cavalcade of Mystery" stars Master Magician, Richard Volcane; Buddy Richardson as Puki, The Clown Prince of Magic and Marlene Wishart, The First Lady of Magic.

Tickets for the Bargain Matinee are $1 for Children and Students under 12, $1.50 for Junior High and High School Students and $2 for Adults. Tickets for the Evening Performance are $1.50 for Children and Students under 12, $2 for Junior High and High School Students, and $2.50 for Adults. Senior Citizens will be admitted for the children ticket price. Advance tickets are available from The Ticket Committee of The Red and Black at Winchester High School; and at McCormack's Apothecary, 568 Main Street, Winchester; and The News Shop, 542 Main Street, Winchester. Tickets will also be available at the door.

The staff of the Red and Black requests that anyone planning to attend one of the performances try to buy their tickets in advance as The Red and Black works with the show on a percentage arrangement and The Red and Black makes more money from the advance sales of tickets.

"The Cavalcade of Mystery" is beginning its 32nd year of touring and is a 90-minute production that is one of the largest magic revues on tour in America and is regarded as one of the best. The show carries a crew of ten people, 5,000 magic and stage props worth over $100,000 and its own stage set. The show has appeared in 48 States, Mexico, and Europe, and most recently toured Canada. After touring New England, the show will head south to Texas. A California tour is planned after the Texas tour.

Richard Volcane began his career in magic at the age of five as an apprentice to Master Magician, Bill Neff. He gave his first public performance at the age of eight. He began to construct his own large magic show at the age of ten with the help of his father. He presented his first two hour show at the age of 14 and began his first national tour at the age of 16.

Volcane also studied and trained with Master Magicians, Harry Blackstone and Harry Willard. Volcane is today one of only 12 Master Magicians performing in the World. He has appeared on national television with Jack Benny, Jackie Gleason, Ed Sullivan, and on The Tonight Show with Johnny Carson.

Buddy Richardson began his theatrical career at the age of four. While a youth, he did commercials for national networks. He appeared in the West Coast Premier of Alan Bennet's, "Habeas Corpus". He has also played leading roles in "MacBeth", "Ah Wilderness", and the role of Scapino in "A Company of Wayward Saints".

His musical theatre credits include leads in "Godspell", and "My Fair Lady", on both the East and West Coast. His direction of "Diary of Anne Frank", Albee's, "The Sandbox"; and many others have won him acclaim throughout the theatre world.

He has created the role of PUKi, The Clown Prince of Magic, especially for "The Cavalcade of Mystery"

Volcane and PUKi combine The Art of Magic and The Art of Clowning and raise it to a new height of mystery and fun. Volcane will recreate "The Golden Days of Magic", pierce steel needles through a girl's head, and divide a girl in two. PUKi will attempt to perform his magic, but unfortunately, he gets his magical spells mixed up and strange things happen.

There will be a door prize at each performance - a live magical rabbit

Dr. King Honored At Program

The Winchester Ecumenical Association will sponsor an evening commemorating Dr. Martin Luther King at the Crawford Memorial Methodist Church, Winchester, Thursday, Jan. 15, beginning at 6:30 p.m.

The program, centering on the man, is titled: "The legacy of Martin Luther King," and has been planned by members of the Association in collaboration with congregants of St. John's Baptist Church, Woburn, and their pastor, the Rev. Larry Edmonds.

A member of St. John's parish knew Dr. King when he was a youth in Alabama. She, and other members of the committee, both black and white, will give testimony to the impact on their lives of the Civil Rights leader and Nobel laureate who was murdered in 1968. Children from the various parish schools will show art work relating to Dr. King's life.

The program will be preceded by a covered-dish supper prepared by members of the congregation involved. Winchester and Woburn Town Officials have been personally invited, but the program is open to all members of the communities.

CAR CARE CORNER

Mario Scenna, Serv. Mgr.
The term "front-end alignment" means getting the front wheels hanging from the car in the proper up-and-down attitude, and pointing in the right directions . . . The front wheels are adjustable, you see, and a front wheel that's scrubbing along cocked at a slightly wrong angle can waste you some gas as well as make the car handle funny. . . . Front-end adjustment isn't something you do yourself — it takes magical and scientifical gauges and gadgets. . . . You should have the front end checked and aligned every six months or so. . . . Besides saving a bit of gas, it'll make your tires last longer. . . .

Planning a trip to Spain? Remember that dining hours are traditionally late. Though the midday meal, which is for many the main meal of the day, begins no earlier than 1 p.m., most Spaniards do not begin coming into a restaurant until 2:00 or later. Although it is possible to be served in some restaurants as early as 8:30 in the evening, the fashionable dinner hour is at 10:00. If you are going to Madrid, you will be glad to know that it has a wide variety of restaurants and that it is known for its excellent seafood.

Nursery Rhymes

Nursery Rhymes are among those special "twice-told-tales"...They are most enjoyed when told over and over again. With the use of a tape recorder, children can hear a nursery rhyme read to them and can also create their own version of a nursery rhyme to be told, or played over and over again.

why...

To enrich memory skills and to encourage the printed recognition of children's own words.

what you need...

how to begin...

Read a favorite nursery rhyme or book to the child. Have the child illustrate an image from the book, then tell the story in his or her own words into a tape recorder. On a piece of paper, print the story word for word as the child tells it. Print in lower case letters; use upper case letters only for the beginning letter in a sentence or the beginning letter of a proper noun. Have the child add illustrations as the story progresses, e.g. "and then he called for his bowl," etc. Collate the pages together. Use a hole puncher and yarn to bind into a story book. Re-read the child's version of his or her favorite nursery rhyme or book. Teach the child how to use the tape recorder, then allow and encourage the child to listen to the story and find familiar words in his or her personalized book.

Have the child use a tape recorder to tell objects that begin with A,B,C, etc. On 3"x 5" blank index cards have the child illustrate each object and print the appropriate word on each picture card. To enrich picture and word recognition have the child place all the picture cards face up on the floor and point to the correct picture named on the tape recording.

A tape recorder is also a very practical and enjoyable way for children to share thoughts, songs and happiness with distant friends and relatives.

Art-In-The-Kitchen

Here is an Art-In-The-Kitchen activity that offers children the joy of creating and the joy of eating their creations.

why...

To encourage eye-hand coordination and to expand children's imaginations.

Dough Recipe:
2 cups warm water
2 tablespoons sugar
1 package yeast
¼ cup vegetable oil
6 or 7 cups flour

how to begin...

Help the child to:

— Pour 2 cups warm water in a large bowl

— Add sugar, stir with water

— Add yeast, and let sit in water and sugar mixture for 5 minutes (do not stir)

— Add oil. Mix slowly with a spoon.

— Slowly add flour, one cup at a time (6 or 7 cups total). When dough is too heavy to stir with a spoon, mix with fingers.

— Sprinkle a little flour on the table. Roll dough into balls, stretch it into long shapes and short shapes, spiral it into snails, create names, people, animals. Use M and M's, raisins, and chocolate chips for features.

and continue...

Cook on an ungreased cookie sheet in a 350 degree oven for 20 to 35 minutes until lightly browned. Eat and enjoy!

School Notes

Reading Program

High School Principal Vincent Larocco confirmed this week that under the present proposal the position of high school reading specialist would be eliminated.

At an earlier meeting in which high school cuts were involved Larocco at first said he thought there was sufficient staffing for a reading specialist but later said that might not be the case.

School Committee Chairman Catherine Alexander said tutors would assume reading responsibilities for Chapter 766 students and would do the best possible job for other students.

"If this position is to be eliminated because of the terrible situation we're in then we'll do as much as we possibly can with the resources we have. But I think it would be wrong to conclude that there would be no effort to teach kids who are not reading well, adequately," said Curriculum Director David Ackerman.

School Committee member Constance Papas maintained, as she has from the beginning of the budget hearings, that if the town can't perform something very well it shouldn't do it at all. And if English, reading and communicating in the English language is a top priority of the administration and committee, then it should be done correctly.

"If that's our top priority then that's what we ought to do first and do well," Papas said. "To try and steal from Peter to pay Paul is not the way to do it. Lets provide English for everybody at an acceptable level and then move on to the next priority. That's the way I will be looking at it," Papas insisted.

Larocco assured the committee and members of the audience that if money should become available the reading specialist position was the first in line to be reinstated.

Alexander also reminded everybody that no final decisions have been made and that the elimination of the reading position at this point is just a recommendation. The committee is expected to take a formal vote on the budget in February but will be able to make changes right up until Spring Town Meeting starts on April 27.

Special Education

The Star misinterpreted a statement made by Carolyn Howard at an earlier School Commmittee meeting to discuss a proposed $124,000 cut in the Special Education budget.

Howard was attributed as saying that a suit could possibly be filed against the town if the speech therapy position for Chapter 766 students was eliminated.

What she said was that if the position was eliminated the town would be responsible for paying for that education if the students were forced to get it out of town because 766 requires that communities provide equal and adequate education. If an individual town cannot meet the state requirements then it must pay to have the student get the assistance out of town.

'A State Of Depression'

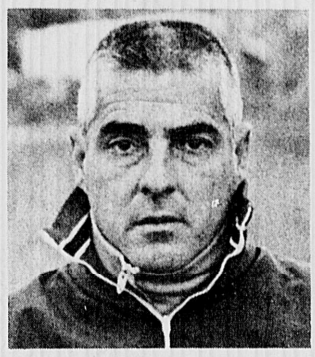

Coaches React To Prop. 2½ Cuts

"You get so depressed you won't be able to do what your here for. You'll get yourself in such a state of depression that you can't perform your job properly."
- Coach Tom Kline speaking on proposed athletic cuts

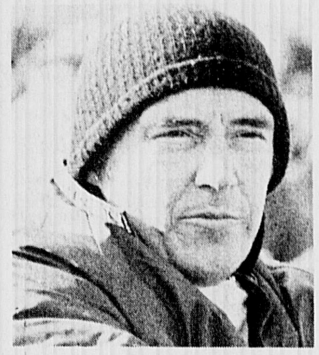

It's a total downer as far as the Winchester coaching staff is concerned. The recently presented list of recommended cuts from the athletic budget that will slash one-third of the present budget if approved at Spring Town Meeting has left much of the coaching staff singing the blues.

The three major poroposed reductions that concerned the coaches the most were the elimination of transportation and freshmen teams and the refusal to pay rental fees for the track, swimming and hockey facilities.

Football and spring track Coach Manny Marshall was particularly distressed with the impact the elimination of the freshmen teams will have on the football program. Athletic Director William Colella said even if Winchester retained freshmen teams they would have nobody to play because the Middlesex League has urged member schools to eliminate the ninth grade

'Not everyone is going to be a football player but not everyone is going to be a mathemetician either.'
—Manny Marshall

'We'll have to find a way to get the buses. I won't have my kids driving to the games.'
—Gene Bouley

sports. Marshall is skeptical of such a thing occurring.

"I just don't think all the towns are going to cut the same thing. I just don't believe that. At Lexington a few years ago they cut every sophomore sport except one. Which one do you think that was? Yeah, basketball. You really think they'll eliminate freshmen basketball?" Marshall asked.

Soccer and lacrosse Coach Gene Bouley feels the elimination of the freshmen teams will result in kids that will never bother to participate.

"People are not going to come out for the programs as much," Bouley said. "It's very hard for a freshman to play with upperclassmen. A lot of kids just won't come out."

Basketball Coach John Myers said the possible elimination of the freshmen program will mean that recreational and non-interscholastic sports programs will have to pick up the slack if the high school hopes to continue to produce winning teams at the varsity level.

"As far as the freshmen sports goes there's no doubt that it's going to affect everyone. They (freshmen) need time to grow with it. For many that's the first time in real competition," Myers said.

All the coaches interviewed were opposed to carpooling but also expressed reservations about the formation of booster clubs.

Bouley said outright that he would not have his players driving to the games individually. "We'll have to find a way to get the buses. I won't have my kids driving to the games," he said.

The biggest loser in the decision to eliminate the money for renting facilities was, of course, the hockey team.

For a hockey player to participate it will cost a minimum of $150 and could run between $200 and $300. Former hockey Coach Dave Berman, now an assistant football coach, said such a situation would put unpardonable pressure on the coach from parents who will want to see their son playing for the monev invested, not sitting on the bench.

"I'm not sure how the parents will react but I think a lot of them will pay the money. But I know I wouldn't want to coach in a situation like that. It will put undue pressure on the coach," Berman said.

Hockey Coach Mike Houghton said he doesn't anticipate any major problems with the situation although he admits it is anything but desirable.

"I think this can be handled very easily," Houghton said, "What we're guaranteeing is ice time, not game time. It's something that would have to be handled right out front."

Softball and girls' basketball coach Donna Tanner said it wasn't fair that some parents would have to pay additional costs for rental fees, but added, "two and a half isn't fair either."

player safety if they have to walk separately to cars as opposed to jamming into a bus right outside the lockerroom.

Superintendent William MacDonald agreed with that concern and opposed the idea of kids driving to and from the games period.

"I get concerned if kids are driving to the games," MacDonald said. "I hope some arrangement can be made so that enough fees can be raised so a bus can be paid for. I'm scared of the kids driving."

Football Coach Manny Marshall said there would be other logistical problems inherent in any carpooling arrangement. "Try carpooling 60 football players to a game or try to get a 16-foot pole vault to a meet in Reading," Marshall asked.

The other substantial cut raised questions of discrimination and assuredly hit hockey parents the hardest financially. The elimination of paying rental fees for the indoor track at Lexington High School, the Swimming pool at Northeast Regional Vocational School in Wakefield, the Winchester Country Club golf course and ice rental in Watertown for the hockey team totalled $17,100. But $13,000 of that was from the hockey rental alone.

"I think it kind of discriminates against hockey," Noble said. "Most of your hockey budget is your ice time. You are taking the one thing out of hockey that was the meat of the program."

School Committee member Constance Papas had a particular problem with the exhorbitant fee hockey parents would be forced to assume if their child was to play the sport.

Colella said the rental costs for track would be approximately $6 a person, swimming $10-12 a person but hockey a minimum of $150 a person and possibly as high as $300.

"I find that terribly economically discriminating," Papas said. "You say to one child that, 'yes, you can participate because your father can write a check for ice time but you say to another that you cannot participate because your father cannot afford it.' That's discriminatory," Papas insisted.

Papas then repeated an earlier conviction that the nickel and diming of budgets so that as many programs as possible remain is the wrong way to go about it.

"We should spend money keeping in mind what is the greatest good for the greatest number of students. I say if you can't do it (run a program to fullest capacity) right that you should consider that we might not want to do it at all," Papas said.

For a full list of proposed athletic cuts see Page 19.

School Committee member Mary Jean Weylman disagreed.

"The problem with hockey is it costs a lot of money. Looking at the whole sports program there were two questions presented to us. Do you want hockey or not? This was the viable option that we had," Weylman said.

"If you are going to offer it it has to be a viable offering for any kid that wants to participate," Papas retorted. "I for one will not be for one that is automatically discriminatory," she said.

The $17,946 savings from eliminating the freshman program was one area that the Middlesex League had directed member communities to eliminate.

Colella said since there would be no competition anyway it was best to go along and eliminate the program although it is certainly not helpful to the overall program. He added that freshmen will still be eligible to play on junior varsity and varsity teams.

That scenario brought more than a few snickers.

"I doubt very much there will be many freshmen who can cut it on the JV or varsity teams," said Kenneth Donaghey, another hockey father. "The freshmen will get the short end of the stick because I don't think they'll be able to push anyone out on even the JV team with the exception of the rare one."

Marshall was more direct.

"Freshmen will just not come out and compete," Marshall insisted. "There is no way a freshman can come out and play varsity football with juniors and seniors."

Even though freshmen would be able to practice with the junior varsity during the week if they chose to to learn the basic skills, Jack Noble thought few would take advantage of the opportunity. The end result, he added, will be that the success of the programs in terms of winning will be effected, not now but in three or more years.

"Very few (freshmen) are going to come out and learn the skills as freshmen knowing they will not get to play," Noble said. "This will effect the level of plav in three years or so. They will start doing something else at the freshmen level."

Colella said the reason golf was eliminated entirely (for a savings of $1,252) was because of the extremely low participation. Only 12 went out for the co-ed team last fall.

Trackmen Smother Watertown

By RICHARD McSWEENEY

After last week's 51-35 trouncing of Watertown, the boys' track team's fifth consecutive win, even the normally conservative Coach Tom Kline began talking about titles.

And after last week's win, which matched Kline's highest win total in the seven years he's been at the Winchester helm, he undeniably had good reason. The Sachems are rolling.

"None of the team's are really, really strong this year," he said. "We've got as good a shot as anyone else which is something I haven't been able to say for a long, long time," Kline laughed.

His joviality is understandable. Saturday's rout of Watertown was another product of the depth he is so fond of crediting with this team's success. The Sachems swept the dash and the shot put and grabbed one-two's in two other events.

Watertown grabbed a first in the hurdles but Wayne Ciarcia and Robert Tse were right on his heels in second and third place, respectively.

Robert Mueller, Billy MacMillan and Paul Manganaro mashed all the competition in the dash to catapult the Sachems into a healthy early edge that the Red Raiders would never really really put a dent into.

Ken Jacobsen finished first in the 600 and Al Chen contributed to the point parade with a third place.

Jon Alcione kept the beat going with a win in the 300. Mark Merritt added a second place in the 1000.

It was Winchester one-two in the high jump as Brian Donnellan and John Wiseman took the top spots.

It was another sweep in the shot as Manganaro continued to toy with Middlesex League opponents as he notched another throw over 50 feet, this time 50-4.

Sophomore Tom Porell tossed in his best throw of the season, 42-11 for second and Jeff Lavey strolled in with a third place finish to round out the whitewashing.

Joe "The Dude" Callahan won the mile and Pat Kennedy and Peter Quine finished one-two in the two-mile. Watertown took the relay to round out the scoring

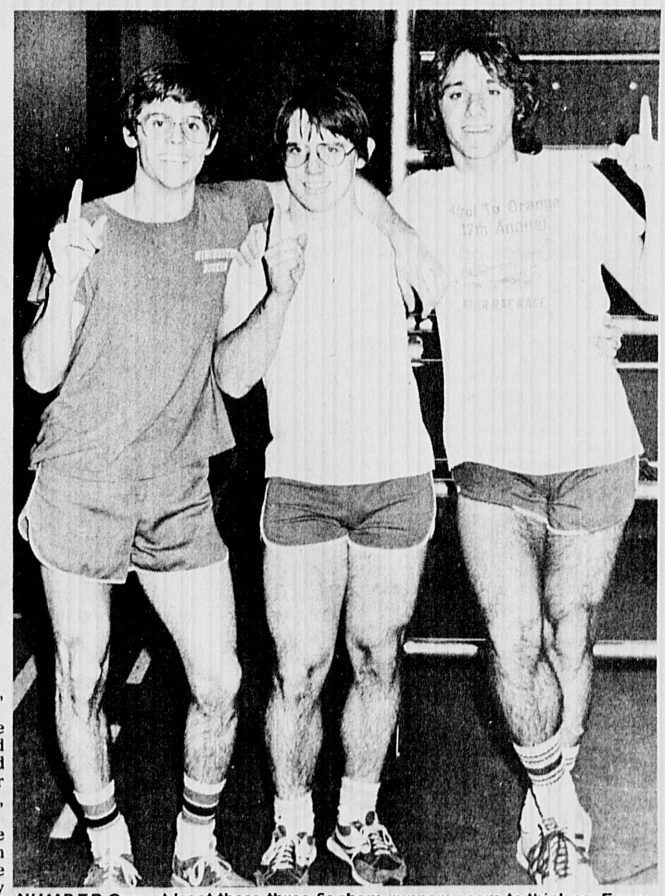

"Everybody did what they had to do," was the way Kline summed up the victory. "They (Watertown) just don't have a lot of depth. Their coach (Tommy McGovern) does a good job but they have their problems," Kline said.

The same cannot be said for the Burlington squad that the Sachems squared off against yesterday (after The Star deadline).

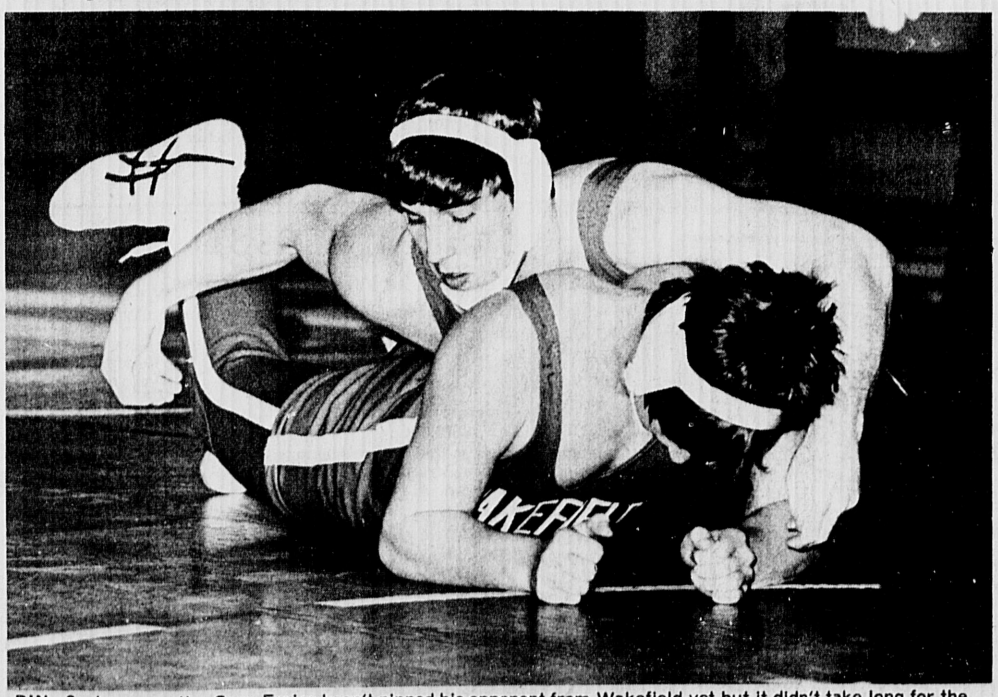

"Burlington has come up with a couple of new bodies so they're going to be tough. They are a very well coached team. They have a good high jumper in (Steve) Strachan, who played football for them, they have a good miler, a good two-miler. We can't look at them lightly," Kline insisted.

Although Kline rates Burlington one

Belmont Pins Wrestlers

By RICHARD McSWEENEY

It sounds like an Agatha Christie plot, for sure.

They would call it "The Case of the Missing Grapplers" and it would be told from the point of view of a coach named Larry Tremblay who is in his first year as wrestling coach in a mythical town, oh, let's call it Winchester.

Although it sounds like a dandy piece of fiction, Sachem head wrestling Coach Larry Tremblay isn't interested in the royalties. His team got trounced by Belmont Tuesday, 38-14 but, more importantly, his club has become a revolving door of wrestling nomads.

"Last night really got me upset," Tremblay said following the Belmont defeat that ended a two-game winning streak and lowered their record to 4-3. "We really got our head handed to us. I thought it would be alot closer but we just didn't wrestle well. But, and not to use this as an excuse, if I could field my varsity line-up... I've been losing kids to injury, them just leaving.. The kids that I have I am satisfied with what they are doing. I had a lot of returnees this year

A Tale Of Two Teams; Hoopsters Split Pair

Basketball Coach John Myers sat expressionless in his office chair at the high school. A friend sat across from him silently reading a newspaper. The two officials from the just completed Stoneham-Winchester game were just as silently changing into street clothes.

The Sachems had just dropped a 57-49 contest to the Spartans lowering their record to 2-7. Myers' silence belied the fact that an eight-point loss was an improvement over earlier defeats by margins as high as 47 and 28 points.

This loss to the 3-5 Stoneham team had been probably the toughest in the rebuilding process the Sachems are undertaking. This was a game Winchester could have won.

"We just played a game that was up for grabs and they went and got it," Myers finally said quietly. "I really think that we just got outhustled. They got two or three shots and we were getting just one. It came down to a game that was equal talentwise and that's what it came down to. They deserved it," Myers said.

And, indeed, this seemed to be a game for the taking. Stoneham did not have a noticeable height advantage. They weren't exceptionally quicker. Winchester cannot play with the likes of a Lexington or Wakefield. They can play with the likes of Stoneham and Tuesday night they did not.

It was a 7-0 run near the close of the first half that pushed the Spartans into a 12-point bulge at 32-20 that the Sachems could never overcome.

The closest the Sachems would get would be four at 47-43 with 2:42 left in the game following a nice Kevin Thomas drive for a hoop.

At that juncture the visitors promptly reeled off five consecutive points to send the Sachems to their seventh and most disappointing defeat.

And what hampered the Sachems was, as Myers accurately referred to, the second and third shot advantage that Stoneham enjoyed from the opening minutes.

The Spartans Jim Warren benefitted from the freedom under the offensive boards with a 22-point outing, 17 of those coming in the first half.

Stoneham's usual leading scorer Mike Fiorillo added 21 points, 11 of those coming in the second half. Twice in the fourth quarter when the Sachems were trying to get back in the game Fiorillo rebounded free throw misses for four points. In both instances they were the second shot, giving the Spartans a pair of undeserved three-point plays.

Kevin Thomas kept Winchester in the ballgame in the first half with 11 of his team-high 17 points. But after a Thomas jumper pulled Winchester even at 13 early in the second quarter, Stoneham never let them tie or lead the rest of the way.

Other scorers for Winchester were Blair Bradley with seven second half points, Chip Triglione with the same and Steve MacDonald with six points.

Last week the Sachems hosted Watertown in another game that was there for them to win and this time the senior class came through for Myers as some clutch free throwshooting in the final quarter preserved a 48-47 win for Winchester.

The win was a banner effort by guard Matt Groux, (17 points) whose eight second half points, four consecutive swishes from the foul line when the game was up for grabs and a heads up play that saved a Mike Blackwood (12 points) inbounds pass from being stolen with under a minute and a half to go and the Sachems up by just two.

Groux scored the last four points, including a 35-foot buzzer beater to give the Sachems a five-point advantage after three quarters, 37-32.

He promptly took the fourth quarter half tap in for a lay-up to give Winchester their bigest lead of the contest.

But he saved the best for last. With 2:31 left and Winchester leading by just a point at 41-40, Watertown's Emmilo Coppola got whistled for a reaching in on Groux in the backcourt and the senior guard didn't hit metal on either shot.

After the Red Raider's Tom Parshley sank one of two free throws Cappola mugged Groux again in the backcourt and again he hit nothing but rope for a 45-41 Winchester lead.

Watertown's Jim Griffin answered that with a bucket to narrow the lead to two points. Enter, again, Mr. Groux.

After the Sachems had brought the ball down it went out of bounds off a Watertown player so Blackwood got set to throw it in. He threw a rainbow towards Groux that basically was up for grabs. Groux instead of trying to catch it merely tapped it over to an open Thomas. Thomas then gave it back to Groux who missed a 10-footer but Thomas was there to put back the rebound and give Winchester the win.

Prior to Groux's heroics, the trio of Blackwood, Blair Bradley and John Myers Jr. had paced the sachems in the first half against the winless Red Raiders.

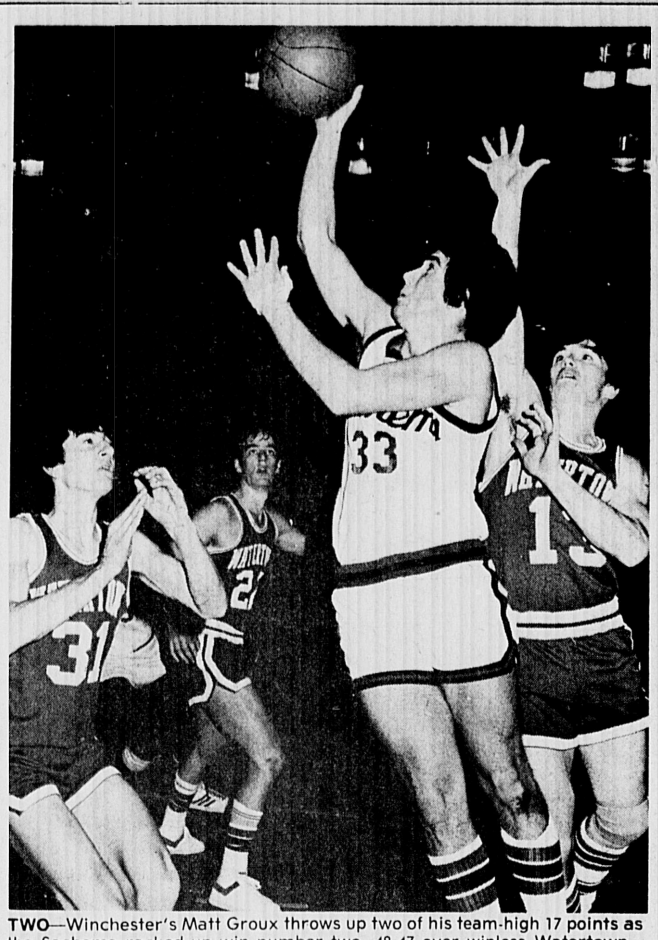

Blackwood had his biggest offensive half of the year, scoring all 12 of his points in the opening two quarters. Myers put on his cutstomary longe range missile display, throwing in corner jumpers and finishing up with 10 points, including the final point on a free throw that provided the winning margin.

And Blair Bradley, although he scored just six points was more than responsible for a little intimidation.

He entered the game in the second quarter and promptly put a Randy Krueger shot into the cheerleader's laps. Two possessions later Krueger gave it another try and Bradley was up to the challenge, spiking it with equal disdain.

Later in the quarter he stole the ball and drove the length of the court for a bucket.

But the poised play of that night was shattered by the lackluster performance Tuesday. Tomorrow night the Sachems again have a chance for a win, hosting Reading. Talentwise, the Sachems belong in this game. Myers now can only hope they realize it, too.

TWO—Winchester's Matt Groux throws up two of his team-high 17 points as the Sachems racked up win number two, 48-47 over winless Watertown. (Staff Photo By Marc McGeehan)

Sachemette Runners Eye Meet

The day of reckoning for the girls' track team is near.

Although the Sachemettes have breezed since a season-opening tie against Belmont, the level of competition has been slightly suspect.

But with Lexington on the docket for Saturday and Reading on Jan. 31 to close out the season, the Sachemettes will have to be at their best.

Unfortunately, the girls didn't get the tune-up they expected Saturday when Melrose had to cancel the meet because they didn't have enough girls to field a team.

And this week against the Minutemaids, who along with Reading and Winchester were predicted to be the league honchos, the Sachemettes will have to do it shorthanded. Lynda Mooney Laura Weylman will be among the missing Saturday because of previous commitments and that has Kline worried.

"We're going to have some people missing against Lexington. And that's not to make any excuses but we're going to have to be at our top to beat them. Before the season Lexington and Reading were rated the top two teams," Kline said.

"We have talented people but we don't have the depth," Kline continued. "It's just the opposite of the boys. The girls have a good deal of talent but just don't have the depth. If we get a couple of injuries we're in trouble," he said.

There were no such problems against hapless Woburn last week as the Sachemettes rolled to their third consecutive triumph, 60-26.

Prudy Horne got things rolling with a first place in the hurdles in 7.4.

Jacquie Burke took second in the dash followed by Missy Meade as Winchester took control.

It was showtime the rest of the way, starting with the 600 where Andrea deMars and Weylman finished one-two. Susan Virnelli dominated the 300 with a first place, 42.4 finish.

In the 1000 it was all Winchester again as Eileen Conley took first followed by Sheila Connolly.

deMars and Virnelli grabbed points in the high jump with a second and third place finish and then the Sachemettes put the Tannerettes out of their collective misery with a sweep in the shot.

Kathy Durante won it with a toss of 38-7 and fellow senior Joanne Burke followed with a 33-4 throw. Averil Svahn notched third to complete the sweep for Winchester.

Freshman Laurie Glynn dominated the mile with another win, this time in 5:17. Mary Boland trailed her in second place.

Maria Doocey and another freshman, Sharon Kennedy, grabbed second and third places for the Sachemettes in the two-mile.

Winchester did not let up there, however, and trounced Woburn in the relay to close out the lopsided victory. Virnelli, Connolly, Conley and Weylman ran the event in 4:31.7 to win easily.

In between Saturday's meet with Lexington the Sachemettes will do their thing over at Harvard in the girls State Coaches Track Meet.

Sachemettes Wallop Watertown

By BOB COOK

The Winchester High Girls' gymnastics team got back on the beam Tuesday with a 90.9-39.6 whopping of winless Watertown at Winchester High School.

Led by Carla Gulino and Sarah Gagan, the Sachemettes placed first, second and third in all four events as they improved their record to 2-5.

Noone was even close to Gagan's 6.3 in on the parallel bars. Gulino was second with a 5.2 score and Carol Culver followed with a 4.5.

Gulino and Gagan exchanged positions on the beam with Gulino's 6.6 being good for first place and Gagan right behind her at 6.3. Co-Captain Hayley Greenberg was third with a 5.5 score.

The Sachemettes swept the first four places in the vault led by Gulino's 7.1. Trailing her was Stephanie Houllahan (6.6), Gagan (6.5) and freshman Liz Rowley who was superb in compiling a 6.2 score.

In the floor exercises it was another foursome from Winchester who did all the dancing. Michele Collins led the way this time with a 6.4 total followed by Gulino (5.9), Lisa Zirkle (5.7) and another freshman, Anna Higgins took fourth with a 5.6.

Gagan merited special commendation from Coach Pam Rufo after battling the flu all week and still coming up with an excellent performance Tuesday. "Sarah Gagan has been doing really well," Rufo said.

But despite the efforts of the Gagan-Gulino tandem, Winchester dropped a heartbreaking 89.9-89.5 decision to Lexington last week.

This was no meet for the faint of heart.

On the uneven parallel bars Lexington's Christine Shaw, a standout all afternoon, scored a 6.3 to take first place away from Gagan who had tallied a 6.2. Gulino took third with a 5.6 as Winchester trailed by a point.

Gagan made sure noone was going to steal anything on the beam by scoring a 6.0. The closest teammate Greenberg and Lexington's Laurie Parker could come to that were identical scores of 4.6.

But that was all for Gagan at that point as illness forced her to the sidelines.

Winchester was swept in the vault despite fine scores by Gulino (7.3), Houllahan (6.9) and Collins (6.6). None of those performances were able to top Lexington's Shaw (8.0), Terri Maguire (7.8) or Lita Verrier (7.5).

That left the Minutemaids with a 68.8-67 lead with just the floor exercises remaining.

Gulino and Collins sandwiched Shaw but it wasn't enough as the Sachemettes fell just short.

The girls go after their second consecutive win next week against Stoneham.

Youth Hockey Regular Season Starts Friday

The final round of preseason games were completed Friday at USA rink with the Hawks defeating the Rockies 5-3 and the Islanders stopping the Flyers, 4-1.

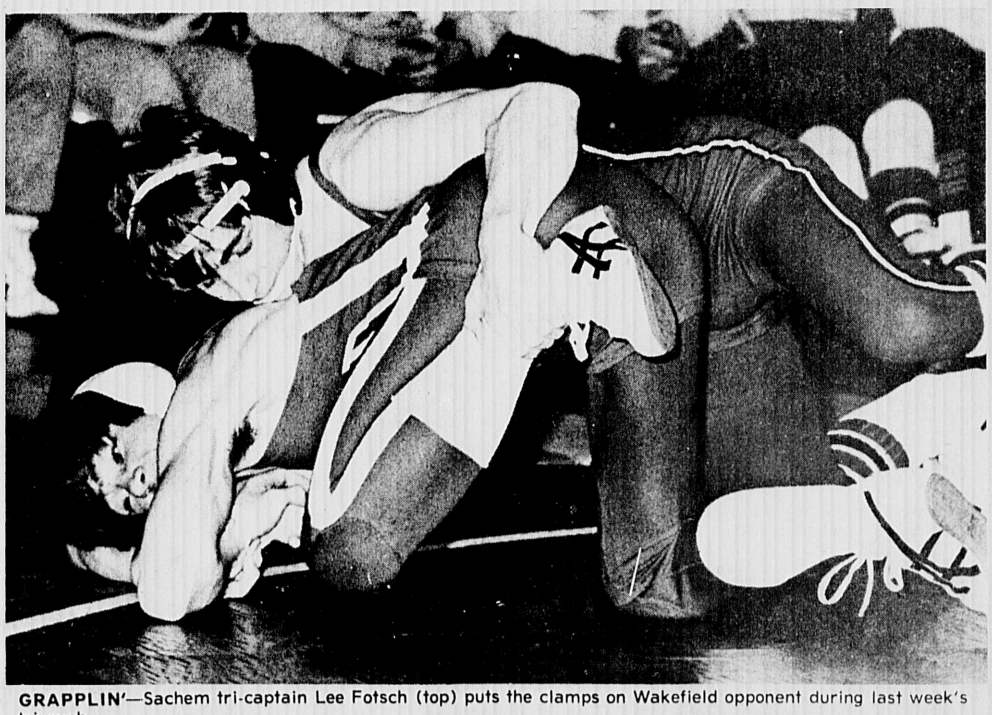

The High Hawks were John "Hat Trick" Cucinatti with three goals and Patrick McDonough with two, with assists going to Matthew Fantasia and Jim McCarthy. Single assists were from Brian Gianci, Mark Fantasia, Keith McClearn, Joe DiGiovanni and John Wadman. Chris Ciulla was the Rolling Rocky with a hat trick with assists going to Scott Slater (2), Jim Dever, Tedric Potzka and Brian Newburn.

In the second game the leading Islander was Ricky Mawn who led the way with a hat trick and Dave Ducharme with the opening goal and an assist. Anthony Bonfilio had two assists while singles were from the sticks of Brian Flynn, Anthony LaCascia, Brian Walsh and Robbie Bourque. The Flyers were led by scorer Billy Cavelle and assists went to Brian Walsh and Doug Jordan.

Friday the regular season schedule starts in the Junior Division with the Islanders versus the Hawks at 5 p.m. and the Rockies facing the Flyers at 5:45 p.m.

The Senior Division starts its regular season tomorrow also at 6:20 p.m. with two games. The teams are the Bruins, Wings, Rangers and Whalers.

Registration continues through the season with a $25 deposit expected at registration. Goalies play at a reduced fee with equipment provided.

but I don't know where they are," Tremblay moaned.

Missing in action Tuesday were Scott Carzo and Mike O'Reilly who were sick, Chris Dobbins who was out with a bad back and Charles Kenyan who left the team.

The only point getters for the Sachems against the Marauders were Ed Welch (pin at 100), Ed McKenna (tie at 147) and Gary Errico (pin at 169).

"This match was a mixture of injuries and not wrestling that well," Tremblay explained. "Belmont is a pretty good team but we just didn't match up well against them."

In earlier wins over Wakefield (34-24) and Salem (55-6) the Sachems could do no wrong as they ran their record to 4-2.

Tremblay wasn't especially thrilled with the effort against Wakefield ("there was nothing flamboyant about it") but was impressed with the performances from some of the newer wrestlers.

"Some of the younger guys wrestled very well," Tremblay said. "It was some of the experienced kids that didn't do so well."

Sophomore Tom Funk surprised at 107 with a pin and Scott Rapallo wrestled well in losing a decision at 114. Other contributing Sachems were the old standbys, Welch (pin), who has simply obliterated everyone in sight so far this year.

It was a field day against hapless Salem as the Sachems captured all but one match. Funk, Welch, Rapallo, Fotsch, Eric Paskerian, Gibbons, McKenna, Dobbins, Errico, Jim Barger and Kenyan all notched victories.

"They weren't very good," Tremblay admitted. "But they had a good wrestler at 187. Barger had an outstanding match."

The grapplers are now off until Wednesday when they tangle with Burlington and the Red Devils should be tough. They trounced Belmont earlier, 45-14 but Tremblay expects his team will provide a much more respectable showing than they did against the Marauders.

"In fact, I think we'll score more points against Burlington than we did against Belmont because we match up better with them. That's the funny thing about wrestling. But we should be more respectable," Tremblay said.

He is hopeful that Welch, Errico, Barger, Carzo and Fotsch can come out with victories. That way he'll be better able to pen a better ending to his writing debut.

Girls Hoop Registration Saturday

Registration for the "brand new" Girls' Basketball League will be held Saturday at the Lincoln School from 1:30-5 p.m.

Because of budget cutbacks in the Recreation Department due to Prop. 2.5, participants will have to pay for the first time but Director Donna Tanner promises a revamped schedule that will allow for more games than previously scheduled.

The $5 fee will provide each girl with a T-shirt and every girl who registers will be placed on a team. The divisions will be broken up into one of grades 3-5 and another grades 6-9

Games will be played every Saturday at the Lincoln School and instruction of the basic skills will be incorporated into the actual games. Trophies will be given out at the end of the season, which concludes March 17.

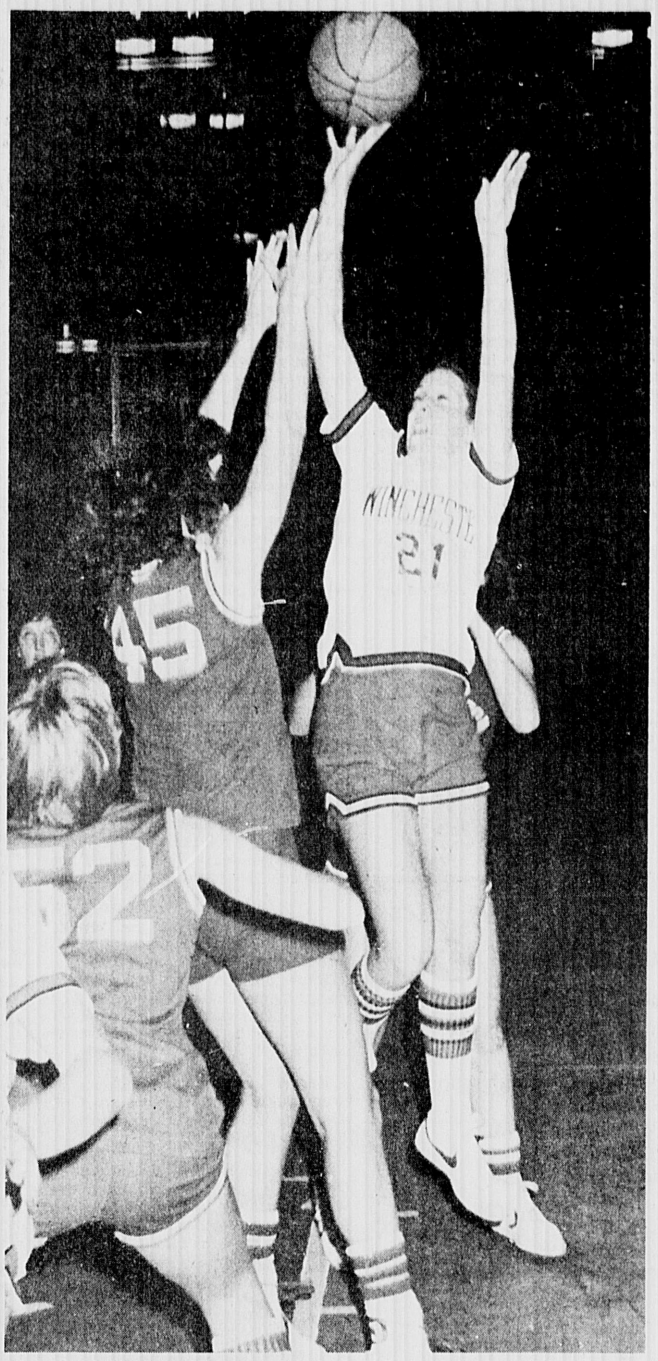

Assisting Tanner, who started her first year as head coach at Winchester High School this fall, will be former WHS star athlete Kelly Gately.

Coaches for the individual teams will be members of the girls'varsity basketball team at WHS.

For more information, call Donna Tanner at 729-6253.

Sachemette Cagers Take Pair

By JULIE DERRY

The Sachemette hoopsters have been on the rebound this week, grabbing wins against Reading and Stoneham by scores of 64-26 and 43-31. The one flaw was their loss to Watertown, 42-31, which was decided within the last few minutes of the game.

"We had them within 3 points...but the gap widened and we just couldn't get it back," said Coach Donna Tanner.

As in the Lexington game, missing several key foul shots and easy lay ups proved to be crucial. In the Watertown game, first a foul shot was missed, and then the Sachemettes, on a breakaway missed a lay up. Watertown stole the ball for another two points, and Winchester wasn't able to regain it.

The Reading and Stoneham games provided Tanner with many more chances for subbing. In fact, the entire team played in each game.

"We are still looking for the right combination...but we understand a great deal more about playing as a team now," said Tanner.

Tanner did discover two nice surprises this week as a result of her continuous subbing. The surprises came from two juniors Hilary "Wiggy" Bradshaw and Kathy Mangano.

"Wiggy has played two super games for me against Watertown and Stoneham. In today's game (Stoneham), she shot 50 percent from the floor and 100 percent from the foul line. She was all over — passing, stealing, rebounding — she had 10 rebounds," said Tanner.

Tanner attributes Bradshaw's success not only to her playing ability but to how "psyched" she was for the game.

"Wiggy was psyched for personal reasons. She was determined to win. I tell my team that it's all in the mind whether you really want to win, but they don't believe me."

Mangano also surprised Tanner on the court with her playing ability. Neither juniors have had much experience so far, but things look promising for the future. "They both played super games and the best thing is they're only juniors," Tanner said.

Tanner was also pleased with Ann Porell's play on the court. Porell was top scorer against Watertown with 9 points. "Ann is a natural athlete — she gets better and better with more experience. It's just too bad she didn't get the experience when she was a sophomore or junior," said Tanner.

Tanner hopes for stronger leadership from her senior players as they start the second half of the season this week. "The seniors will decide whether we go to the tournament or not. It's their last year, they should go for it all."

The Sachemettes take on Reading again Friday and Wobur, next Tuesday and Tanner feels her team can beat Reading again, but doesn't want to take any game too lightly. She feels strongly about Woburn, however.

"I'm pretty positive we can beat Woburn. They played their best game so far this season against us and we played our worst. I think they are going to be in for a surprise when they come to Winchester — we're really psyched for this rivalry."

Proposed WHS Athletic Cuts

In order to reach the objective of a $75,000 reduction, several decisions have been made. Each has been carefully considered by all those participating in the budget process and although are offered unenthusiastically, they are responsive to the imposed financial constraints.

Eliminate all 9th grade sports, both salaries and officials are included in this total. This action is consistent with guidelines offered by the Middlesex League and does not necessarily eliminate the opportunity for ninth grade students in that they may participate at the Junior Varsity or Varsity level.
Net reduction $17,946

Eliminate all buses. This includes those for athletic teams as well as cheerleaders, tumblettes and band members. It is our belief that we would rather seek alternative means of transportation than to eliminate a sport or sports. We visualize four alternatives to providing busing.
Net reduction 21,560

Arbitrary reduction in the supplies account. Some of this is related to freshman sports and other cuts are merely to meet our objectives.
Net reduction 12,231

Eliminate assistant coach for spring track. This position was not filled in FY'81 and we propose not to fill it in FY'82.
Net reduction 1,252

Reduce the account (355) for the cleaning and repair of equipment from $15,000 to $8252. Players would be responsible for proper cleaning of his or her uniform; however, repairs and modifications of equipment would be a School Department expense.
Net reduction 5,873

Eliminate the position of cameraman. We may be able to address this need in other ways.
Net reduction 400

Eliminate scouts.
Net reduction 200

Eliminate police for spring sports.
Net reduction 875

Reduce EMT coverage from $900 proposed to $380. The remaining provision is adequate for the football program as required by statute.
Net reduction 20

Eliminate the entire A-V provision. We are hopeful that citizen and-or booster club support may provide some funds.
Net reduction 2,700

Eliminate the entire sport of golf. This is the sport with the least number of participants (12) and is a co-ed sport. This reduction is for the coach and in other sections we have eliminated other related expenses.
Net reduction 1,252

Eliminate the position of trainer. Each coach would be responsible for this support activity.
Net reduction 3,600

Eliminate proctors for ninth grade basketball games.
Net reduction 180

Eliminate the entire provision for facility rentals. Ice time ($13,000), pool ($2500), track ($800), and golf ($800) would be the responsibility of the participants. It is felt this sets aside the major objection to the hockey program, that is, the cost of ice time and proposes a consistent policy of not assuming any expense associated with the use of an outside facility. It does not consider the "free" use of athletic fields in arriving at this recommendation, however, we cannot cost on a participant basis the expense of Town owned property.
Net reduction 17,100

Pee Wee AA's Rally Past Lexington-Bedford

The Winchester Pee Wee AA's led by Pete Regan's hat trick unloaded on Lexington-Bedford with four third period goals, two on the power play, enroute to a 6-4 win.

Early in the third period Pete Regan swung out of his zone with a feed from goalie Jim Chute and Alternate Captain Chris Giso and fired from 20 feet out on the left side - bang.

Captain Brian Griffin wrapped up the first period attack when he blew across the front and jammed home a real tough goal - to the net it was Derek Binding, who had three assists and Nick Geannaris.

Giso who had two started off the third, with three minutes gone linemates Regan and Griffin caught him behind the net, and Chris did a back door number in the right corner. Regan put two more together on power plays with the first being another leftside 20-foot bullet from Giso and Griffin and the second a real blast. Regan was busted out by Binding and Geannaris and as he crossed the blue line blasted off a real bomb that was right in the upper corner on the farside.

Giso frosted it when he long ranged an open net number just inside the post from Mike White and Binding.

Working wingers were Jim Campo, Greg Winn, Marc Todisco and Pete Cote. While in the middle it was Dave Butt and Sukjong Chung. The defense was filled out by Scott Paine, Anthony Cucinatti and Billy Coppins.

of the tougher clubs in the league, he maintains Melrose, who the Sachems edged earlier by two points, has been the toughest to date. In fact, the Red Raiders almost halted Reading last week and Winchester has to deal with the perennially tough Rockets Jan. 24.

"Melrose is still the best team we've faced so far. They almost beat Reading so to beat them proved we have a good team. We have more depth than we've ever had," Kline said.

"We're not as strong in some events but in the events we don't take a first we usually get a second and third or at least break it up. Most teams have some area where they can be swept," Kline continued.

Kline expects his club to notch some of their best personal times Saturday when they travel to Harvard College for the State Track Coaches meet because of the excellent facilities at the new Harvard sports complex.

But after that the Sachems get back to the business at hand, the Middlesex League, and two of the last three will be proverbial "big" meets with Reading Jan. 24 and Woburn a week later on the 31st.

Wakefield Wakes Up, Thrashes Sachems, 8—0

It sounds odd, no doubt, that a hockey coach would praise his offense after the team had scored 0, 2 and 1 goals in the previous three contests.

Unless, of course, you are Winchester Hockey Coach Mike Houghton who claims his offense is playing probably the best it has all year in recent games, and particularly in last Saturday's 8-0 shellacking by resurgent (three straight) Wakefield.

That's correct, the offense shined in a shutout defeat, Houghton said.

"I think our offense is playing as well as it has all year," Houghton said after the defeat by the Warriors who surprised everyone, especially themselves by opening the season with five consecutive losses. "We outshot them. For the second time in a row we outshot the other team but we just can't put it in. We're in that kind of an offensive rut."

Saturday the third period was played for mere formalities as the Warriors had already rung up all eight goals, six of them coming in a disastrous second period for the Sachems.

A typical example of the Sachem frustration on offense was Tom Sullivan's four consecutive shots on Wakefield goalie John Merry that were all turned away.

He let go from inside the blue line with a shot that Merry didn't see but happened to get in the way of. Sullivan got the rebound and proceeded to hit the post. He got the second rebound and hit Merry again and got yet a third rebound and, yes, managed to rattle the post one more time.

"The goalies aren't that great," Houghton moaned. "We're getting good percentage shots but we're going afterwards upstairs with them where he can get them with the glove. We've got to get them down where he has to get it with the skate or the pad so we can get the rebound."

Earlier last week the Sachems encountered the same offensive difficulties to go along with the surrender of six goals in falling to Stoneham, 6-1.

After opening the season with a pulsating come-from-behind win over Watertown things have again turned sour for the Winchester hockey team.

"But we're not as bad as the score and our record indicates," Houghton insists. "But when things go bad for us they go bad very fast. There are a lot of self-doubts going on once we make a few mistakes. But it's not a situation where we're getting three shots a night and the three being gifts. Believe me, I know.

"Each night I look forward to it (the game). Like some of the other coaches have said, some night all those goals are going to come when you don't need them," Houghton said.

Houghton and the icemen couldn't pick a better time to test the red lamp than Saturday night when they travel to Woburn for a duel with leagueleading Woburn.

"The kids that participate in these programs, if it's important to them they'll raise the money or their parents will pay for it," Tanner said.

Tanner added that girls sports will not be affected as greatly as the boys, particularly by the elimination of the freshmen sports.

"A freshmen boy is quite different from a senior boy," she said. "But a freshman girl often times isn't that different from a junior or senior. Some develop later but the difference isn't nearly so great as with the boys."

During the presentation of the budget to the School Committee Monday night, many references were made by members of the audience that it was "immoral" to even consider keeping athletic teams when academic cuts are being made. Marshall bristled at the suggestion that sports were not an integral part of the educational process.

"I don't think athletics is something you can just fritter away like that," Marshall said. "Athletics has a great amount of educational value. Not everyone is going to be a football player but not everyone is going to be a mathemetician either."

He added that every kid he's known that has participated in sports has come away with lessons learned and experiences that can nbe used throughout his life. "Ask that same kid to relate some of his experiences he had in math class. You've got to be kidding," Marshall said shaking his head.

"I know one thing," Marshall continued. "I wouldn't want to send my kid to a school where he wouldn't have an opportunity to compete."

Real Estate

REAL ESTATE
by Ann Blackham

NOT ONLY FOR THE WEALTHY

I'll never pass up the opportunity to expound on the advantages of owning real estate. But it has occurred to me that many readers may assume that ownership of real estate, over and above their own home, is not for them because they may make an average working wage. This is far from true.

A large number of Americans own real estate other than their own home, and not all of them are in the higher income groups. The National Association of Realtors recently surveyed a cross section of the public and the results of the questionnaire punctured the myth that real estate investment is the exclusive domain of the well-to-do. The survey found that 38 percent of the respondents with incomes of $15,000 or more own other real estate. Also 23.7 percent in the $10,000 - $15,000 category have such investments; 22 percent of the respondents in the $6 - 10,000 bracket and 16 percent in the $6,000 and under category.

The survey also found that most Americans — 91 percent — veiw real estate as an excellent hedge against inflation.

In all your real estate needs — buying — selling & rentals — appraisals — consultation — please phone or drop in at:

GOT 'IM—Winchester boys Richard Settipane (middle) and his brother, Ronald accept congratulations from yacht skipper Bob McMann after reeling in rare shark off the coast of South Florida.

WHS Student Reels In Rare Shark

A 15-year-old Winchester High School student caught a rare Golden Dustky Killer Shark while deep sea fishing with his father over the Christmas holidays in Florida.

Richard Settipane needed 45 minutes to reel in the six and one-half foot, 155 pound shark while fishing off the coast of south Florida.

Captain Robert McMann of the yacht, Prowler V, said that type of shark is rarely caught and that the 155-pounder that Settipane reeled in was one of the biggest of that species. He said the fish usually weighs in the 100-125 pound range.

Settipane is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Settipane, 24 Churchill rd.

Frank as he was affectionately known, was born in Winchester 90 years ago, the son of the late Andrew and Margaret (Foley) Dineen. He attended Winchester schools and for many years until his retirement was employed in the plumbing industry.

He was the husband of the late Mary (Tracey) Dineen who passed away a number of years ago.

Dineen was active in the affairs of Winchester Knights of Columbus and was a Past Grand Knight and was a former member of St. Pius X General Assembly, and was also active in the affairs of St. Mary's Church.

Surviving him is one daughter Marguerite Dineen of Winchester and one son John Dineen of Nottingham, N.H., one brother John Dineen of Lorraine, Ohio and one sister Mrs. Mary Fallon of Harwichport Ma. Also surviving are several grandchildren.

The funeral was from the Lynch-Cantillon Funeral Home 263 Main st., Woburn Jan. 2, at 9:15 followed by a Funeral Mass in St. Mary's Church.

Interment took place in Calvary Cemetery, Woburn.

Unitarians Set Study Service Sunday

A re-enactment of an early Unitarian-Universalist (U-U) Church service will be conducted at 10:30 a.m. Sunday, Jan. 18 at the Winchester Unitarian Church.

Local residents, Lois Anderson and Deborah Ebling are producing and directing the service. The Reverends Charles Reinhardt and Jane Rzepka will be the primary participants.

This service is part of a month long program in exploring the heritage of Unitarianism.

Events have focused on U-U history both in Europe and New England. Neighborhood meetings have been held throughout the town for discussions on beliefs and values.

A Flaming Chalice, the Unitarian symbol, was purchased by proceeds raised by the Jr. Youth Group (7, 8, and 9 grades) at their Transylvanian bake sale following a sermon on exploring U-U European roots. There was also an all church trip to Concord organized after a sermon on Emerson.

Following the sermon on Jan. 18 there will be a slide presentation and tours of the church. U-U history books will continue to be available on sale.

Service At Immaculate Conception

On Sunday, Jan. 18, at 7 p.m. the Winchester Ecumenical Association will sponsor a service of prayer for Christian Unity at the Church of the Immaculate Conception.

The service will attempt to embody the international theme for 1981: from Paul's first letter to the Corinthians — "One Spirit — many gifts — one body."

Together, pastors and congregants of the Winchester parishes will lead the ceremony, confessing failures of the past on the part of the various communions, in reconstructing the one Body of Christ.

A procession, banners, a service of light, and a renewal of baptismal promises will highlight the ecumenical service. Music will be played and sung by St. Eulalia's Folk Group. Following the 45 minute service, a reception with refreshments will be held in Immaculate Conception Hall.

Begun in the United States at the turn of the century, the practice of celebrating the Week of Prayer for Christian Unity was subsequently endorsed by Pope Benedict XV and the World Council of Churches, and flourishes to this day.

Alcoholism Comes Out Of The Closet

By JOHN KENNEDY
First of a Series
Editor's Note: January is Alcohol Awareness Month

Alcohol abuse is a well known problem that has received much attention over the last two decades. Its growing notoriety has been sparked largely by the steady rise of alcoholism in our population, balanced with the breakdown of formidable social barriers that used to keep the alcoholic sheltered from awareness and understanding of his or her addiction.

Now, alcoholism has come out of the closet, and urgent pleas have been signalled by a variety of businesses and community organizations who've initiated programs aimed at treating the alcholic - whose numbers are estimated at being around the 10 million mark in the U.S. Despite the slow erasure of the social stigma formerly associated with alcoholism, the problem of identification and acceptance of a drinking problem still exists on a personal level for an untold percentage of the millions suffering from this debilitating disease.

Though it is difficult to present a clear, objective definition of alcholism, a person may be considered to have a serious drinking problem whenever excessive involvement with alcohol is found to have a consistently degenerating effect on a person's job, family, personality and health.

No one knows why some individuals become alcoholics and others do not — more than 75 percent of adult Americans drink alcoholic beverages at one time or another — but the uncontrollable habit of drinking strikes people from all segments of society.

Alcoholism as a disease is probably the most misunderstood of all, though the alcoholic is just as sick as the person with diabetes, heart disease or cancer. Our society has long held opinions on the alcoholic individual, either conversely labeling the person as a misfit or, instead, discounting the serious effects of drinking and even admiring the person who can "drink like a fish."

By 1956, however, the American Medical Association formally acknowledged the disease factor of alcoholism when it declared that, "Alcoholism must be regarded as within the purview of medical science." Since that time, both the AMA and the American Bar Association have issued statements recognizing alcoholism as an illness and one of the nation's major health problems.

In the initial stages of alcoholism, where it is often very hard to tell a heavy social drinker from an early stage alcoholic, there are usually symptoms that include more frequent drinking to relieve tensions while promises to quit drinking persist; increased tolerance of alcohol; and changes in personality that may manifest itself in irritability, forgetfulness and mental blackouts.

From this point, the cycle of alcoholism can develop to include a strengthening of physical and psychological dependency. At this middle stage, a person may find themselves trying to deny or conceal their drinking; drinking in the morning or when alone, while the outward signs of drinking become more noticeable to family and coworkers; an inability to "feel good," despite the quantity of alcohol consumed; and drinking becoming more of a daily necessity.

In the final stages of alcoholism, the person usually develops guilt feelings surrounding their drinking; may begin to distrust and avoid people who want to help and, eventually, may reach a point where, whether they're willing to admit it or not, alcohol and the need to drink takes precedence over family, friends and their job. By this stage, the steady involvement with alcohol inevitably begins to show itself in physical effects witnessed by tremors, hallucinations, weakness from malnutrition and damage to internal organs being the product of the alcoholic's deteriorating health.

The chemical present in all alcoholic beverages is ethanol, or ethyl alcohol. When drinking, alcohol is absorbed into the blood stream and circulates to all parts of the body. When it reaches the brain, alcohol acts as a depressant and, though this fact is often confused, all alcoholic beverages have similar physical effects, and an individual can turn into an alcoholic through a steady consumption of beer as easily as through drinking hard liquor.

The one thing everyone can do to prevent alcohol abuse and the spread of alcoholism is to pay close attention to personal drinking habits and the habits of family members. People must be especially honest with themselves about their own drinking, and if you drink every day, you should be prepared to examine why, where, when and how much you drink.

Prevention of alcoholism is still very much an individual effort based on a person's recognition and honest evaluation of their own drinking needs. If you think you may have a problem, or if your relationship with alcohol is getting the better of you, your job or family, there is help. Winchester Hospital's social service department sponsors a local chapter of Alcholics Anonymous, meeting at the hospital on Tuesday evenings at 8:30 p.m., and on Sunday nights at 8:30 p.m., there is a women's group designed to assist people in coping with their drinking.

They're always ready to help, and A.A. should not be looked upon as a last resort. They're for anyone who wants to make 1981 a happy, healthy and sober new year.

To Cut Or Not To Cut?

Town Meeting May Be Delayed

The dilemna posed by Proposition 2.5 gets, in the words of Alice in Wonderland, "curiouser and curiouser."

Selectmen said last week they might delay spring Town Meeting, currently set to begin April 27, until they see if the State Legislature will amend the measure.

Coupled with questions concerning possible amendments, are those which have the extent of cuts to be made in the 1982 fiscal year budget unclear.

"Certain things, once dismantled, are hard to put back in place again," said Selectmen Chairman Wade Welch. "I don't want to jump the gun on this, especially when the Legislature still has certain amendments in front of it."

Since the Legislature may not discuss amendments on 2.5 until spring, Winchester's Town Meeting could continue into the summer.

The third prong in this rather thorny issue concerns a revaluation program presently underway in town.

Conducted by Patten Appraisal Associates of Portland. Me., the program could result in an increase of property tax revenue.

As of Jan.1, Winchester had a full and fair market value of $567 million. Under the terms of Proposition 2.5, a town may levy property taxes up to 2.5 percent of the full and fair market value of the property.

Under this formula, Winchester could count on $14.2 million in property tax revenues for the up-coming fiscal year.

Since revaluation work is still underway and not expected to be complete until July, it remains unclear exactly how much the town can count on in property tax revenues. If assessors put the full and fair market value of property at a figure higher than the Jan. 1 figure, the town could count on more revenue from property taxes.

Prop. 2½: The Continuing Story

By delaying Town Meeting, Selectmen would have a better idea of what to expect in terms of property tax revenues.

Town Manager Tom Groux has said he expects reassessment figures to be higher than the $567 million figure. He's said that figure could run closer to $600 million or more.

Should Officials Delay Cuts?

In Boston, virtually nothing has been officially done to begin complying with Prop. 2.5.

In Lexington, school officials are taking a wait and see approach to see what type of legislative help might be forthcoming that would soften the 2.5 blow.

And Winchester Athletic Director William Colella complained when he had to present his recommended $75,000 in cuts to the School Committee Jan. 12, that he was the first in the Middlesex League required to do so.

And finally, girls' basketball Coach and teacher in the Tewksbury system, Donna Tanner, says that maybe the Winchester School Committee is "panicking. I think they're jumping the gun. I don't think they know what they're getting into yet. Instead of making cuts I think they should be looking at how to raise money," Tanner suggested.

The committee, of course, has cut nothing yet. Tonight they hold their annual public hearing on the budget and have spent the last two weeks discussing the administration's recommended $1.4

What Other Towns Are Doing

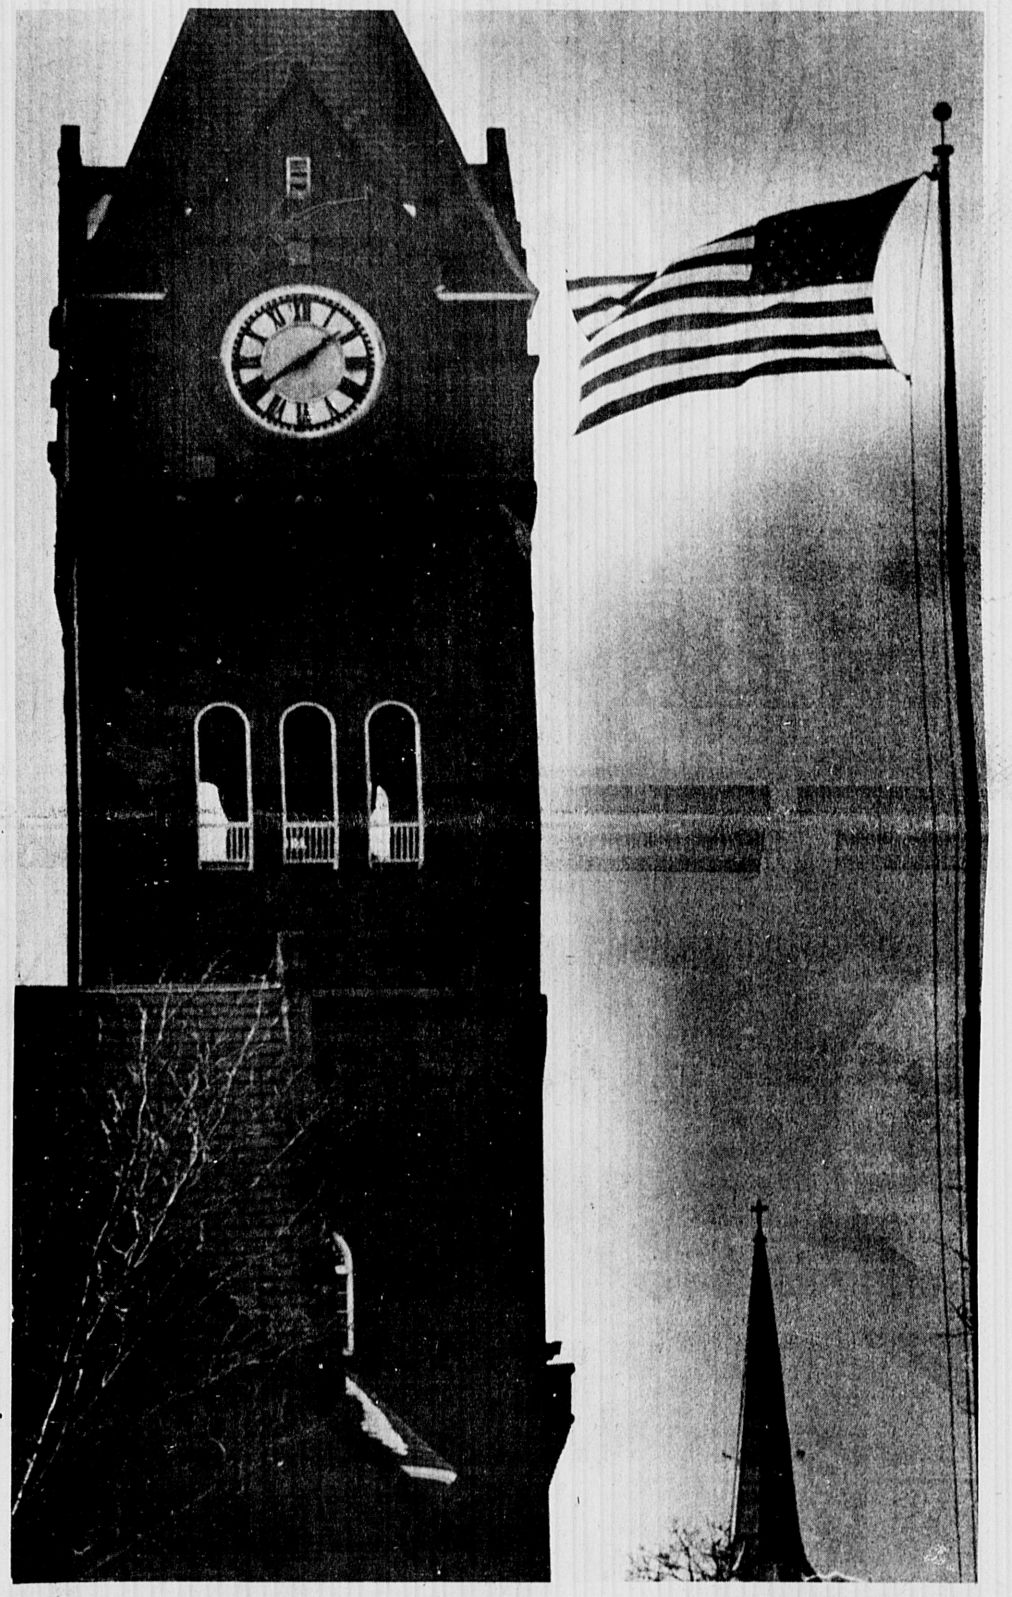

While the Winchester School Committee has moved quickly on proposing cuts necessitated by Prop. 2.5, area School Departments have reacted in various ways to the controversial tax-slashing measure that was overwhelmingly voted for in November.

In Lexington, the approach has been to wait and see what happens.

Asst. Superintendent Dr. Jeff Pierson said no recommendations have been made yet on what cuts will be necessary because of Prop. 2.5.

"Obviously two and a half will have some effect but it is not fully known yet, to Lexington anyway, exactly what those effects will be. The School Committee and Selectmen are still trying to determine what the figure will be," he said.

Third Robber Sentenced

The last of three suspects in the March hold-up of the Winchester Savings Bank - the first ever in Winchester's history - pleaded guilty Friday in Middlesex Superior Court and was sentenced to four and a half to seven years in Mass. Correctional Institute at Walpole.

Mark Giannino, 17, of Charlestown, pleaded guilty to charges of assault with intent to murder, breaking and entering in the daytime and armed robbery. Judge Edith Fine sentenced Giannino, who was 16 at the time of the robbery, to four and a half to seven years for the assault and breaking and entering charges and five years probation for the armed robbery charges, to be served concurrently.

Assistant District Attorney Thomas Drechsler, prosecutor in the case, said his office had recommended five to eight years in Walpole for all three charges.

The Giannino sentencing successfully completes the prosecution of the three Charlestown men involved in the noon hold-up of the Washington st. bank on March 22.

James Chambers, 21, was sentenced to five to 10 years on two counts of armed robbery while masked , five to 10 years for assault with intent to murder, three to five years for receiving stolen property and three to five years for carrying an illegal firearm. All the sentences are to be served concurrently at MCI-Walpole.

Salvatore Montiero, 20, was sentenced to eight to 10 years at MCI-Walpole on armed robbery charges. At the time of his sentencing in October Montiero was already serving a six to 12 year term in Walpole for his role in a Marshfield bank heist.

The Giannino case took the longest to prosecute due to problems because of his age. He was originally arraigned as an adult but when his mother brought forth evidence that he was just 16 at the time his case was returned to juvenile court. But Woburn District Court Judge Francis Cullen reversed that decision and his case was then sent back to Superior Court where he was tried as an adult.

"I was pleased," Drechsler admitted after the case was successfully closed. "Transferring someone from juvenile court is not done that often. There are high standards set. You really have to

Town Elections Set March 31

Polling Places Cut To Four

With town elections slated for March 31, Selectmen voted Monday to change the polling place locations, reducing that number eight to four.

Following a presentation by Town Clerk Carolyn Ward, the Board voted to have Precincts 1 and 2 voting in Town Hall while Precincts 3 and 4 will vote in the Lincoln School.

Precincts 5 and 6 will cast their ballots in the VinsonOwens school while Precincts 7 and 8 will vote in the Lynch School.

One of six options presented to the Board by Ward, the selected plan would cost $2,916 and is what the Town Clerk termed the "best long term solution."

Criteria considered in formulating the plans included voter convenience, available area, parking considerations, space for storing voting machines and cost, Ward said.

There are a number of seats on various boards throughout the town, among them the Selectman's position currently held by John Williams. Williams has filed papers with the Town Clerk's office to seek re-election to that seat.

Other positions facing voters March 31 include the Town Meeting moderator's seat currently held by John Sullivan, a one-year term.

Also up for re-election are two seats on the School Committee, currently held by Sandra S. Rodgers and Mary Weylman. Both of those terms run for three years.

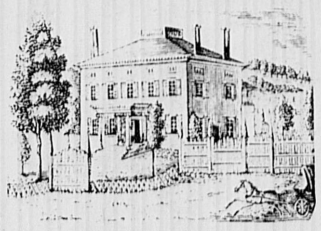

Planning Board seats occupied by Stephen Carr Anderson and Joseph Geary Jr. are also on March's ballot. Both seats are for three-year terms.

Werner Carlson has filed papers to seek re-election to his three-year seat on the Board of Assessors while Geary has also filed papers for the post he holds on the Planning Board.

Voters will also decide one seat on the Board of Health currently held by N. Bruce Hanes. That position represents a threeyear term.

Elderly Are Facing Housing Problems In Winchester

By STEVEN AUSTIN

Clara Hewis of the Winchester Housing Authority found a great deal of frustration on the other end of the telephone when it rang in her office last week.

The caller wanted to know if the thermostat in the Housing Authority office was turned down to 55 degrees.

Hewis explained that since the office was heated electrically, it did not fall under Gov. Edward King's mandatory gas conservation measures.

"It didn't begin so much with a hello," Hewis said Monday. "There was a lot of frustration there. Later, it came out that the woman couldn't heat her house or even pay for it."

Currently, the Housing Authority maintains 112-units of low-income housing for elderly and handicapped persons.

Sixty of those units are located on Wesley st. with an additional 52 units on Palmer st.

However, obtaining that housing is not a fast process.

Subsidized by the State, the units require residents to meet three qualifications.

Applicants must be 65 years or older, have an annual income of $8,680 and assets no greater than $15,000. Couples may have a combined income of $9,920.

Rent in the units is based on income with the maximum being $206 a month.

Currently, a waiting list exists with approximately 100 people, Hewis explained.

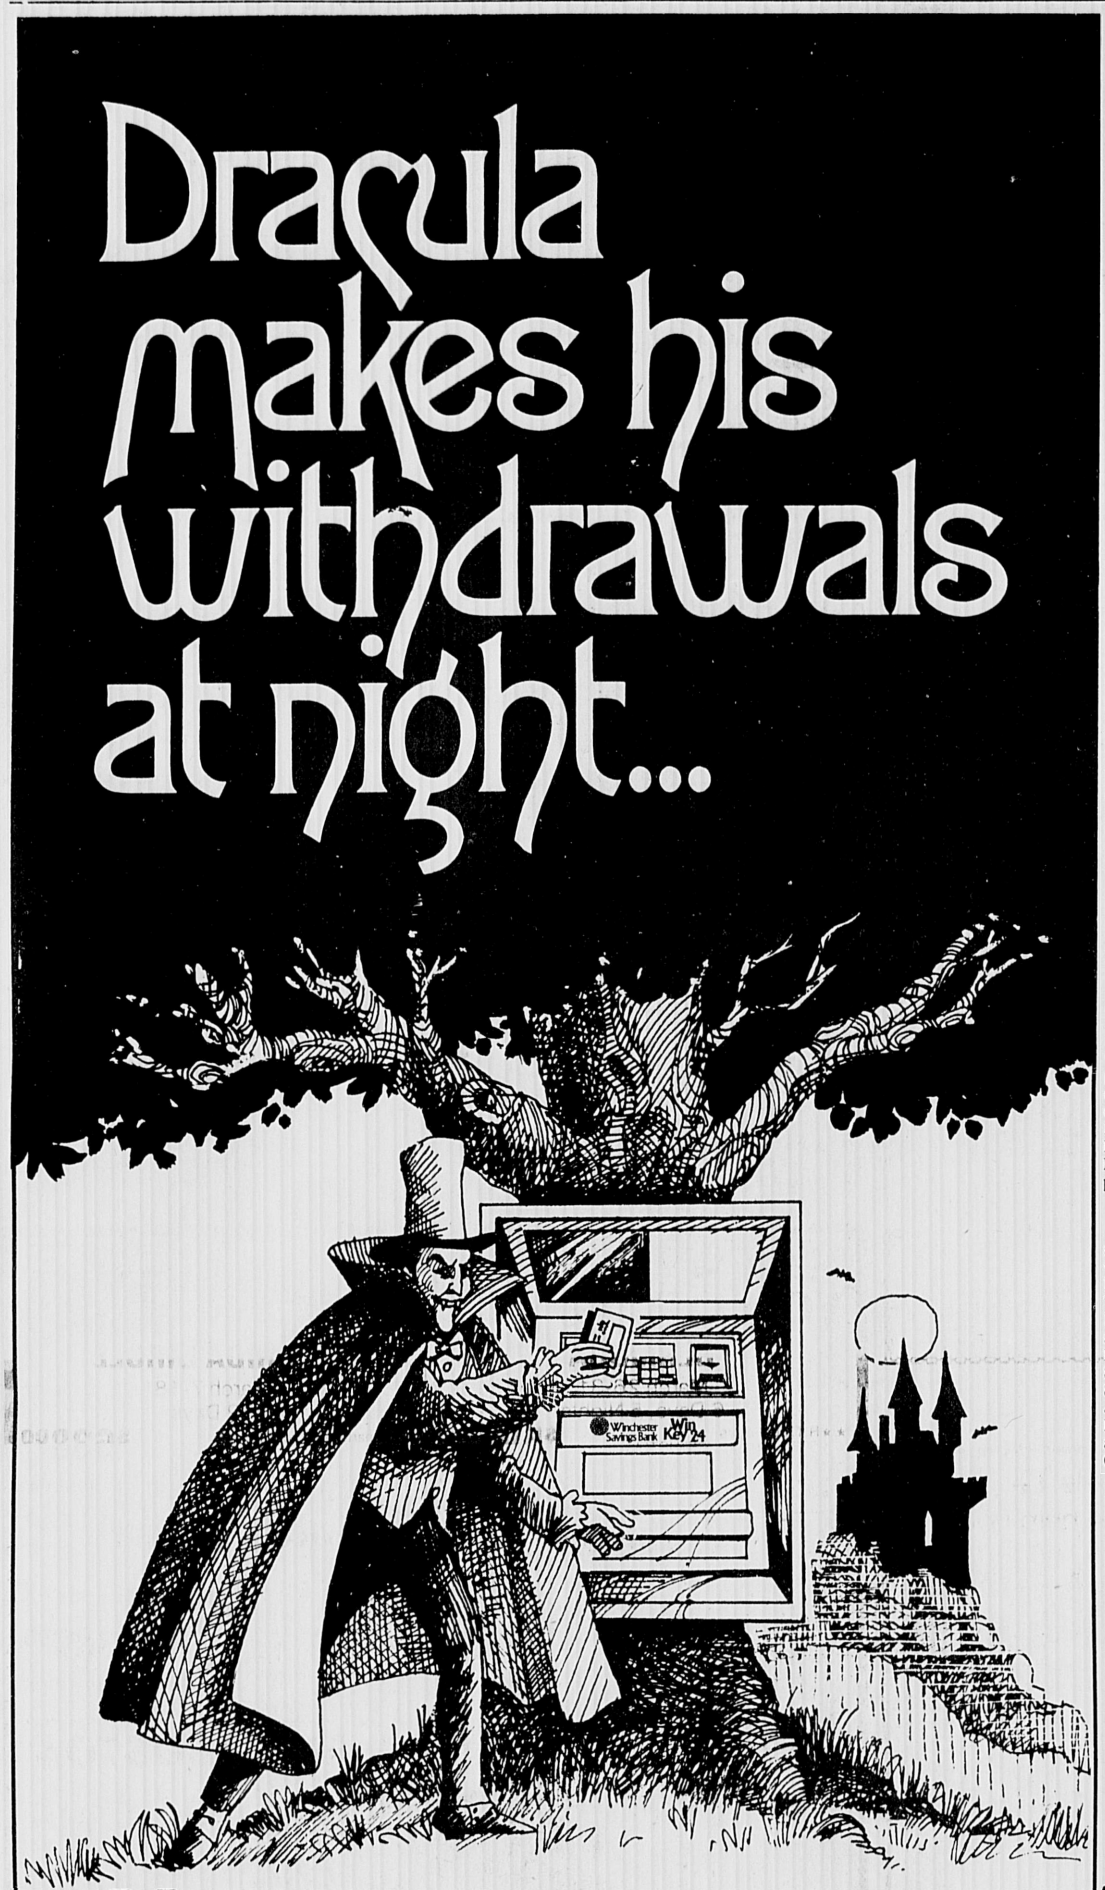

With a national vacancy rate of approximately 5 five percent a year, there may be five or six vacancies a year, Hewis explained. That could mean a wait of five years, she said.

Chartered in 1970, the Housing Authority began construction on the Palmer st. project in 1972 and opened the facility in March of 1974. Construction on the Wesley st. project began in 1975 and was completed in June of 1978.

Hewis said the Authority had received approximately 250 applications during the last five years.

Cutbacks In Transportation And Nursing Services Recommended

Proposed cutbacks in transportation that will force a change in hours at the high and junior high were among the items discussed at the School Committee's final preliminary budget meeting Monday night.

After facing overflow crowds for discussions of the high school, elementary, junior high and athletic budgets, the School Committee was met by a small crowd to discuss the remaining sections of the proposed 1982 budget.

The most significant parts of Monday's uncharacteristically brief (2 hours) meeting were the proposed $22,000 cut in the transportation budget that will eliminate use of the late bus at the high school and junior high and force changes in the hours at those two schools. The elementary schools are unaffected by the changes.

Under the administration's recommendation the nine buses presently used for high school and junior high students would be reduced to seven. To allow the for the same service the hours had to be staggered at the high school and junior high levels.

The administration is suggesting that the high school day run from 7:45-2:08 and the junior high from 8:15-2:30. The elementary times would remain at 8:45-2:45.

School Superintendent William MacDonald added that the anticipated school closings would change the situation dramatically.

Alice McCarter, President of the McCall Parents Association, asked that the committee and administration look into ways of saving the late bus for students involved in extracurricular activities.

"The parents have said they are willing to pay for late buses," McCarter told the committee. "And I think there are some parents on the far side of town that would like to see you address this problem."

After MacDonald expressed doubts over consistent use of the late bus School Committee member Constance Papas suggested that a determination be made at the beginning of the school year of how many students would use the late bus and then sell tickets to fund the service for the whole year.

She further suggested that School Committee Chairman Catherine Alexander approach Recreation Director Ken Cereghino with a request for help in drawing up a schedule for late bus use.

"Accomodation is the word of the hour and I think people in Town Hall can be creative enough to help us out," Papas said.

Other proposed cuts to meet the $1.4 million the committee is supposed to cut as their share of the Prop. 2.5 burden were in energy, nursing services, summer school, school lunch and community use of schools.

The administration is recommending that $50,000 be cut from the school lunch program, reducing that budget to $36,000. That action would eliminate hot lunches at the junior high. Lunch cost would remain at 65 cents (up from 55 this fall).

The elimination of the hot lunch at the junior high would result in the laying off off six people (leaving a staff of three). Although no high school employees lose their jobs the total weekly hours would be reduced from 329 to 276.

The budget that provides custodial service for after school activities will be reduced from $5,000 to $3,000 under the administration recommendations.

The $11,741 summer school budget will be eliminated. The money would be made up by boosting tuition costs for students attending classes.

MacDonald added that he didn't anticipate any reduction in course offerings because of the depleted budget.

The administration is also suggesting that the Adult Education and open gym program become self-supporting through increased fees. That budget for last year was $3,400.

The other major reduction was in the nuring services s where it was recommended that this year's $40,900 budget be reduced to $10,000.

That would leave one full time nurse for all the schools as opposed to 2.8 positions presently.

Martha Hiam, a member of the Visiting Nurses Association who works with the Winchester schools, called the reduction "an insult to the nursing profession."

She said the $10,000 for approximately nine months work translates into a $13,000 annual salary for someone who has a bachelor od science degree. "That's degrading," she said.

School Committee member Roger Bauman disagreed, saying the pay was proportionate to the amount of hours worked.

Not working the full year combined with working a school day as opposed to an eight-hour day meant that the $10,000 salary was comparable to a $16,600 annual salary.

Business Manager Jack Fallon told the committee that a $46,000 reduction in the energy budget will be recommended. That figure did not, however, take into consideration the probable school closings. Fallon said that would add an additional $120,000-$140,000 to that reduction if two schools or the junior high school were closed.

Annual Public Hearing On School Budget Tonight At Sanborn House

The School Committee will meet tonight for its annual public hearing on the proposed cut of $1.4 million from the 1982 budget.

The committee completed a series of five meetings Monday on individual segments of the budget. The $1.4 million figure that the administration and committee is working with now is a best estimate of what the impact of Proposition 2.5 will be. Depending on legislative changes in the tax-cutting measure and the final results of the revaluation of town property that figure could change.

The five meetings at Sanborn House drew overflow crowds on every occasion but committee members are unsure of the turnout one can expect at tonight's hearing. In the past the attendance has been so abysmal that the hearings were moved from the high school auditorium to the close quarters at Sanborn House.

The committee will be taking a final vote on the proposed budget on Feb. 16 and will present that to Town Manager Thomas Groux two days later and to the Finance Committee on Feb. 25.

School Committee Chairman Catherine Alexander has emphasized to audiences at the recent budget meetings that even after the formal vote on Feb. 16 changes in the budget can be made up until Spring Town Meeting begins on April 27.

As in the five previous budget meetings, the public will be able to air their concerns and suggestions at tonight's hearing, which begins at 7:30 p.m.

Among the proposed cuts that caused the most reaction were:

GUIDANCE DEPARTMENT- The head of the Guidance Department at the high school and the elimination of all counselors at the elementary and junior high.

ELEMENTARY SPECIALISTS- The elimination of 7.3 teacher specialist position in music, art and physical education at the elementary level would reduce student time in those areas by onehalf.

READING SPECIALIST - At the high school. Tutors would assume the responsibility for Chapter 766 students,and the schools would do "as much as possible" for the other students.

ATHLETIC TRANSPORTATION- All transportation to away games for the athletes, cheerleaders, tumblettes and band members would be eliminated. The administration is recommending that booster clubs be formed to raise money for buses.

The School Committee is still awaiting recommendations from a special committee that is looking into the closing of two elementary schools or the junior high.

The Committee to Study School Closings, made up of Business Manager Jack Fallon, Data Processing Director Art Sarno and elementary school principal Martha Grenzeback have been working with Superintendent William MacDonald on the possibilities since Jan. 6. The School Committee is waiting for their report and recommendations before beginning debate on the subject.

The closing of two elementary schools would save the town approximately $260,000 while the closing of McCall would save $220,000-$230,000. That money has already been incorporated into the proposed $1.4 million to be cut so if the decision is to close neither elementary schools nor McCall the committee would have to find that sum from other areas.

Gas Shortage Doesn't Affect Local Schools

Winchester schools were not affected by the recent natural gas shortage that caused the closings Friday of scores of schools across the state.

School Superintendent William MacDonald said only two schools - Mystic Elementary School and the high school - are heated by gas and both have ability to switch to oil heat within a half-hour.

MacDonald added that as soon as the shortage and possible closings were mentioned Wednesday by Gov. Edward King the two schools were switched onto the oil heating system.

This week the administration is presenting the 1982 budget recommendations to the School Committee with no provisions for 2.5 impact. Pierson said the worst projections show the Lexington schools having to cut $500,000-$600,000 from next years's budget.

The Arlington schools face a potential $4 million reduction in their budget next year but don't expect to begin prioritizing until mid-February, according to Asst. Superintentdent of Business Gerald Houghton.

As many as 171 teachers and school personnel may lose their jobs to meet the requirements.

Although Houghton said he was not optimistic that any legislative changes in the law will be forthcoming, Arlington is expected to have the final results of the town-wide revaluation done March 1 which will help the town in determining an accurate figures for Prop. 2.5 impact.

The possible elimination of interscholastic sports in Burlington has gained much media attention but Burlington's Coordinator of Secondary Education Michael Malinowski said as much as 100 school personnel may be laid off to meet a projected $2.1 million reduction in the fiscal 1982 budget.

He added the figure may rise depending on the final contract agreement with the teachers that is still in negotiations. The Burlington teachers contract expired this fall.

In Belmont, School Superintendent Dr. William Casey said his office will present a budget this week prepared "under normal circumstances." The budget recommendations will not reflect the impact of Prop. 2.5, he said.

He said the best estimates he has had thus far show the School Department share of the 2.5 costs will exceed $1 million.

in cuts for 1982.

But with revaluation of town property in progress is Winchester acting too soon?

Most town officials would say no.

"They're doing what they should do," said State Rep. Sherman "Whip" Saltmarsh. "They're complying with the law. To the best of my knowledge they were the first community in the Commonwealth to take action (In December, Town Meeting cut $717,000 from this year's budget to meet the auto excise shortfall). I don't think any other community acted so fast. I think they have acted in a wise manner," Saltmarsh said this week.

State Sen. Samuel Rotondi agrees and says the question of delay is probably an irrelevant one.

"Some people pay attention to the law and start to carry it out," Rotondi said. "Others are not. I respect Winchester for carrying it out and starting to act. We are in an age of limits. That process is probably the most positive thing to come ourt of 2.5. The process (of streamlining the budget) is a healthy one. Winchester is certainly on the right track in addressing the issue."

Selectman Chairman Wade Welch, who claims he usually maintains a "religious vow to stay out of the School Committee business", says the decision of waiting or not is, for all practical purposes out of the hands of the committee because of the Charter.

The five-year-old Charter insists that the School Committee submit their budget proposal to the Town Manager's office well in advance of the completion of other town budgets. That handicap has naturally been magnified in the face of 2.5.

"They don't have the luxury of waiting that the Selectmen do because of the Charter," Welch said. "They are in an impossible situation to comply with the Charter and the law. They have to formulate their budget on the worst possible projections."

School Superintendent William MacDonald admits he has reservations about acting so quickly but adds there is little choice.

"I won t say we're going to fast but I will say we're going faster than other towns," MacDonald said. "What I'm nervous about is we're given a number, $1.5 million, that is supposed to be our share. But what if that number from Town Hall is conservative?"

MacDonald said he wasn't optimistic about Legislative help or that the new property values willsignificently affect the outcome' but feared the consequences if it did.

"It might still be changed dramatically," he warned. "If that's the case then we've got a lot of people excited too soon." If it's legislative changes officials are waiting for, Saltmarsh strongly suggested that nobody hold their breath.

"I've had a lot of mail on it and most of it says to leave 2.5 as it is. As a legislator, at this point, I don't think we'll be making many changes in the law unless there(there's a tremendous outcry from the public, and I don't mean the public employees. Not that I don't feel bad for them and would do the same their doing if I was in their position. But the only requests I've had to date (to change 2.5) have been from public employees," Saltmarsh said.

Saltmarsh warns against playing the waiting gamew. "If towns are not complying and are hoping the Legislature will bail them out are making a drastic mistake. They're just whistling in the dark," he said. "The vote was so overwhelming it would fly in the face of the electorate. I think it would be irresponsible of me to vote against it now."

School Committee Member Constance Papas disagrees with some concerns that once programs are cut they will not be reinstated, even if the financial picture brightens in the near future.

"I think the community understands that we're forced to do this because of 2.5," Papas said. "In that context I think things can be brought back. It won't do much for stability in the system and might cause a lack of confidence, but I don't think there is any reason to think these things can't be reinstated if they are cut."

Welch says the key is not to totally "dismantle" programs before the Legislature has a chance to water down the law. He is confident that wil come about. Not this year, but possibly next.

"It is incumbent upon us not to dismantle the town. I think it will take a year to get 2.5 shaved down," Welch said.

Welch added that increased fees for one year, use of the stabilization fund and a possible sewer use charge are among the options the town can consider in keeping from a major reduction in town services next year.

"I hope people would understand that these cuts are not cast in bronze. Let's cool the rhetoric and wait and see ," he said.

Regan, Cappello Cited For Work

They didn't have to go.

Hell, it wasn't even their town, much less their fire department.

But when a derailment in Somerville last April caused the leak of phosphorous trichloride which turned to a choking cloud when it met the air, Winchester fire fighters John Regan and Louis Cappello drove to the scene to help.

The two spent almost eight hours replinishing air cylinder systems, systems that allowed other fire fighters protection when working in the cloud of gas.

Their work has not gone unnoticed.

Somerville Mayor Eugene C. Brune has sent a letter to Winchester's Board of Selectmen expressing his gratitude for the action of Regan and Cappello.

Brune also included a citation for the pair.

"I have not forgotten the scarifice so many dedicated people made for the city of Somerville," Brune's letter said

The citation speaks of the "vigilant contribution in unselfishly working toward the protection and safety of the people of Somerville on April 3, 1980, the worst hazardous chemical spill in the history of the Commonwealth."

"Your contribution made that day one that can long be remembered as a day which ultimately came to an end without the loss of a single life," Brune's letter said.

Both local firemen were injuried while going to the aid of Somerville residents.

Their actions resulted in liver and kidney disorders from which both have subsequently recovered.

Selectmen plan to present the citation to Fire Chief Robert W. McElhinney at a later date.

—'Sea Scape' Preparations Go On—

Hollywood may be "tinsel town" but Winchester is not far behind with the Winton Club Cabaret "Sea'Scape" coming up at Town Hall Jan. 27—31.

On stage is the glamour and excitement of the performance itself, and Director Chris Brown is guiding the cast through nightly rehearsals all month to insure the perfection of each song and dance number aboard the imaginary ship S.S. Winton. A large cast of veteran performers, plus a good number of equally talented newcomers, will prove that our local amateurs rank with the best in providing top notch entertainment.

But all is not sparkle and glitter, and untold hours of hard work have gone into producing "Sea'Scape."

Cabaret Chairman Mrs. Richard W. Swanson has called on a host of experienced and willing Winton Club members to work on her committee, and in addition she has a dedicated group of Winton Club husbands as her stage crew.

Under the direction of Frank Gunby and John Sutherland these skilled amateur stage hands have built the Town Hall stage ramp, constructed flats for set designs, and invented special effects to make the show especially interesting. Mrs. Ralph Swanson is Scenery Chairman, working with a corps of club members who have become experts in this field over the years.

Much of the "tinsel" of any stage production is the costuming of the performers, and Chris Brown has provided some of the most spectacular costumes ever seen on a Winton Club stage for "Sea'Scape." The work of fitting and coordinating hundreds of costumes falls to Costume Committee Chairmen Mrs. Robert Baron and Mrs. George Plowman and their assistants. They are truly the "Downstairs" of Cabaret "Upstairs Downstairs" as they labor in the basement of Town Hall during show week while the sparkling lights shine and the music sounds upstairs.

Sharing various duties behind the scenes are Mrs. John Culver, Mrs. Robert Duffy, Mrs. Salmon W. Putnam, IV, Mrs. John Lynch, Mrs. Hiram L. Smith, Jr., and Mrs. Joseph A. Vitka, Jr. who will be working on Costume Creations, Make-up, Prompters, and Properties.

For information on the purchase of tickets for "Sea'Scape" call Mrs. James E. Barger at 729-4760.

have a good case to transfer a juvenile to adult court," he explained.

Under Mass. General Laws 119, section 61, a juvenile can be tried as an adult after consideration of five conditions. Those conditions are seriousness of offense, criminal background of the defendant, protection to the public, past treatment of the defendant and liklihood of rehabilitation.

Drechsler said Giannino had a record prior to his involvement in the Winchester robbery. He also has assault with intent to murder charges pending in Suffolk Superior Court in connection with a stabbing incident in Charlestown in May, Dreschler said.

The Saturday noon hold-up was foiled by off-duty Winchester Police Officer James Pierce.

Pierce, who was driving with his young son up Washington st. enroute to a Cub Scout meeting, was stopped at a traffic light when he saw people in the bank with their hands raised. He pulled over to Park rd. and approached the bank.

As he did, a driver in a yellow Ford Torino parked in front of the bank and later identified as Montiero, beeped his horn and sped away from the scene.

Once the other two suspects inside, Chambers and Giannino, realized Pierce was approaching they fired two shots out the front door and fled out the fear rear door towards Swanton st.

On Swanton st. Chambers forced a woman and her son out of their car at gunpoint. He was later apprehended at the corner of Church and Dix streets after he lost control of his car while being chased by police.

Giannino was arrested later that evening in his Charlestown home and Montiero was picked up three days later in Boston.

All $28,440 taken in the heist was recovered.

—Property Revaluation On Schedule—

Patten Appraisal Associates, the firm contracted to do the town-wide revaluation of property, is progressing at a steady rate, according to supervisor Richard Mirick.

Al Green, field appraiser, is currently working in the eastern end of the Swanton and Cross st. neighborhood. Dan Dwyer, field appraiser, is currently working in the southern end of the Main st. and Highland ave. neighborhood. Field appraiser Tim Schmonsees and Mirick are inspecting properties that have changed ownership within the past few years. They will be traveling all over town.

All field appraisers will be carrying personal identification, informational booklets on the revaluation and data-collection cards with property ownership listed on each.

Information will be left at properties where the resident wasn't home at the time of the inspection telling the owner how to get in touch with the appraisers at the assessors office in Town Hall. If an owner cannot meet with the appraisers an estimate of the property will be made.

★Housing

While there is no residency requirement, perference is given to residents.

The difficulty in constructing new elderly and handicapped housing projects comes in obtaining funding, Hewis said.

Winchester, she said, doesn't seem to be particularly high on funding source lists, she said.

"Even though we don't have a huge number of people we do have people we need to take care of," she said.

Currently, plans are underway to seek funding for Winchester House, a proposed 105-unit elderly and handicapped project which would be located in the old train station at Rangeley and Waterfield roads.

According to Richard Murphy, one of the developers of the proposed project, the Department of Housing and Urban Development has qualified the project for funding.

"It's something that could possibliy occur today," Murphy said Monday, "and then again it may never happen."

The proposal was initially developed by the Boston Investment and Development Company.

Developers had sought a tax break in developing the project under Chapter 121A of the Urban Redevelopment Corporation.

Under the terms of this exemption, the developers would have paid taxes based on gross income rather than property tax revaluation.

One of the requirements in obtaining that tax status had the Planning Board ruling the area to "blighted and decadent."

The Planning Board voted 3-2 not to make such a ruling in September of 1979.

Without that ruling, developers said the project could "not go forward." They have since been seeking alternative funding sources.

The problem of elderly housing is one which is basic in Winchester, according to Shelley Ober, Program Administrator at the Jenk's Senior Center.

"I see it as a real need for people," Ober said Monday. "I get calls from people who live in big homes who are on fixed incomes and they can't afford to heat their houses."

While she said she refers a number of these calls to the Housing Authority, she said there are "a lot of people in between," who can't meet low-income housing requirements.

"I see people having to leave town," she said. "There are a lot more apartments in Woburn and Medford."

★Delay

If Groux's prediction is correct, the town could count on at least $15 million in property tax revenue.

As Town Comptroller Al Faggiano said last week, "The question is, "What the assessors will produce."

Cuts in the current fiscal year budget were made by Town Meeting in December. Totalling $714,000, those cuts included the elimination of the mini-bus service and garbage collection.

Estimates for cuts in the 1982 fiscal year budget have been put at approximately $3 million, barring legislative amendments to 2.5.

The School Committee has proposed cuts totalling $1.4 million. Among those cuts are the elimination of 68 school employee positions including teacher, clerical and custodial positions.

The School Committee has set a public hearing on those proposed cuts tonight at 7:30 at the Sanborn House.

Selectmen's Notes

New Officers

Police Chief John McHugh introduced three new police officers to the Board of Selectmen Monday.

Those officers inlcude James Gray, a Holton st. resident who worked in law enforcement on Cape Cod, Paul DeLuca, a 1970 graduate of Winchester High School who holds a Bachelors degree in sociology from the University of Massachusetts and lives on Bates rd. and Fred Cammon, a 1970 graduate of Winchester High School with experience with the MDC. DeLuca has worked as a provisional officer with the Winchester department since 1976 and Betty J. Haley have filed papers to seek re-election for these three-year posts.

★Change

The Winchester Housing Authority seat currently held by Charles T. Doucette will also be decided by voters. That term runs for five years.

Each of the eight Town Meeting precincts has eight, three-year vacancies to be filled.

In addition, there are a number of one-and-two-year terms for Town Meeting members to be filled.

In Precinct 1, there is one term for one year to fill. Voters will also decide one one-year term in Precinct 2. In addition, Precinct 2 also has three two-year terms to be voted upon.

Precinct 3 has one one-year term for voters to decide. Precinct 4 has one two-year term while Precinct 6 has one one-year term.

In Precinct 7 there is one one-year term to be voted upon.

Precinct 8 has two one-year terms and two two-year terms for Town Meeting members.

The last day to obtain nomination papers is Thursday, Feb. 19. Those papers must be submitted to the Town Clerk's office by Tuesday, Feb. 24.

Those voters currently registered don't have to register . again to vote in town elections.

However, unregistered voters have until March 11 at 10 p.m. to register.

The Town Clerk's office is planning special registration March 7 from noon until 8 p.m.

Ward said persons with question on filing nomination papers or voting should contact her office at Town Hall or call 729-1105.

MAGICIAN RICHARD VOLCANE plies his trade last week during the Cavalcade of Mystery Show sponsored by the Winchester High School newspaper The Red and Black. The show was put on to benefit the paper whose funds were cut in the wake of Proposition 2.5.
(Staff Photo By Noreen Murphy)

Show Benefits WHS Paper Jan. 17

The Calvacade of Mystery brought an afternoon of fun and excitement to Winchester kids Saturday, Jan. 17.

Volcane the magician and his troup of assistants entertained hundreds of kids as part of a fundraising drive sponsored by the Winchester High School paper, the Red and Black. Approximately 650-700 kids packed the auditorium for the afternoon performance.

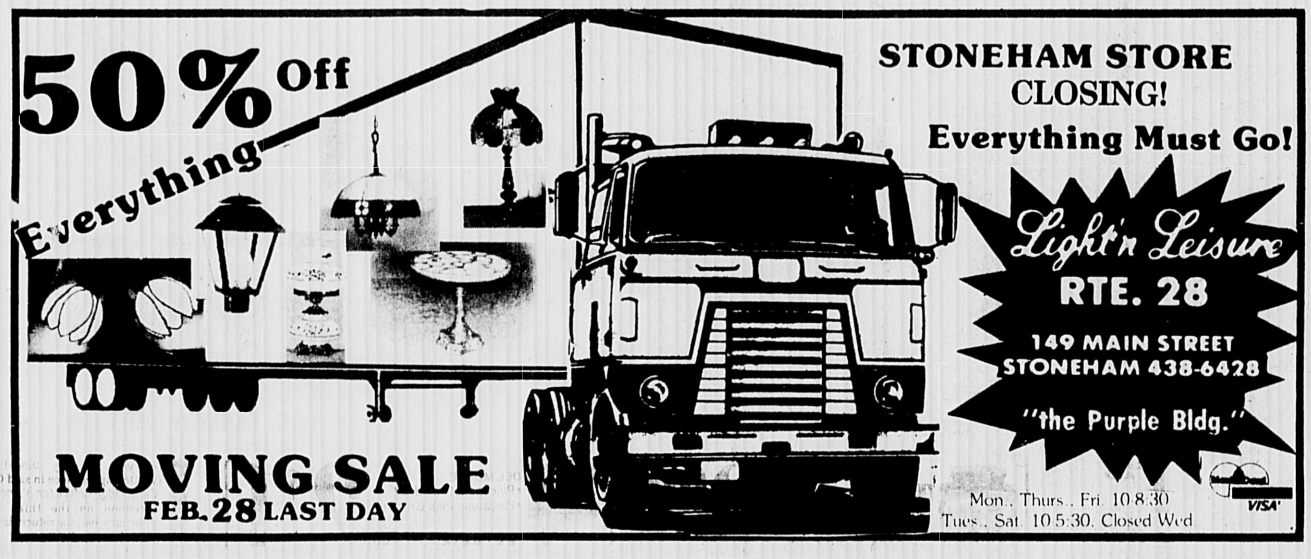

Volcane performed many of the traditional tricks, such as the "Lady in the Box with the Swords" and many more. He also turned an ordinary handerkerchief into a "ghost" and gave a not-so-ordinary cooking lesson that yielded to the surprise of the audience-a cute bunny rabbit.

It was Puki, the aspiring clown, however, that won the hearts of many of the kids and delighted the young audience. Peter Hammond, the young magician studying under Volcane, performed an entertaining card trick that puzzled the audience.

The performance was concluded by a drawing for a white bunny rabbit.

Running On

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The runners who pass the home of Ms. Cresse (THE WINCHESTER STAR, Jan. 15) are not running to be noticed.

It is the runner Ms. Cresse failed to describe who can explain that. The characters she did describe know whom I mean. Indeed, they have studied the bodies of those runners not described and have seen the unity they possess. They have observed legs and arms and heartbeat all flowing in harmony. These characters have decided they will teach their bodies not to give in when pain sears from their knees to their hips. They have chosen to believe at some moment they will take the step that catapults them from puffing, shuffling, tightly wound balls into sleek and graceful streams of rhythm that could go on forever.

Their minds cling to that picture over against the cramps on the roads and the stiffness on the stairs the next day. They cling to that image so that somewhere down the road they will become it. "What you see is what you get" is their motto. And what they choose to see is no less than the vision of their own bodies transformed, the struggle pounded beneath their feet and the road rising to meet them.

With such a vision, they would be amused to think they were being judged as wanting to be noticed.

Democracy

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

We continually hear or read the term "democracy" used when referring to our federated constitutional republic.

Our founding fathers, who were well educated men, hated and feared a democracy as the worst of all possible forms of government. So they took great pains to give us a republic instead. And it is not by accident that the word democracy does not even appear anywhere in our Declaration of Independence, our Constitution, or the constitution of any of our fifty states.

A democracy, however, is different, where by the sheer will of the majority immediately prevails, without any brakes on it of either law or custom. No matter how unreasonable or untimely this will of the majority may be and it works out sooner or later in practice to mean any demagogue with sufficient ambition and charisma can determine what he thinks the will of the people is or ought to be; and can thus establish himself as a leader over all of his fellow citizens, down the road to chaos, anarchy, and then dictatorship. In normal times, as Cicero pointed out almost exactly two thousand years ago, this is usually done by "someone bold and unscrupulous...who curries favor with the people by giving them other men's property."

How familiar.

What Women Don't Want

By TERRY MAROTTA

What do women want? Freud asked this question a long time ago. You can almost hear the exasperation in his voice, even after all these years.

If he were around now, we might have some answers for him. There have certainly been a great many words exchanged on the subject since his time. There's been a lot of water over the dam.

Women got the vote, showed their knees, threw away the whale-bone corsets and went to work in defense plants. They gave birth to a lot of babies; with the help of effective contraceptives, they chose not to give birth to a whole lot more. For the past few years, two states have been governed by women. The U.S. Senator from Kansas and the brand-new Ambassador to the United Nations are both women. And few would argue that Georgia O'Keefe, at 93, is America's greatest living artist.

So, as that singularly repulsive ad suggests, we've come a long way, baby.

And yet some would say that Freud's question continues to echo, unanswered, into the 1980's.

I would hesitate to speak for over a hundred million American women; I'm not sure I know what they want.

But I have a few ideas about what they don't want.

They don't want to be their husband's feather-brained wards anymore. Women, for the most part, are through with playing child-bride to a controlling daddy-man.

This daddy-man school is best exemplified by Marabel Morgan and her Total Woman program, which has enjoyed success in some quarters in the last few years. This system involves finding happiness by submitting entirely to your husband, by placing his desires before your own at every turn. Do whatever he would have you do, Ms. Morgan suggests, and bask in the glow of his grateful affection.

Prepare his favorite dishes, she exhorts, iron his underpants if that's what the hard-working dear likes, and do, by all means greet him one night dressed as a saucy French maid. The dinner may grow cold, but ah, the spark that will warm your marriage!

This is the essence of the Total Woman ethic. What most people don't realize is that its popularity exists predominantly among strongly religious middle-American housewives (and of course their husbands, the real beneficiaries). Marabel and most of her followers are conservative Christians, fundamentalists, no doubt members in good standing of Jerry Falwell's Moral Majority. Submission to one's husband is subtly linked, for these women, with the notion of following Jesus, of putting your life in His hands. But there's a big difference between seeking the Peace That Passeth Understanding by submitting to divine will, and allowing your husband to forbid you to get a job.

Even Anita Bryant, Marabel's spiritual sister, has admitted that the yes-dear life has its drawbacks. It was front page news a few months ago when she left her husband. She said, at that time of the fundamentalist establishment, "Some pastors are so hard-nosed about submission and insensitive to their wives' needs that they don't recognize the frustration — even hatred — within their own households....Having experienced a form of male chauvinism among Christians that was devastating, I can see how women are controlled in a very ungodly, unchristlike way..."

Benevolent dictatorships in the home are apparently becoming a thing of the past then. Despotism is out for women, at least in this country. It's out because, in the end, it doesn't work.

It's not what women want.

But neither do they want, I think, to look good by making men look bad. The people who write television commercials are profoundly mistaken in this respect. One commercial portrays the woman of the house in a baseball coach's cap and whistle, bossing her family's breakfast. Another spot shows her rolling her eyes heavenward in a plea for patience when her stoogey husband comes home with the wrong kind of dogfood. A third has her scolding him like a naughty child for taking a piece of cake before it's been frosted.

Women don't want this either; they don't want to succeed at the men's expense. They don't want a lot of shrill talk about how villainous or wrongheaded or inferior the male sex is: That's poor human relations. And if women have excelled in any one field across the ages, it's that one: human relations, the nurturing of emerging personalities, the skillful distribution of love and attention among the members of a family.

So what do we want, Dr. Freud? What everybody wants, I guess. You said it yourself somewhere: love and a life's work. We want spiritual intimacy with our men, real sharing, and the opportunity to give what we need to receive. We want esteem for ourselves, for our thoughts, for the works of our hands.

That's all.

T Service Level Remains High

Editor's Note: The following column was submitted by Sherman W. "Whip" Saltmarsh. He serves on the House Transportation Committee and is a member of the MBTA Advisory Board, representing Winchester.

Although Winchester patrons of the MBTA commuter rail line will experience service reductions beginning Feb. 1, the level of service between the town and Boston will remain high.

The cuts are far less severe than those originally scheduled and I am happy to announce that through negotiations, some that were planned for elimination have been restored. As a result, inbound trains will run from 6:10 a.m. to 10:25 p.m., and outbound trains will start at 6:35 a.m. and run until 11:59 p.m. Weekend service will remain the same."

The Cross Street station will close but this decision was made to avoid duplicating services. There is alternate bus service along Main Street via a local bus that travels from North Woburn to Winchester Square and an express bus that goes from Woburn Square directly to Haymarket.

The cuts are among many that are expected to save $1 million in operating costs for the hard-pressed MBTA. I could not, in good conscience, vote to increase the MBTA budget in order to avoid these reductions. Increased budgets lead to soaring assessments on cities and towns who overwhelmingly voted for Proposition 2½. The only way to honor that vote is to insist on fiscal responsibility in state spending.

Many savings planned to reduce the MBTA budget through more efficient labor practices were stymied by the recent decisions of Superior Court Justice William Young who ruled that existing union contracts must be honored until new labor agreements are ratified.

This left no alternative but service reductions and future large layoffs. In view of this bleak picture, I honestly feel that Winchester fared well as far as the convenience and availability of our MBTA services here.

Beginning in February in bound trains will run at 6:10, 6:50, 7:12, 7:31, 7:47, 8:12, 8:34, 9:02, 9:50, 10:50, in the a.m.; 12:50, 2:50, 4:13, 4:20, 4:53, 5:19, 5:39, 5:52, 6:22, 7:35, 8:25, 9:25 and 10:25 in the p.m.

Outbound trains will run at 6:35, 7:05, 7:56, 8:15, 9:05, 11:05 in the a.m.; 1:05, 3:05, 3:35, 4:15, 4:40, 5:13, 5:30, 5:45, 6:10, 7, 8, 9, 10:40 and 11:59 in the p.m.

Confessions Of A Closet Preppie

I was in Preppie Heaven.

There were Docksides, chinos, sweaters from Dean, Izods, Polo shirts, and L.L. Bean, turtlenecks, ribbon belts, oxford cloth shirts, headbands, blazers, kilts, and skirts, Famolare, Bass, and Bonnie Doon, oh oh, I thought, I better leave soon.

Yes, only minutes earlier I had hesitantly crept through the mystical, magical, oaken door of Pappagallo, where chinos had long-replaced skin-tight designer jeans, where Docksides far outnumbered anything even remotely resembling Thom McCann, where ordinary bewildered teens were instantly transformed into squeaky-clean, hopelessly confident predecessors of Jackie O and Ted, wearing enough Izod to choke an alligator.

I nervously pondered my fate.

For it had been quite a while.

The doctors at the Institute had assured me that if I was careful, I would soon outgrow my illness. But I had been very sick, they warned, so I had better not take in too much at one time.

I thought I could handle it, I really did.

I walked through, it wasn't that bad. I would recuperate quickly, I thought. But the inevitable happened. As the salesclerk folded my Dean cardigan, I began to sweat. It was getting hard to breathe.

Speech became a muffled blur of syllables as I began to hallucinate and recall visions of myself tailgating at the Harvard-Yale game, tripping up to Andover for the weekend, sunning at the estate at Martha's Vineyard.

I couldn't take it. Through a misty haze of argyle and plaid, I managed to find the door. Tripping over a row of Bass Weejuns, I finally grasped the handle and fell into the street. I ran. I had lost a Dockside, and my plaid headband was falling out, but I couldn't afford to turn back. Luckily, I found refuge in a punk rock store. When I saw the languid purple-haired groupies of the Clash and the Talking Heads lounging around in narrow ties and straight-leg lycra jeans, nothing that even hinted at Preppie, I knew I was safe.

You're probably wondering why my behavior was somewhat strange, why I cringed at the words "Andover", "Exeter"

It took me nearly a year to discover the awful truth about myself and accept it.

You see, I was a Teenage Preppie.

And this is my story.

Last Christmas morning, I never dreamed that the initialed Dean sweater I found under the tree would dictate my fate. I instantly fell in love with it. I carried it around wherever I went, I brought it to the movies, to the beach, to the sauna, I went swimming in it, I even wore it to gym. Soon it was covered with grease and grime, the initials were barely visible and the threads were unraveling by the hundreds.

The fact that it was not my sweater did not bother me in the least.

This, however, greatly annoyed my sister, to whom the sweater belonged.

To be Preppie, or not to be Preppie, that is the question, whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer the wings and callows of outrageous success and fortune.

I was caught in a dilemma.

But I needed something to wear with my sweater.

"Let's go to the Lodge," Mom suggested. "We can pick up your shirt and maybe go to lunch afterward."

We never got to lunch.

Somehow I couldn't tear myself away from the place.

It continued even after we got home. For months I begged my mother to subscribe to "Woman's Wear Daily." I collected hoards of clippings about the Kennedys, the utmost purveyors of New England preppiness.

I became anxious. I had to know "What the Talbot's woman was wearing that fall."

Soon I was neglecting my schoolwork. I would skip Latin to take the yacht out.

I began to get slack jawed from talking like I had marbles in my mouth.

I wanted my very own debutante party. I began to hate WHS because I wanted to go to Miss Porters.

I would apply to nowhere except Radcliffe and Wellesley College, Mount Holyoke and Smith, where I would be sure to get a proper preppie perspective along with a decent education.

My mother began to worry about me, and that's when she began to call the doctors.

But I'm all right now, I know how to handle myself.

No more chinos, no more Docksides, no more trips up to Martha's. I've reformed.

Yes, I was a Teenage Preppie.

—Girl Scouts Set Cookie Sale Plans—

It's Girl Scout cookie time again. With escalating costs and run-away inflation, your support is needed to continue the services Girl Scouting provides today's young women.

The importance of these services is what Girl Scouting is all about.

As the role of women in today's world is constantly changing, so too is the preparation and informal education which Girl Scouting provides. In short, the Cookie Sale teaches girls to accept and enjoy the responsibilities that go with being in business.

The Little Brownie Bakers Company will again supply seven varieties.

Despite the high rate of inflation, Patriots' Trail Council said the cookies will be sold at the same price as last year, $1.50 for each box.

Each troop will receive .20 cents on every box of cookies they sell to help support their yearly activities. If desired, individual girls will receive camp credit of .10 cents per box towards her 1981 camp fee.

This credit can also be used for Girl Scouts attending "Wider Opportunities" which are part of the Girl Scouts program activities designed to give Cadettes and Seniors an opportunity to explore a wide range of learning experiences both in and outside the U.S.A.

Joyce Cummings is responsible for coordinating the Cookie Sale in Winchester.

Orders for Girl Scout cookies in Winchester will be taken from Jan. 23-Feb. 8.

McCall Parents Oppose Possible School Closing

The McCall Junior High Parents' Association Board met recently at the home of the Recording Secretary, Barbara Cracknell.

Association President Alice McCarter introduced Board members to Bonnie Holmes, and English teacher at McCall. Mrs. Holmes and Principal Bob Fitzgerald then participated in the various discussions during the meeting. The different topics of discussion included the plans for the Winter Concert and Bake Sale on Jan. 21, the possibilities for enrichment programs in March or April, tours of the junior high and the scheduling of a teachers' sherry in the spring.

Mrs. McCarter concluded the meeting with a discussion of the possible closing of McCall Junior High.

At the current School Committee budget hearings, there are persistent reminders that McCall is being studied as one of the two Winchester schools to be closed. The Board members voiced their opinions on this subject, unanimously agreeing that a junior high of seventh- and eighth-graders is greatly preferable to a school encompassing children from kindergarten through eighth grade.

Two mothers whose children had attended private schools at one time felt that, by seventh grade, students felt "stifled" by the structure of the K-8 system. Another parent commented that the separate, two-year junior high gives each child a fresh chance to enlarge upon past experiences, academically, physically, and socially. Another parent felt that, in changing to a K-8 system, the seventh-and eighth-graders would lose several key advantages of their present curriculum, such as the special programs in math and English, the science labs, the various Home Economics and Industrial Arts classes, and foreign language opportunities.

As one mother noted, the two-year junior high provides the maturing student with a chance to develop sound study habits before proceeding to high school. Also, the children gain expertise and self-confidence in dealing with a departmentalized curriculum and with the competition afforded by a great number of classmates.

The Board members all agreed that the closing of McCall Junior High would be a severe blow to the educational development of Winchester's seventh- and eighth-grade students.

Connolly: Not A Normal Civil Servant

By STEVEN AUSTIN

Simply put, Winchester runs in Michael Connolly's family.

His father worked for the town beginning in 1916.

His wife currently works in the Town Clerk's office and his daughter is a former Park Department employee.

"There's always been someone from my family around the town," Connolly said from his post at the Westside Fire station Tuesday evening.

Connolly followed his dad into town service, first in 1934 with the Highway Department and again in 1946, when he became a fireman following the end of World War II.

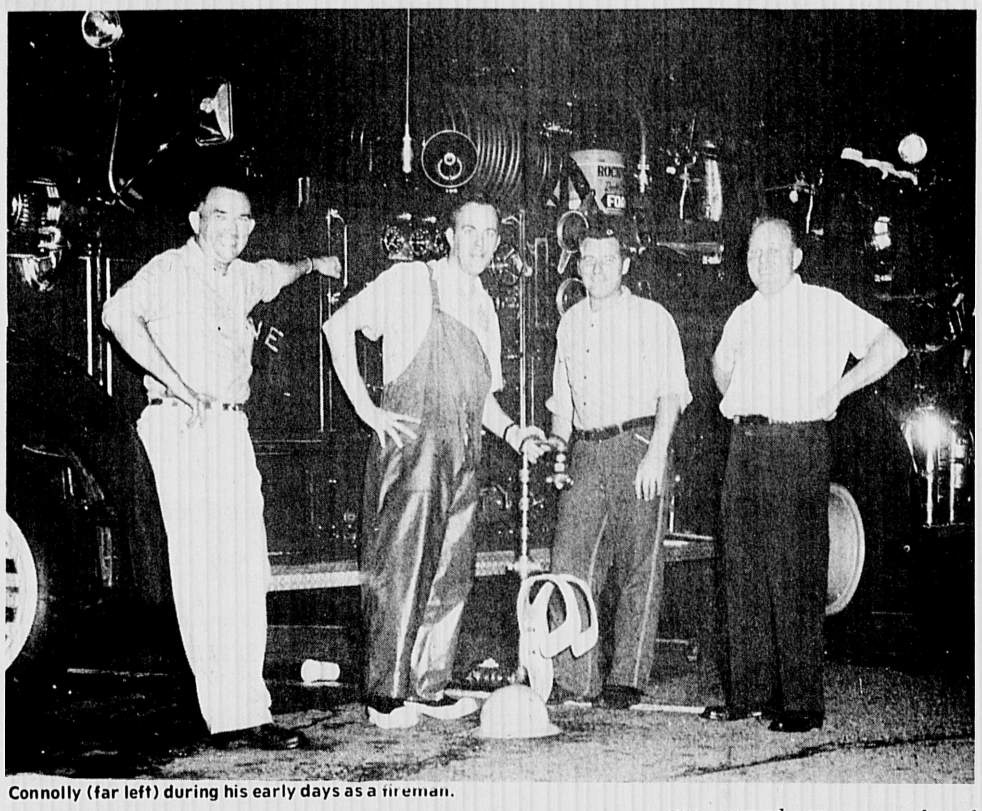

Among the labors Connolly undertook while working with the highway department was the construction of Washington st. and Main st.

Following a job with Boston College in 1946, Connolly became a member of the Winchester Fire Department as department clerk.

"There was no unnecessary work (in the department)," Connolly said of his early years as a firefighter. "If it needed to be done, I did it."

He climbed the regimental ladder in the department, becoming a lieutenant in September of 1955 and a Captain two years later. He served as a Fire Prevention Officer from 1963-1973.

By this time, some of you may have tagged Connolly as just another civil servant, content to keep his mouth shut, do his time on the job and draw his pension in due course.

Guess again.

Connolly has worn other hats besides those of a fire captain during his time with the department.

He's been a Water Commissioner and a member of the Group Insurance Advisory Committee where he was instrumental in obtaining a number of the benefits firemen enjoy today.

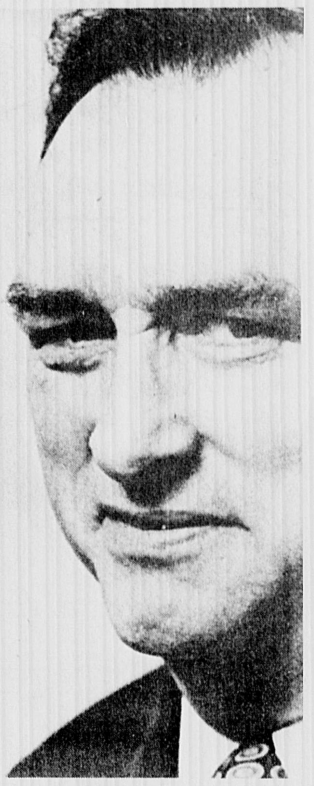

Okay, you're saying. So the guy served on a couple of commissions. Big deal.

But Michael Connolly goes on.

Educated at Winchester High School, Bentley College and Wake Forest, he was the first fireman in town to earn a fire science degree.

'There's always been someone from my family around the town.'

— Michael Connolly

Okay, you say again. So the guy served on a couple of commissions and holds a couple of degrees. Big deal.

But Michael Connolly doesn't stop there.

He's currently a Town Meeting member from what he refers to as "that blue-collar district, that controversial precinct," Precinct 8.

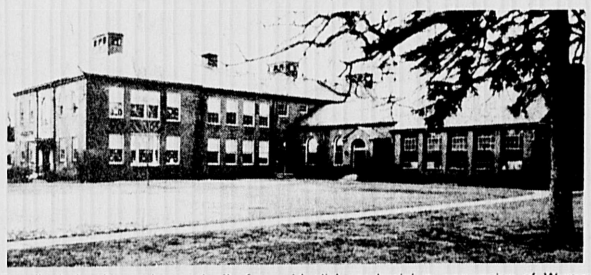

In addition, he's a member of the Government Regulations Committee.

When he leaves the fire

Colella Recommendation Puts Sachem Golfers In The 'Rough'

By RICHARD McSWEENEY

Based on crowd reaction at the meeting to discuss athletic cuts at the high school, the elimination of the golf team rated right up there with the booting of the cameraman, scouts, audiovisual equipment and proctors for ninth grade basketball games.

So what.

Near the end of Athletic Director William Colella's presentation to the School Committee someone dared to ask why golf was the only sport being eliminated. Not pay as you go, like hockey. Not cut back in funds, like virtually every other sport. Eliminated.

The reason, Colella replied was because there was the lowest participation, 12. And because it was co-ed. Oh.

The answer was accepted quietly. The questioner understandably nodded her head. No problem.

The elimination of the golf team will save a whopping $2,052. Of that amount, $800 is for rental of the golf course at Woburn for practices. Most of the rest is a stipend for Coach Joe Aversa.

Nobody complained at that meeting. Nobody has complained since, at least not publicly. But, incredible as it may seem, someone in Winchester actually cares whether there is a golf team at the high school.

"It's a shame if that happens," Aversa said when asked about the proposed elimination of the sport he has been coaching for "10 or 18 years, I don't know. All I know I've been teaching in the system for 34 years. I know it's a fact that there aren't many kids who participate but it doesn't cost much either. It doesn't make too much sense too me. Even though it serves just a few kids, how much money will they be saving?"

Tracksters Tumble

Burlington Holds Off Trackmen

Statistics don't always draw the most accurate picture . But in the case of Burlington's 44-42 win over the Sachem track team last week, one startling statistic said absolutely everything that had to be said about the meet.

Ten Burlington participants attained their best season performances. Three Sachems did the same. Burlington, after losing earlier to Woburn and Reading, finally beat a contender. And Winchester, with Reading on the docket Saturday and Woburn a week later, squandered a great opportunity to get inposition to claim a league title, the first under Coach Tom Kline.

"We just didn't do what we had to do," Kline said afterwards. "Maybe we were looking ahead to the last few meets. But if they weren't ready for Burlington, they should have been. I told them they (Burlington) were a team that could knock them off. It was a mental thing. It was not that we couldn't beat them."

Although the Sachems dropped the meet by just two points, it was decided well before the final relay event. The Red Devils' Steve Strachan took the high jump despite a valiant effort by Brian Donnellan (season high 5-10) that clinched the meet and end any Sachem hopes for an unbeaten season.

Ironically, although the high jump is not the strongest event for the Sachems, Kline felt confident that Winchester could take a first because Strachan had just finished running and winning the 300 and by normal human standards should have been tired.

In fact, that Strachan ran the 300 at all was a surprise since he usually runs the dash. But Burlington Coach Dave Stackhouse was full of surprises, springing new faces in a variety of events that kept the Sachems off balance all day and worked to perfection.

"He moved his kids around real well," Kline admitted. "He did an excellent job of coaching. They moved the 1000 to the mile and the mile up to the two-mile. They were really up for the meet. They just beat us," Kline added.

All the switching around in the distance events paid off handsomely for the Red Devils. They captured firsts in all three. Winchester took the relay but by that time Burlington had sewn up the meet.

The Sachems got off to a quick start with Robert Mueller taking a first in the dash and Billy MacMillan adding a third place finish.

Robert Tse took a second in the hurdles and Strachan edged out Jon Alcione in the 300.

(Boys - Page 14)

The Sachemettes: A Moral Victory

Many sports purists snicker about the alleged value of "moral victories" but don't count girls' track Coach Tom Kline among them. At least not after Saturday's defeat to Lexington.

Yes, it was the first defeat for the Sachemette (3-1-1) tracksters. And yes, it virtually wipes out any opportunity of the team successfully defending their league title. And finally, Kline even admits that Winchester had the talent to beat the Minutemaids.

How then can he possibly be satisfied with the 49-37 defeat? Well, there are certain times when the effort put forth dwarfs the final outcome. Saturday was such an occasion.

And the quintessential example of effort under fire was turned in by Mary Boland whose first place in the two-mile almost allowed the Sachemettes back into position to steal the meet despite the injuries and illnesses that decimated the Winchester squad.

"She had been sick all week with the flu," Kline said of his senior runner. "But she still ran a great race. She collapsed at the end and we had to put her into hyperventillation. She's fine now (Monday) but I was worried then. She's run better races (12:50.6) but under those conditions it was an excellent race."

But Boland wasn't the only valiant performer. Kline shook his head in admiration of everyone that participated in Saturday's meet.

" As far as physical performance go you couldn't ask for more than what those kids that were there gave," Kline said. "Girls have been running all season with sickness and that makes it very difficult. This team doesn't have the depth. When we're missing a few people it really effects us. But I have just a tremendous amount of respect for everyone that participated Saturday.

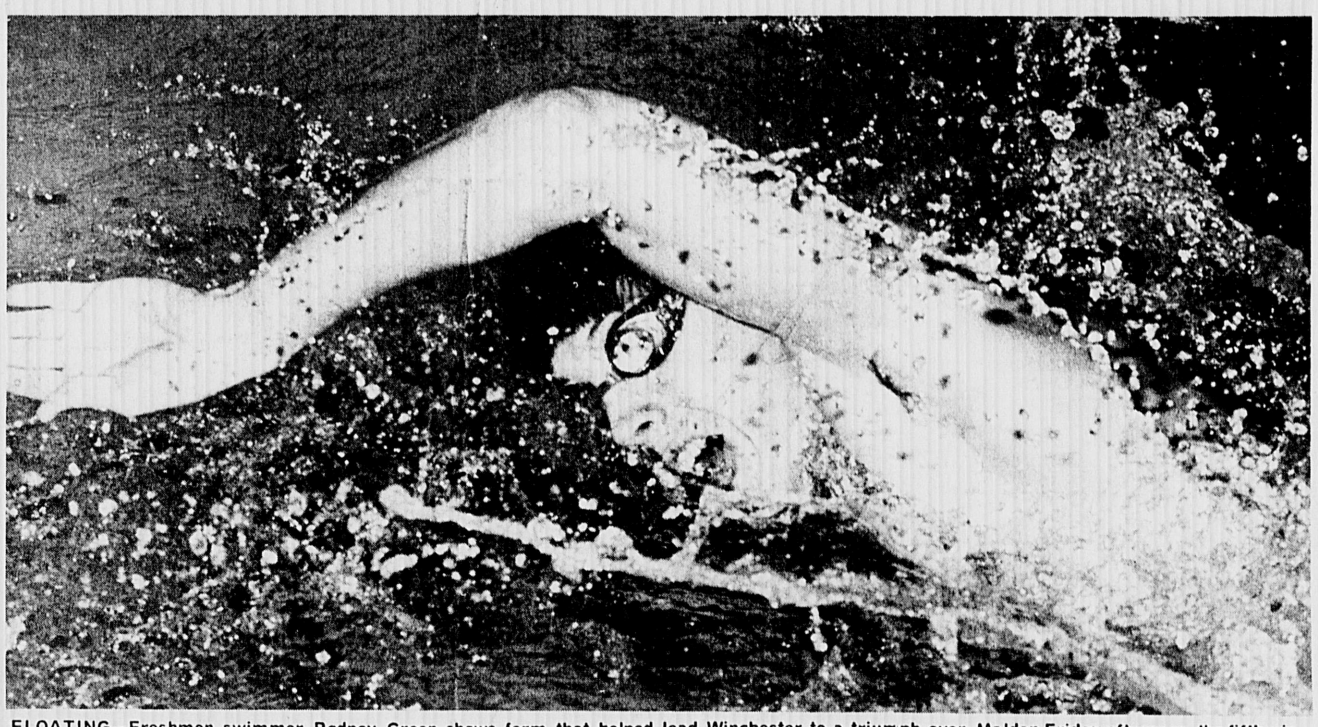

Mary Boland

"I just feel kind of bad to see all the kids work so hard and it's too bad to see them stopped by things that are really out of their control," Kline continued. "Lexington is a good team but I don't think they outperformed us. We're capable of beating them. They just beat us this time, there's nothing else you can say about it."

Prudy Horne got the Sachemettes off on the right foot with a league best 7.0 in the hurdles. An ailing Andrea deMars grabbed a third place finish, even though the 600 is usually her event.

Freshman Jacqui Burke continued to excell in the dash, taking second place in 6.3 and sophomore Sheila Connolly followed that up with a 1.37 in the 600, good for second place.

Versatility Helps Sachem Swimmers To Impressive Start

by MARY CRESSE

They must have been hiding somewhere lately, stashed away between the basketball scores and the meet results, squeezed between the news reports and the interviews and finally placed into the win column where they have remained for the past three weeks.

They have arrived.

Could it be by a stroke of chance or "just talent" by which Coach Vin Palumbo's swimmers have kicked away to a 5-1-1 record following Tuesday's 86-86 tie with Salem.

You have to suspect the latter.

"We've done pretty well for ourselves," Palumbo said. "We're strong in most of our events because we have a bunch of versatile kids."

This versatility allows him to accomodate the talents of the swimmers to the needs of the team. And the 14 members, have, so far, successfully met those needs, with the exception of the loss to Melrose. But the number of athletes sometimes presents a problem.

"We do fairly well in all our events, and I always have someone to use in a certain event. But I think our one weakness is that we don't have that many kids. If we were swimming in a six lane pool, for instance, we would have trouble fielding two relays at both ends."

Since relays are so important to the outcome of a meet, Palumbo carefully maps the proposed relay, because, if planned incorrectly, WHS could relinquish the meet. At Marblehead, one of the season's toughest meets, it was the opposition which fell to Palumbo's delicate planning of the freestyle and medley relay events.

"We had them by five-tenths of a second in both the free and medley. If we had lost those, then Marblehead would have won by the same number of points we had won by."

Last week's victory over Malden was almost as close as the Marblehead contest. Again, it was the last relay that pulled out another point in the win column for Winchester.

But who are these athletes that drag themselves to the early morning practices? Much of the team consists of underclassmen topped by a pretty experienced band of seniors. Co-Captains Alan Christy and Colin Green, swimming partners for years, have branched off into events different from their "specialty." Christy had started off as a backstroker and is able to pull a decent 1:04 for the 100, and Palumbo has this season entered him as a freestyler, as he usually sprints a 24.0 for the 50 and a clean 55.0 for the 100. Green, formerly, and still occasionally, a breast stroker, swims the 100 breast, and has become a regular Sachem diver.

Little brother Rodney has proven to be a regular in the 200 free, where he usually posts a 1:57. You will also find him swimming the 500 free as well as the 100 fly.

Palumbo has another talented set of brothers, Peter and Richard Webber. The younger Peter has swum a strong 1:03.8 for the 100 back, and has captured a position on the free relay. His freestyle skills are also evident in the 200 free, which he has swum in 2:03.

Junior Richard has joined Green in the 100 breast stroke, in which he has registered a 1:09.8.

David Palumbo, a sophomore, has carried on the family tradition of excellence in the sport by swimming a decent 100 fly, his specialty.

More of the juniors on the team include Michael Guarnaccia, a back stroker who has cut his time for the 100 from a 1:16 to a 1:12, and also swims the 100 and 200 free events.

Then there is Bob McGillicuddy, veteran of various summer and AAU teams who is Palumbo's option for the 200 and 100 free events, as is Mark Kennedy who occasionally enters the first relay and the breast stroke. Other freestylers, Mark Tonaszuk and Steve Brosnan, "do very well" according to Palumbo, and join Tom Herlihy, who swims the 200 individual medley and the relay.

Aren't we missing a senior who usually dives and enters the backstroke? Or maybe the 200 IM specialist who swims the 200 free.

Mark Schwartzmann has done very well in his first year on the team, and has discovered the varsity.

Hugh Murray is another AAU veteran who has pulled in a 2:16 for the IM and a 1:57 for the 200 free.

The team still hosts at the Northeast Regional Vocational School, and practices with the Wakefield team. Though there are occasional conflicts about swimming time, Palumbo and his son Vinny have managed to integrate the teams and section them off by ability, swimming WHS athletes with those from the Voke. Maybe the health aura of competition at practice is beneficial, because the Sachems have easily eliminatedMalden Catholic and Watertown from the schedule as well. Though Burlington shared the lead with Winchester much of the time, the meet, according to Palumbo, was "pretty easy. It was touch and go in the first half, but after the diving we wrapped it up."

For the future?

"Lexington is coming up soon, and we'll be losing Rodney for the meet. But one of their best swimmers won't be there and that makes it a little bit easier," Palumbo said.

Cagers Show Promise In Loss To Woburn

There was just under a minute left in the half and Woburn led by 10 points when The Play occurred.

Winchester's John Myers Jr. had just received a pass from Keith McCarthy about five feet to the right of the hoop. McCarthy broke for the basket was all alone and Myers quickly returned it to him completing the back door play for an easy two points.

After the game that was the play Coach John Myers remembered with a smile. The Tanners (9-1) whipped the Sachems (2-9) 63-46 but for the first time this season Myers felt his team had turned the corner.

That bucket was the fundamental type of heads up basketball play that Myers has searched for in vain for much of this season. To see it against the tough Tanners, along with other fundamentals like boxing out, left Myers with an encouraging look on his face afterwards. The second half of the season looks a little brighter after the Sachems pesky effort against Woburn.

"I just think we're finally beginning to recognize what you need to do to play basketball," Myers said in the lockerroom. "They were boxing out. I was happy to see that. They were doing things you have to do. They still fell back into some of the old patterns but you can't expect it to happen all at once. The kids worked hard. It could have been a blowout at the half but they kept at it," Myers said.

The Sachems trailed 36-26 at the intermission but played what was undoubtedly their best half of overall basketball this season. And to see it against a good team made it all the more sweeter.

In fact for the first four minutes of the game the Sachems stayed right with the hosts after spotting them a 7-2 lead. At the juncture John Myers Jr. rebounded a Stackhouse played musical events in the 600, taking his usual 600 man out of that event, conceding Winchester's one-two punch of Ken Jacobsen and Al Chen the top two spots which they promptly captured. That was the only Stackhouse shuffle that Kline questioned.

"They didn't think that they could break up that one-two (Jacobsen and Chen). But I'm not sure they couldn't have," Kline said.

With Mark Merritt out with the flu, sophomore Steve Myers stepped in and Kline was pleased with his output. His 2:39 finish was good for only third but Kline was more than satisfied.

"That's the first time he's run it (1000). Normally he runs the six (600) for us. We needed someone in the 1000 and he did the job for us," Kline said.

Joe Callahan took third in the mile and Pat Kennedy and Peter Quine finished 2-3 in the two-mile. The shot put belonged to Winchester as it has all season with Paul Manganaro and Tom Porell taking the top two spots.

The Sachems won what amounted to a meaningless relay behind the running of Alcione, John Wiseman, Chen and Jacobsen.

In the state Coaches Track Meet at Harvard Saturday the Sachems were treated to a glittering exhibition by some of the best trackmen across the state. Only one Winchester entry, Mueller in the dash, made the finals and none placed in the top six finishers. That, despite personal bests being recorded by Alcione (300), Chen (600) and Kennedy (two-mile) in their events.

"It was a really good meet. We saw a lot of talented people there," Kline said, in a classic understatement.

For instance, Manganaro, who has toyed with league opponents in the shot could not even make the finals. His best throw for the day was 48-11, far below his season high of 52-4. But even had he equaled his 52-4 throw it would not have mattered. The fifth place finisher threw the shot 53 feet. Tough competition.

Donnellan notched his season high in the high jump against Burlington with a 5-10 last week. The Falmouth entry in the Saturday meet skied over the bar at 6-8 with his sweats on and added a 7-foot leap to that with his sweats off. Very tough competition.

Despite the Burlington defeat, Kline is hopeful his team can at least snare a first place tie in the league standings. But do to do that the Sachems will have to beat back their toughest competition the next two Saturday's when they square off against Reading and Woburn.

"If we go the rest of the way with one loss we can still get a tie. Based on statistics we're capable of giving anyone a go. Physically, we're ready," Kline said of this week's match-up with perennial league power Reading.

The Rockets already have one defeat, to Woburn, but Kline knows they'll be tough.

"They have a lot of talent. Not as much as in years past but still some talent. But of your going to beat them you've got to beat them before the relay. But I do think that we're the only team in the league that can give them a race in the relay," Kline said of his foursome of Alcione, Chen, Merritt and Jacobsen.

And, as if they needed further motivation, Kline says the squad will have a different outlook following the Burlington loss.

"As a team I think they've learned a lesson. They're not going to give away anything," Kline promised.

It's best they not. Because if they do give away anything Saturday it will be part of the league title.

Her previous best in that event had been 1.42.

The Sachemettes kept racking up personal bests but they weren't quite good enough for firsts. Sue Virnelli ran a 41.8 in the 300 (second), Eileen Conley a 2:55.6 in the 1000 (second) and deMars a 4-8 in the high jump (third).

Kathy Durante broke the first place drought with a 38-1 and a half in the shot. Joanne Burke added a third place finish with a 34-7 toss.

Laurie Glynn continued her assault on the league distance events with another ho-hum triumph in the mile setting up Boland's gallant effort in the two-mile and the relay.

After Boland broke the tape a winner all Winchester needed was a third place in that event and they would be wi thin striking distance in the last event. couldn't get it and a hastily put together relay team of Virnelli, Connolly, Conley and Glynn lost the relay to create the final score. Conley is the only member of the quartet that had seen previous action in the relay.

"I guess I saw this coming but all along I thought we could win the meet," Kline said. "These girls went out and performed exceptionally well. All of them."

This week Kline will be able to give some of his exhausted performers some much-needed rest as some memebrs head to Harvard Friday night (7 p.m.) for the State Coaches Track meet.

After that it's back to league action and the season finale for Winchester against arch-rival Reading in what promises to be a heck of a meet.

Woburn Tops Cagers, 47-38

by JULIE DERRY

This game was the big one. It was all or nothing — the cup, the states, the season...

Tuesday, the Sachemette hoopsters battled Woburn for the annual trophy. The trophy has been in Winchester for the last two years, but after Woburn's 47-38 win Tuesday night, it went home on the bus with the Tannerettes.

The rivalry has been going on for at least ten years, and the winner of the last Woburn-Winchester game of the season is awarded the trophy. Usually this game is the last one of the season for both teams. But scheduling problems changed the order this year. The trophy was donated by the New England Rehabilitation Center and is engraved with the winner's name every year.

In addition to the rivalry, Winchester needed a win to make it into the states; to maintain a winning percentage of 70 percent.

With no trophy and no states to look forward to, what comes next on the Sachemette schedule?

"We are going to try for our best record. Our younger players will be getting a lot of experience. Most of my players don't have basketball sense. There is only so much you can tell them. It's got to come from experience. It really hurt us today (Tuesday) having an inexperienced team. It's hurt us all season."

Although the Sachemettes missed many easy lay ups and key baskets — their shooting percentage for the game was 26 percent — they did manage to keep Woburn's Tina Belluche, high scorer in the Middlesex League, to 13 points, all in the second half.

"Tina has the potential to score 30 points a game but we kept her to a shutout first half. But she went to the boards and really hurt us there — especially with our injuries," said Tanner.

Tanner is referring to Kathy Corkery, who was hurt Monday in practice. Martha Doherty, another starting forward, and a key player in the Sachemette's game hurt her ankle. She continued to play, however.

"We were really depending on Martha with Cork (Corkery) hurt. She gave 110 percent. She was super to play with an injury. It shows you what kind of kid she is," praised Tanner.

Tanner offers no explanation for the 26 percent shooting average. "We couldn't buy a basket out there. No one was having a good shooting game."

Tanner was pleased with the performance of center Joanne Maloney. Maloney tied Maria Montouri for high scorer with 13 points. "Joanne played with real heart. She gave 100 percent. She didn't want to lose for a number of reasons. I wished all my senior played with the determination she did," said Tanner.

Tanner is starting to look toward the future now. The junior varsity under Coach Pat Ryser has had a great season (8-3), and have beat some big teams. In their game against Woburn they shut out the visitors in the first quarter.

"The J.V. looks very promising. That's good for the future. I also hope to give more of the underclassmen on varsity experience on the court — that's what we need most-experience," Tanner said.

The cold facts about your electric bill.

John Mazzerella
Manager, Mystic Generating Station, Everett

"During this cold winter, Boston Edison customers will be using more electricity than normal. And even though we have no supply problems and don't anticipate any, the price impact will be great.

"Why? Because foreign oil – which generates more than 65% of Boston Edison's electricity – is currently selling for over $30 a barrel. That's an increase of more than 33% just since last August. And the more electricity you use, the more oil we burn to make it, and the higher your electric bill. That's a fact of life we don't like any more than you do.

"On the brighter side: we know that without the help of nuclear energy, electric costs would be even higher. In December alone, a record operating month, Pilgrim 1 saved the burning of 823 thousand barrels of oil. And saved our customers from having to pay an additional $20 million in fuel adjustment charges.

"What can you do to keep your electric bill down? Use electricity wisely. Turn down your thermostat. Turn off lights and appliances, particularly heat-generating ones such as electric blankets and space heaters, when not in use. Keep your heating system in good working order. Weatherproof your home.

"Yes, you've heard it all before. But maybe you haven't done it all before. By doing it now, you'll help reduce our dangerous dependence on foreign oil."

Icemen Skate Into Woburn Buzzsaw

Tanners Too Much, 10-2

By RICHARD McSWEENEY

At least the Sachems kept their paws up. Otherwise Saturday's 10-2 thrashing at the hands of an awesome Woburn hockey team could have been worse. Much worse.

"After the first period it was 6-1 or 7-1, something like that (7-1) then they scored two more and then another. But after the first period it wasn't that bad. In fact it was kind of encouraging that we didn't pack it in. We kept out paws up. And it's a good thing because if we hadn't Woburn could have made it 40," Houghton said after the Sachems (1-7) seventh consecutive defeat.

The 10-2 loss to Woburn was not that surprising. The Tanners are 8-0 (going into last night's game) and are performing at another plateau considerably higher than most mortals. They haven't faced Stoneham yet and Houghton thinks that is the only club that might be able to stay with them. And put the emphasis on might.

"They are the best team we've seen by far. I was talking to the refs after the game and they said they are right there with Matignon who is loaded, the best in the state. Woburn is just devastating. Stoneham wasn't that way and Lexington certainly wasn't that way. I've been watching them the last couple of games and they are just putting it all together," Houghton said admirably.

After Winchester's Doug Ross tied it at 1-1 at 4:30 of the first period, the Tanners slid it into about eighth gear and scored six unanswered goals before the period came to a close, leaving starting goalie Steve Noble in a state of understandable shock. Bob Giarrizzo relieved him for the last two periods and he allowed just three more goals as the Sachems played well enough to prevent total humiliation.

"In between the first and second period I said to them, 'hey, we've got to go out there and think it's 0-0.' Even before the third period I said, 'hey it's still 0-0.' The kids went out there and played hard, with a lot of intensity. They left there with their heads up. The other coach (Frank Newark) said to me after the game we played just as hard in the last period as we did at the beginning. That's important to me. If a team rolls over and gives the game up... that to me is detestable," Houghton said.

Joe Raboin led the way for the Tanners with the hat trick and three assists and John Carter was right behind him on the scoring parade with a goal and five assists.

Steve Marino closed out the scoring for the Sachems with a third period goal but the visitors were playing for pride only after the first period and Houghton accepted that.

Raboin opened the scoring after a Woburn shot went wide of the net and bounced clear over the net and waited right in front for Raboin to put it past Noble. The two Sachem defensemen were still looking for the puck behind the net when Raboin started celebrating.

It got only worse from there as Woburn put on a shooting display unparalleled as far as Houghton is concerned.

"I tell you, you can just feel the air coming out of the building when they shoot it," he said. "A couple of them have real laser beams."

If Houghton accepted the 10-2 pounding gracefully he was not quite so cheerful about a 9-1 shellacking by Burlington three days earlier.

"It looked like we were skating in sand," a disgusted Houghton said afterwards. "They just skated our legs off They were skating faster than we could pass it. It was our worse game absolutely. Based on that performance against Woburn it should have been at least 25," Houghton added.

Well, ah, don't speak too soon, Mike. Don't forget, you'll get another go round with these Tanners to close out the season on Feb. 18.

Sachemette Gymnasts Edge Stoneham, 92-84

By BOB COOKE

The Winchester girls' gymnastics team (3-5) just barely got by Stoneham Tuesday 92.3 to 84.7. Winchester was sparked by the usual duo of Co-Capt. Carla Gulino and Sarah Gagan.

Winchester totally dominated the uneven parallel bars by outscoring Stoneham, 20.4-13.4. Gulino was at the top with a 5.9 followed by Gagan (5.6), Patty McCabe (4.3) and Carol Culver (4.1).

On the balance beam Winchester was hurt because of their lack of depth, due to the illness of Co-Capt Hayley Greenberg who was unable to participate in any of the events. Gulino (6.7) and Gagan (6.5) led the way once again, but not another Winchester girl came close. This opened the door for Stoneham as their scores were all good enough to keep pace with Gulino and Gagan and tie Winchester in the event, 19.9 to 19.9 as Winchester hung on to a 40.3 to 33.3 lead.

The Sachemettes weren't as lucky on the vault, as Stoneham came up with four excellent scores (8.0, 7.2, 7.5, and 6.9). Winchester's scores were very good also, with Carla Gulino (7.3), Liz Rowley (7.2), Sarah Gagan (7.0), and Stephanie Houlahan (6.9). Keeping Winchester's lead alive 68.70-62.90.

On the floor exercises Winchester bounced back as Gulino (6.6), Gagan (5.9), Collins (5.8), and Karen Kelly (5.3) clinched it for Winchester 92.3 to 84.7.

Next week Winchester will travel to Concord Carlisle then host an improving Woburn team.

Islanders And Rockies Win

In the Junior Division the Islanders beat the Hawks 4-1 and the Rockies defeated the Flyers 8-0. Sean Donlon with two goals and two assists and Dave Ducharme with two goals led the Islanders. Assisting were Brian Flynn and Ricky Mawn with two a piece and Eric Zaffina, Anthony LaCascia and Brian Walsh.

Brian Gianci scored for the Hawks with Keith McLearn and Jim McCarthy assisting.

Chris Ciulla led the Rockies with six goals and an assist with Steve Mahoney getting a goal and an assist and Jeff Foster the other goal. The Rockies with assists were Billy Cunningham (3), Pat Lavelle and Tedrick Potzka with two along with Brian Newburn, Scott Slater, Jim Dever and Frank Whittier.

The Senior Division saw the Whalers and Bruins tie 4-4 and the Rangers edge the Wings 4-3. Jeff Murphy's two goals led the Bruins with Marc Todisco and Anthony Cucinatti getting the other two. The four Whaler scores came from Joe Senna, John Furey, Tim Buckley and Ted Dever. Tom Struthers and Doug Norberg were the Roaring Rangers each with a goal and an assist. John Flynn and Mitch Sorenson scored also while Robert Murphy and Al Doumit assisted.

Jack Struthers had two goals and Mike Doherty one for the Wings while Greg and Mark Wheeler along with Pete Regan assisted.

★Good News

I don't say this with malice. He is just an eternal optimist in a program that outsiders and insiders alike would say leaves no room for optimism.

Mike Houghton is fun to deal with.

His team hasn't scored more than two goals since the third game of the season on Dec. 27 in a loss to Belmont.

Yet he'll tell you his offense is the best he's had in the three years he's been coaching at WHS. He just doesn't have goal scorers.

He'll point to the increased number of shots his team has been taking. The number of times they hit the post, or even worse, the number of times they fire a shot right into the goalie's belly or glove.

He'll tell you about the time Sachem center Tom Sullivan raced into the Wakefield zone in a recent 8-0 loss and unloaded a blast that Wakefield goalie John Merry never saw but managed to get in the way of. The rebound came right back and Sullivan hit the post. The rebound came back again to Sullivan and Merry stopped him and the rebound came back to him one more time and he hit the post again.

Any guy that can remain optimistic in the face of that kind of treatment deserves something.

Saturday the awesome Woburn Tanners crunched the Sachems 10-2 after exploding for a 7-1 first period edge.

I asked Houghton if he thought it strange for people not at the games to see scores like 10-2, 9-1 (Burlington), 7-1 (Lexington) and 6-1 (Stoneham) and then to read Houghton's post game remarks about how the team is a few breaks away from becoming a winner.

"In most cases I'd agree losing 10-2 wouldn't leave me feeling anything but disappointed," Houghton said. "But there was a ray of hope. If we keep that kind of intensity we won't be losing 10-2. We've got only three seniors on the team. We're not far away."

He says aside from Woburn and Stoneham, anyone in the Middlesex League, considered by many to be the best league outside of the Catholic Confere,ces in the state, can be beaten. By Winchester.

"I've got to believe we can, otherwise I wouldn't have the same kind of enthusiasm I've had," Houghton laughed.

All this is not to say Houghton can't recognize a terrible effort when he sees one. He's not shy about criticizing his club's performances, like against Burlington when the Red Devils skated circles around the beleagured Sachems.

But the future is always a bright one for Mike Houghton, regardless of what the past has produced. The team hasn't scored more than two goals in five games? The goalies have had a tough couple of games? No problem. You just know it's just a matter of time.

"We haven't played a perfect game yet. There's always been a leak somewhere. If we had we'd have won. We just haven't had a good game from everybody at once yet," he said following the Woburn defeat.

What on earth will he ever say should the Sachems ever put together a perfect game? You just know it will be something good and he will have no trouble describing the euphoria.

★Basketball

Michael Blackwood miss, Matt Groux (10 points) buried a 10-footer and Blackwood hit a free throw to tie it up.

Then the Ron Hobby Faster-Than-The-Speed-Of-Sound display was unveiled to any unsuspecting Sachems fans and the Tanners promptly took off.

Led by four outright steals and two more forced jump balls by the senior speedster' the Tanners ran off a 19-1 burst and it looked as if the curtain call would come early once again for Winchester.

But by then McCarthy and Blair Bradley (six points) had entered the contest and along with Myers (team high 13 points), Blackwood and Groux proceeded to put on the best spurt against a legitimate contender that Winchester has displayed all season.

Woburn's Doug Clements (11 points) hit a free throw to make it 31-15. But instead of fading away, the Sachems responded with an 8-0 run to close the the gap to eight points with some nice offensive basketball.

McCarthy (six points, all in the first half) grabbed a rebound of a missed Bradley free throw and got the hoop. Bradley returned the favor the next time down the court when he climbed into the rafters to put back in a McCarthy miss. Groux hit Myers underneath for an easy lay-up and McCarthy added a pair of free throws. The Sachems were showing some spunk.

A few playts later Myers and McCarthy pulled off the back door play and although a 10-2 Woburn run to open the second half pretty much put the game out of reach, Myers liked what he saw.

"That back door play was nice. That's the thing they were starting to look for. More guys were coming out to meet the passes. We were boxing out. The seniors aren't quitting for us and the young guys are learning the game. That's the way we've got to go," Myers said pointing out that three sophomores started and played considerably for the Sachems, Myers Jr., Steve MacDonald (five points) and Chip Triglione (2 points)

Hobby led all Tanner scorers with 16 points but contributed more with his terrifying speed in the backcourt.

If Tuesday's loss was encouraging, then Friday's 45-43 loss to Reading at Winchester High had to rate as the most disappointing of the season. The Sachems had led the entire second half and had a five-point lead heading into the last quarter and promptly were outscored 12-5 to lose it.

The Rockets John McKenna (22 points) scored the impossible last second turn around 22-footer to give the visitors the victory but Winchester lost it before that nice-but-can-he-do-it-again shot at the buzzer.

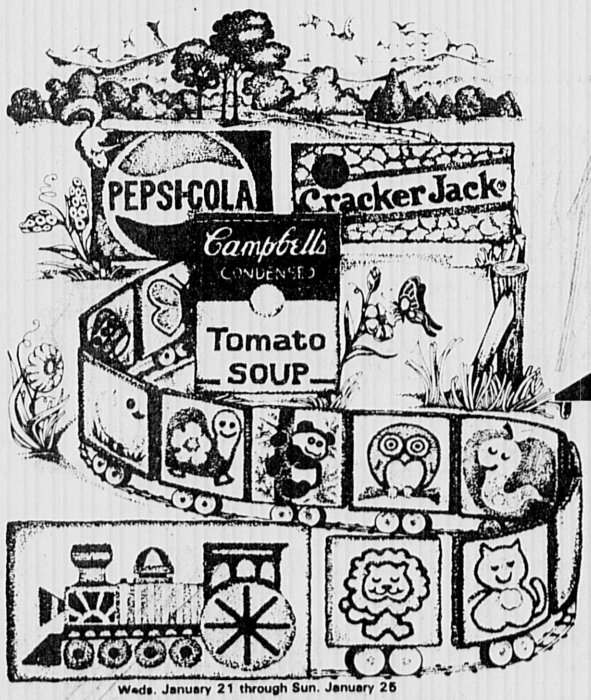

"We really had the ballgame," Myers said. "It was not the last basket that lost us the ballgame. We lost it before that. But even on that last shot we played very good defense. He had to take a 22-footer to get it."

The last second McKenna heroics spoiled a fine effort by Chip Triglione who compiled 12 points and 10 rebounds. Groux added eight points and Kevin Thomas seven to pace the Sachems.

Travel Along with MAVIS

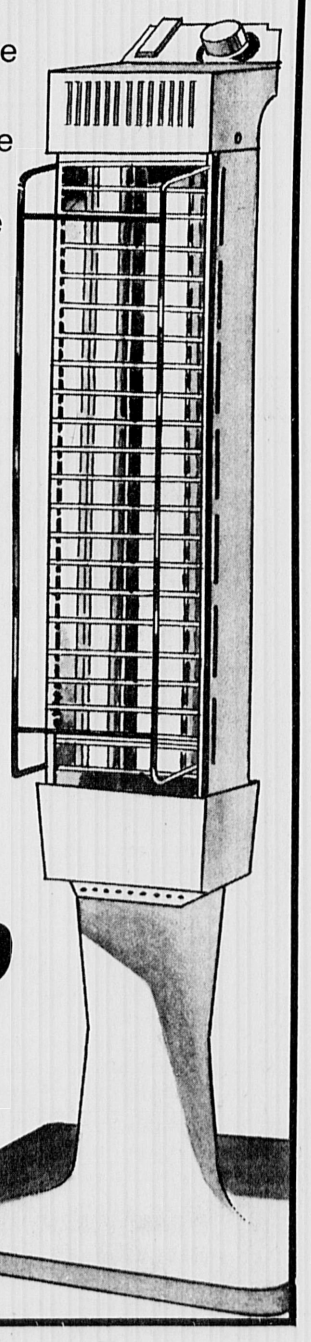

Worse even than losing your travelers checks is to find that you have run afoul of the authorities when visiting a foreign country. As Karl Malden would say, "What will you do?" Unfortunately, foreign jails are filled with Americans who claim that their constitutional rights have been violated. What are your rights? In short, an American citizen's rights extend to the borders of the U.S., no further. Enlisting the aid of a U.S. official will yield limited results. The U.S. Government does not lend money, provide bail, arrange for free legal or medical services, or do the work of a travel agent.

Because travel is a very complicated business today it makes sense to have the professionals at McGRATH TRAVEL SERVICE, 14 Eaton Ave., Woburn, 935-0600 handle all the arrangements. We appreciate our clients business and try to serve them in every way we can, McGRATH TRAVEL SERVICE should be your travel agency if it isn't already. Open: Mon. - Fri. 9-5, Sat. and evenings by appt.

★Golf

There were just four seniors on last year's 12-man team that won just one match. Five of those 12 were sophomores. Bill Eaton is one sophomore who happens to care about the golf team.

And he doesn't buy the no-participation argument.

"The 12 kids that are playing don't just say, 'we might as well go out and play.' They really like it," Eaton, who is also on the hockey team, said. "I think it would be stupid to cut it. It's the only sport you don't have to get physical, you don't have to get psyched up for. It's a quiet sport."

Aversa said some of the underclassmen on the squad reacted to the news that golf was on the endangered species list.

"A lot of the kids have come to me upset," Aversa said. "They've been asking what can they do and whether they can pay for it themselves. But I don't know what I'll do. There's nothing definite (as far as eliminating it) yet as I understand it so I'll wait and see what happens. If it does happen I'll see what I can do then," he said.

The School Committee will listen to arguments against eliminating some of the proposed cuts right up until Spring Town Meeting which begins April 27.

Eaton says he would be willing to kick in some extra money to keep the team alive. He'd at least like to see an opportunity to keep playing. If nobody else is willing to pay for the sport, well, that's another matter.

He also concedes the recommendation caught him by surprise. What irritates him the most about it is that nobody on the School Committee has even ever seen a match. Nobody in the administration has even seen a match. Nobody knows about the golf team but the proposal to eliminate it still caught him by surprise.

"I think the School Committee should go and see a match before they cut it," Eaton, who showed a five-stroke improvement by the end of the season, suggested. "They've been to hockey and football games but never to a golf match. Mr. Colella is the only one that has seen us play. But I never thought they'd cut it. I play golf and like it so much. And I figured they played golf, too. So I didn't think they would cut it," Eaton said shaking his head.

Reading Tops Gymnasts

Victories are not coming easy for the boys' gymnastics team this season and Monday's 102-74 defeat to Reading typified the way this season has gone.

The Sachems are not getting off to good starts as Coach Steve Hood has most of his sophomore group in the opening event, the floor exercises. Although the group does what they do well, other teams are breaking up on top early because their upperclassmen can perform more difficult moves in that event.

Senior Tom Powers once again led the Sachems in the floor exercises against Reading with a 4.0, good for third place.

In the side horse, Russell Leach grabbed a third as did Paul Abbanat in the high bar.

Junior Jonas Bjarngard led the way as usual in the parallel bars with a third place finish in that event. He copped high honors in the vault, taking the only Sachem first of the afternoon with a 7.4 mark.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth McGrail

Mara Downes Marries Kenneth McGrail

Mara Downes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Downes of Winchester, was married Oct. 4 at St. Mary's Church to Kenneth Charles McGrail, son of Mrs. June Newton and the late Rav William McGrail of La Crescenta, Cal. Father Powers performed the noon ceremony. A reception followed at the Winery at Lewis Wharf in Boston.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a Priscilla gown of white chiffon. The bodice of French alencon lace was fashioned with a portrait neckline and long tapered sleeves. Her veil was bordered with scalloped Bristol lace, held by a lace camelot cap. The bride carried a bouquet of white roses, carnations, stephanotis, and breath.

Sue Fortune of Wellesley was the maid of honor. All of the bridesmaids wore full length rose qiana gowns.

The best man was Ted Hickman of La Crescenta, California. The ringbearers were Paul and Casey Paquet, nephews of the groom also of La Crescenta, California.

The bridesmaids and ushers were Carol (Fitzpatrick) and Joe Dermody of Tewksbury, Phyllis (Graubau) and Paul Silva of New Bedford, Chris and Ken Lydecker of Fox Ridge, N.H., Susan Mulvey of Cambridge, Mary Hanson of Albuquerque, and the bride's brothers, Peter and Jerome Downes formerly of Winchester.

The bride is a graduate of Winchester High School. She attended Hood College in Maryland, transferred, and graduated from the University of New Hampshire. She received her M.A. in Art Education from the University of New Mexico. She is currently working as a teacher for the Albuquerque Public Schools.

The groom served six years in the U.S. Navy overseas. He is an electronic-optical technician for Hughes Aircraft in Albuquerque where he is working on research and development of lasers.

Marie Vander Haegen Weds Robert B. Pierce

Marie A. Vander Haegen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Vander Haegen of Watertown, married Robert B. Pierce, son of Mrs. Grace M. Pierce of Winchester and the late Mr. Harold Pierce.

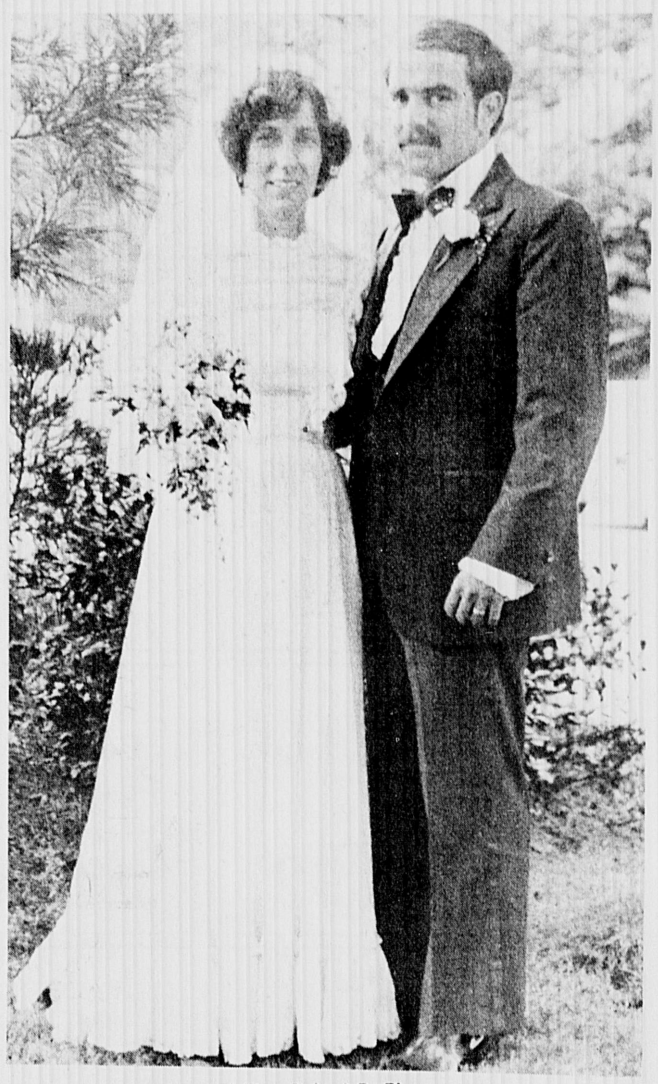

The double ring ceremony took place at St. Patrick's Church in Watertown.

The bride given in marriage by her father wore a Victorian white cotton batiste gown, trimmed with Venetian lace. Her veil also trimmed with Venetian lace had stephanotis and baby's breath. She carried a Victorian bouquet of the same flowers.

Eleanor M. Vander Haegen of Keene, New Hampshire was maid of honor for her sister. She wore a wood-violet Irish linen gown and carried a bouquet of lavender and violet hues.

Harold D. Pierce was best man for his brother.

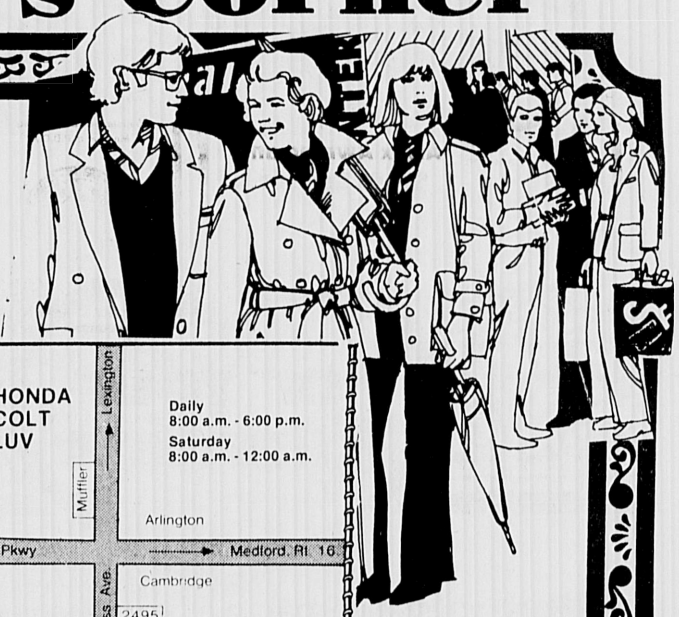

Ushers were John Barbeur of West Newton, cousin of the bride and Clifford M. Pierce, brother of the groom. The bride is a 1972 Regis College graduate and a rehabilitation counselor for the State of Massachusetts. The groom, a Norwich University graduate, is affiliated with the Exxon Corp. Following a trip to Acapulco, the couple is residing in Woburn.

Seminar Studies Flower Design

A seminar on creating interest and presenting a successful flower show was held Monday, Jan. 19 at the Jenks Senior Center. It was sponsored by the East Middlesex District of the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts.

Polly Keppler of the Winchester Home and Garden Club was in charge of the meeting. The specialists comprising the panel were Horticulture, Susan Dumaine; Design, Marie Gray; and Flower Show Procedure, Anne Tiffany.

Garden Club members came from many of the surrounding communities. The theme for the Mini Flower Show was "If winter comes can spring be far behind." The exhibitors with lovely spring arrangements were: Bernadine Di Luzio, Stoneham Garden Club; June Williamson, Lexington Garden Club; Barbara Carino, Wakefield Garden Club; Vee Hayward, Belmont Garden Club.

The judges, panel specialists, demonstrated how judging is done. They explained to the audience why one arrangement would receive more points than another. The Winchester Home and Garden Club is planning its own member Flower Show in May.

REAL ESTATE

ZPG AND HOUSING MARKET

This country has reached a new threshold in its population growth. Now, as the experts have predicted, zero population growth (ZPG) is here. Families are smaller than ever and the elderly are living longer. How has this affected the building industry?

Nationally, it has caused builders to plan somewhat smaller houses to house smaller families and with less frills to accommodate the lessening purchasing power.

The national birth rate has now plunged to 1.9 children per family — lowest in history — and well below the "replacement level." Marriages decreased last year the first time since 1958. About 2.4 percent fewer marriages were performed in the previous year. Divorces totaled 970,000 last year, an increase of over 6 percent from the previous year. Upward trend started in 1962 and continues to accelerate.

Households also got smaller last year. They dipped below the three person level for the first time. Persons 65 years and older constitute the largest live-alone group but the fastest growing live-alone group are persons under 35.

Bomb Threat Closes Keystone Battery

A bomb threat last Wednesday forced the evacuation of a Holton st. factory following an anonymous telephone call.

Employees at the Keystone Battery Company at 35 Holton st. were evacuated last week just after 9:10 a.m. after a secretary at the plant received a call in which a male voice said, "There is a bomb in the factory. This is no joke. Get everyone out of the building, this is no joke."

Company official Edward Gray made the decision to have workers leave the plant.

Fire and police officials searched the plant but found everything in order.

In other action, town police are looking into breaking and entering incident on Churchill rd., Forest st. and Ainsworth rd.

Taken in the Churchill rd. incident was cash and a 19-inch television set. Entry was made when the glass in the front door was broken.

department next week, he doesn't intend to just sit back and draw his pension.

No, indeedy.

Sure, there'll be a mobile home trip across Canada and the United States, but Connolly plans to be as involved, and, well, vocal as ever in the affairs of Winchester.

In leaving his post, Connolly offers a bit of advise drawn from Ronald Reagan.

"In the wake of Proposition 2.5," Connolly said, "we can no longer afford the non-productive help in town. There's simply too many chiefs and not enough Indians."

He said he believes town management had little respect for town employees.

"I feel that lack of respect is the biggest problem facing the town," he said.

"We have to cut out non-productive help all over town and become much more aware of working with a team effort," he said.

Chiefs and Indians aside, don't expect Michael Connolly to simply fade away.

More than likely, he'll be more visible than ever.

Housewife sells 'glass plate' for $40; worth $1,800

NILES, Ill.— The story of a small fortune, lost because a housewife had no idea her glass plate was a collector's item, recently came to light.

In a letter to J. R. MacArthur, chairman of the Bradford Exchange, world's largest trading center in collector's plates, a Madison, Wisc., woman wrote: "I had a Lalique 1965 plate . . . which I sold to a friend for $40. I had not heard of you at that time."

The plate she sold is actually valued at more than $1,800. Although MacArthur points out that this price is exceptionally high, he said, "I'm afraid others may be losing hundreds or thousands of dollars by not knowing what their plates are worth."

To aid in identifying potentially valuable plates, the exchange offers free information on opportunities in promising plates still available at low prices.

To obtain a copy without cost or obligation, just send your name (please, no company names), address and zip code, before Saturday of next week, to: The Bradford Exchange, Dept. B77504, 9301 Milwaukee Avenue, Niles, IL 60648. A postcard will do.

A loose bearing does not always knock. It may merely have developed enough clearance to splash an excessive amount of oil on the cylinder and thus be a primary cause of oil consumption. Bearings are often cracked or chipped in such a way that the condition is not discovered until they are removed. If bearings become loose enough they can cause low oil pressure. Or, if you wish to look at it conversely, low oil pressure can be a symptom of loose bearings. And since low oil pressure prevents proper lubrication, loose bearings can cause ineffective lubrication.

Winchester Is Becoming An 'Elitist' Community

By STEVEN AUSTIN

With housing prices in Winchester ranging from $80,000 to $300,000, the town is becoming, in the words of one realtor, an "elitist community."

"We're becoming an elitist community," said Bill Caci of Winchester Realty. "Most of my buyers are highly paid professionals. Sixty percent have double incomes. We have pairs of doctors and doctors and lawyers. These are the only people we can sell to since they're the only ones who can afford to pay the prices."

If the real estate housing market locally has any weakness, realtors say, it is a limited amount of available listings.

"We need listings," said Anne Wild of Bowman Real Estate, "We have the customers."

Wild said she didn't have a great deal of success placing buyers in Winchester due to that limitation in the number of available dwellings.

Ed Burns of Burns Associates also cites the lack of listings as a problem.

"In the past six months or so," Burns told The Star, "there have been relatively few houses." He said Winchester, unlike surrounding towns, has "no substantial amount of anything" in terms of different types of housing available for sale.

Dick Murphy of Bixby and Porter said he'd been fairly successful placing buyers in houses but those placements are not always in Winchester.

"Sometimes you have to do a lot of traveling to do it," Murphy said. He said he'd been successful placing buyers in Reading or Lynnfield, where a greater variety of housing types and prices exist.

"It's damn difficult to buy a house in Winchester now," Murphy explained. "You seldom see anything in the $70,000 to $80,000 price range."

And even if a buyer finds a house in town, taxes are what Murphy termed "substantial" when compared to taxes in areas like Lexington and Stoneham and act as yet another deterrant.

In 1979, Caci said, the average price of a house in Winchester was proximately $94,900. By the end of Augu of 1980, that price had risen to $106,000.

In the past few closings he's participated in, Caci said monthly mortgage payments, including principal, interest and taxes, were running from $1,400 to $1,700 per month.

The latest listings in Winchester (Jan. 21) for houses for sale, Caci explained, had prices ranging from $70,000 to $285,000.

Survey Eyes Housing Needs

A survey to determine housing needs in Winchester will get underway Friday when approximately one-third of the town will receive a mailed questionnaire.

The survey is the result of work by the Board of Selectmen, the Planning Board, the League of Women Voters, the Council on Aging, and Winchester High Schools Department of Social Studies, Business Education and Data Processing.

Sent to every third household in each of the eight town precincts, the Budget Cuts May Not Be As Severe As Was First Expected

The bad news is that Winchester can expect no help from the Legislature in coping with Proposition 2.5.

The good news is that cuts made in meeting the requirements of the measure may not be as severe as was first anticipated.

Selectmen begin budget preparations for fiscal 1982 tonight at 7:30 in Town Hall and both those pieces of news will have a definite affect on the way money is spent in town.

At a Selectmen's meeting Monday, State Rep. Sherman "Whip" Saltmarsh told Selectmen they could expect no relief from the Legislature as far as 2.5 was concerned.

"I don't see any significant changes to be made to Proposition 2.5," Saltmarsh said. "Even though there are a large number of bills to change Proposition 2.5, I really don't see any significant changes by the Legislature or the Administration. It's a wait and see attitude."

Saltmarsh urged the Board to move forward in preparing the budget and to "comply with the law."

In addition, Saltmarsh said Winchester shouldn't expect an increase in local aid. He also nixed any possibility for an increase in the sales tax to counter-balance 2.5's effects.

Saltmarsh cited what he called the "strong message" voters conveyed with 2.5 as a reason town and cities can expect no legislative changes in the measure.

That "wait and see" attitude of the Legislature is not one Selectmen Chairman Wade Welch is happy with.

"It seems somewhat of an unusual situation to prove that Proposition 2.5 won't work we should drive ahead and reduce our services to a low level," he said. "We shouldn't have to do that to prove Proposition 2.5 is a bad piece of legislation."

Selectmen had discussed delaying Town Meeting until the Legislature acted on any of a number of bills concerning 2.5.

However, as Welch pointed out in an interview with The Star Tuesday, since the Legislature plans no action on 2.5, such a delay "won't amount to anything."

Welch hopes to submit what he called "one budget with a number of footnotes" to Robert Frank's Finance Committee.

At their worse, Welch believes cuts could total $2.8 million.

At the least, those cuts might come to $1.6 million, depending on what Welch called "a number of assumptions."

For example, if property is valued at $650 million , coupled with receipts from the excise tax, and if Town Meeting approved increases in water and sewer use rates and if additional funds can be raised from the sale of town-owned property such as the Washington School and if fees charged for the tranfer station and tennis courts are installed, cuts could be substantially less than the $2.8 million figure.

In addition, if Town Meeting allows the issuance of bond anticipation notes, which could yield as much as $250,000, cuts might come in closer to $1.3 million.

That's the scenario Welch sees developing.

However, Winchester financial picture is anything but clear at this point in time.

The town is currently in the process of revaluation, so a final figure on property tax values is still not in.

Assessors have set a preliminary estimate for those values at $645 million.

What Welch sees happening is a change in the way the Finance Committee will a approach the budget.

Traditionally, he said, the Finance Committee has set a ceiling on town spending.

Under 2.5, the Finance Committee will now decide how funds will be raised and what rates will be increased, Welch said.

"Those decisions are as political as they are financial," Welch explained.

"The budget that goes to Town Meeting will be the Finance Committee's budget," Welch said.

Any cuts made in this year's spending sheet will be shared by the School Committee and the town.

The School Committee share will be 54 percent while the town will handle the remaining 46 percent.

The School Committe is expected to submit proposed cuts totalling $1.4 million.

Hospital Plan Under Review

Winchester Hospital officials met with members of a subcommittee of the He$lth Planning Council for Greater Boston last Thursday in the first of a number of hearings to reveiw a proposed $19 million renovation and construction plan for the Highland ave. facility.

The sub-committee, the Quality Metro Acute Care Committee, is expected to make a recommendation on the hospital's proposal in March, according to John Burgoyne of Winchester Hospital.

A second sub-committee, the Project Review and Evaluation Committee will also scrutinize the proposal. Both subcommittees will then make seperate recommendations to the Health Planning Council Board of Directors, Burgoyne said.

Following this review and recommendation process, the proposal will be reviewed by the Determination of Need committee, an agency of the Massachusetts Public Health Department.

The Public Health Council will then review the recommendations.

Under law, the Health Department has ten months in which to review the project and make a recommendation, Burgoyne said.

That agency can also request a two-month extention.

Should the proposal draw approval, Burgoyne said construction and renovation at the hospital could begin in the winter of 1981 or the spring of 1982.

Work could begin, Burgoyne explained, "two years from July 1 of this year," the time when the recommendations should have been made.

The proposal, the first planned expansion at the hospital since 1962, is one which, according to hospital officials, would upgrade and size the area to meet current standards rather than one which expands to accomodate expanding volume.

Under the terms of the proposal, the emergency room would be sized to accommodate 20,000 visits per year. The present facility can accommodate 6,000 visits per year.

Other priorities under the proposal include the construction of a new X-ray suite, a new intensive care-coronary care unit, a new operating suite and the construction of a parking garage.

Work on the hospital is being handled by Keyes Associates, an architectural, engineering and planning firm and by Arthur D. Little Inc., a planning consultant.

The $19 million price tag for the proposal represents 1980 dollars. That figure is expected to rise to $24 million by 1982.

The program has drawn fire from neighbors in the area immediately surrounding the hospital.

Winchester Hospital Neighbors (WHN), a group led by Town Meeting member Margaret McCarthy, plans to fight the proposal, citing economic, environmental and marketing considerations.

Objections to the plan include the parking garage, termed "the most outrageous economic aspect" of the proposal by McCarthy. The garage is currently set at $1.8 million but is expected to rise to from $2.6 to $2.8 million by 1985.

Other objections voiced by the group include an increase in traffic in the area, the potential for increased crime, air and noise pollution and visual considerations.

WHN also pointed to the existence of the Lahey Clinic which could provide care for Winchester residents.

Construction on the project is expected to take approximately two years.

Search Ruled Illegal

Charge Dismissed

A cocaine possession charge against a 17-year-old Winchester youth filed in November was dismissed last week when the court ruled that the search which yielded the substance was illegal.

Vincent Marquardo of 1 Windsong lane was charged with possession of cocaine Nov. 22 after police found three envelopes and a silver tube with a white residue and a fourth envelope containing what appeared to be cocaine during their investigation of a parked car on Skillings rd.

Marquardo was charged after Sgt. Francis Manzie and Officer Barry Donaghey investigated a vehicle containing Marquardo and three companions that was doubled parked.

Police saw open cans of beer in the car and after asking the four to submit to a search, discovered what was apparently cocaine on Marquardo. The four agreed to the search, police reports said.

Marquardo was charged with possession while his three companions were issued a verbal warning concerning the possession of alcohol in a motor vehicle.

The ruling to have the case dismissed was made in Woburn District Court by Judge Francis Cullen, according to Police Inspector Bill O'Neil.

The ruling found the officers did not have enough probable cause in the case, O'Neil said.

"By law," O'Neil said, "we did not have enough probable cause to make the arrest on what we found," O'Neil said.

Lt. Andrew Crawford agreed, saying, "I knew it was illegal when I read the report but we still had to go through the motions."

Mattapan Man Stabbed In Attempted Robbery

A 52-year-old Mattapan man was stabbed and robbed on Lockwan st. Monday in an incident under investigation at the Winchester Police Department.

Miller Mitchell of 943 Morton st., Mattapan, told police he was stopped at a traffic light on Mass. Ave. in Cambridge near M.I.T. when two black youths forced their way into his car and forced him to drive to Winchester.

Once in town, Mitchell said he was forced to drive his car, a 1979 Cadillac up Main st., turn onto Swanton, then onto Loring ave. and stop on Lockwan st.

The individuals then forced Mitchell from his car into a yard at 19 Lockwan st. The two then tried to rob Mitchell. A struggle ensued in which Mitchell was stabbed under the right arm and "cut slightly on the back," police reports said.

One of the individuals then fled the scene while the second fled in Mitchells' car.

Mitchell could not provide police with a clear description of suspects in that he couldn't determine whether one of them was male or female.

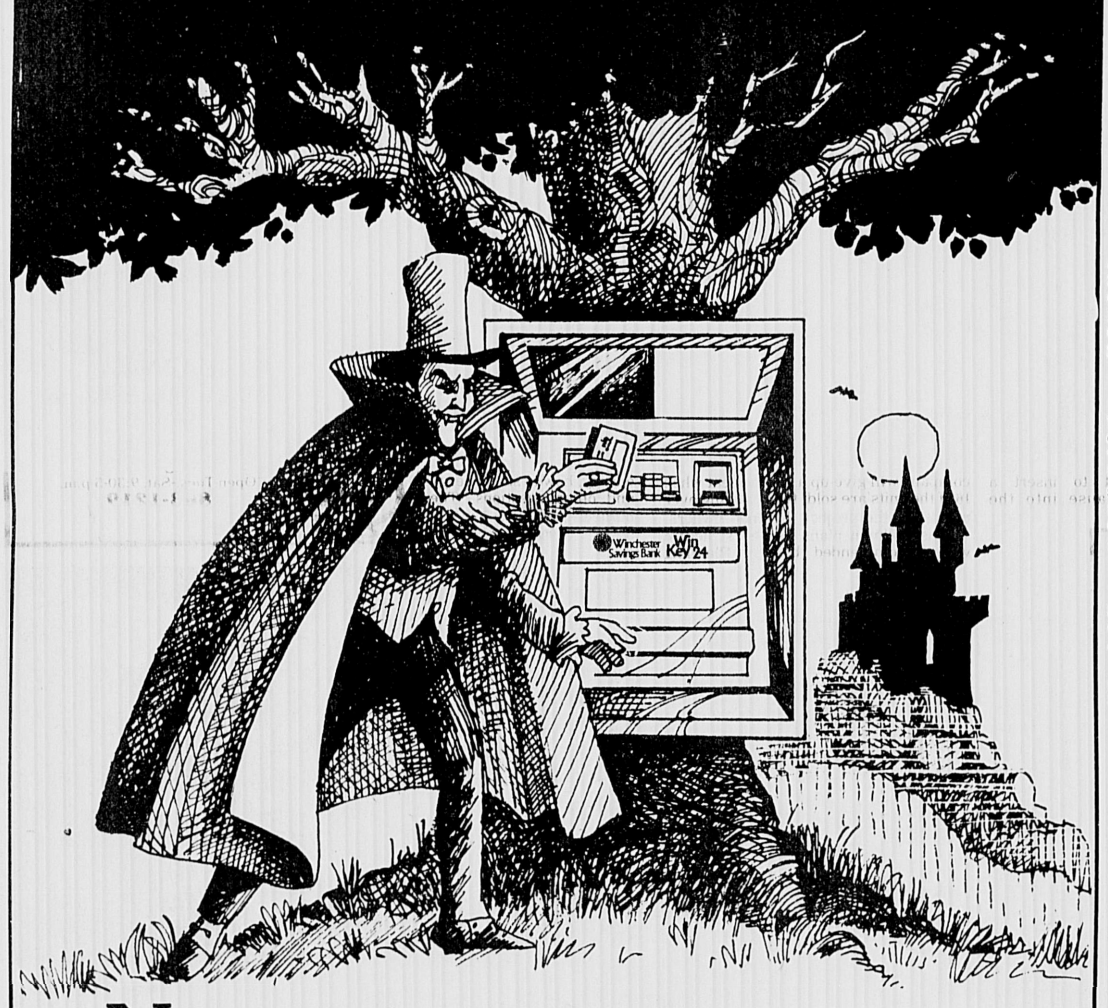

Descriptions at the police department listed one suspect as a black female, approximately 25 years old, wearing a shortwaisted black parka. The description on the second suspect was sketchy with police putting the age at approximately 19.

Mitchell's wallet was not taken in the incident and after treatment, members of his family picked him up in Winchester.

In other action, police are looking into a breaking and entering incident at an Emerson rd. residence Monday.

Taken in the incident was silverware and jewerly of an undetermined value.

Bartlett To Parkhurst Okay Appears Imminent

The leasing of the Parkhurst School to the Bartlett School should finally become official Monday night when the Selectmen and Bartlett attorney Robert Graves are expected to ink a pact calling for a five-year lease of the site with a an additional five-year option subject to Selectmen approval.

Town officials were expected to meet with Graves and Bartlett owner Noreen Casey and tour the Parkhurst site this week to determine what parts of the building the town is responsible for maintaining.

Graves said he didn't foresee any problems and expected the deal to be finalized Monday at the Selectmen's meeting.

The agreement calls for the rent to start at $16,000 annually and escalate by $2,000 each year until the lease expires in 1986. If the lease is renewed at that point the new rent would be determined by using the base of $24,000 and adding the August, 1981 cost of living increase to that figure. The town currently receives $12,000 annual rent from Bartlett for use of the Wyman School on Church st.

The Selectmen unanimously (Selectman Alan Macdonald absent) agreed to the deal in an unofficial poll at their meeting this week.

After receiving Town Meeting approval in November, Bartlett was finally allowed to move into the Parkhurst site after a lengthy battle that had stretched back to Spring Town Meeting over use of the site.

Opponents of the Bartlett move argued that the town would benefit more financially by putting in single-family house lots on the grounds. Town Meeting couldn't decide in May but agreed to the Bartlett move overwhelmingly in November.

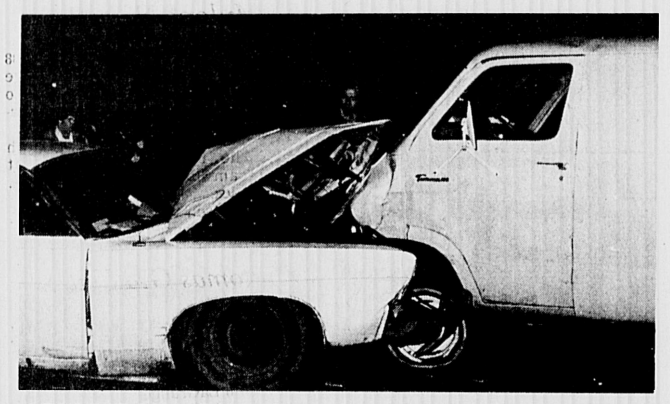

Then, however, disagreement over what the two parties had agreed to arose. Selectman Chairman Wade Welch said he understood the agreement to mean that the Selectmen would have sole renewal authority after the five-year lease expired.

Graves understood it to mean Bartlett would have the sole authority to decide whether it wanted to renew the lease in 1986.

The contract expected to be signed Monday night will give the Selectmen that renewal authority, according to Gary McPhee, assistant to Town Manager Thomas Groux.

Other features of the agreement prohibits Bartlett from sub-leasing the property without approval of the Selectmen. Also, maintenance of the building, except for major structural changes (roof, walls, boilers) will be the responsibility of the new tenants.

If the deal is finalized Monday night the actual move from Bartlett to Parkhurst would not take place until Aug. 1.

A TWO-CAR COLLISION on Highland ave. Monday at 6.22 p.m. resulted in injuries for three people. Winchester Police would not release details of the accident due to the possibility of court action. One driver was hospitalized with head injuries. (Staff Photo by Noreen Murphy)

Informational Meeting On Wyman Tomorrow

The process of transforming the Wyman School into condominiums will officially begin tomorrow when an informational meeting for potential developers will be held at the site.

The building will officially close at the end of this school year when the present tenant, the private Bartlett School, moves to the Parkhurst School.

The town advertised for proposals earlier this month and after tomorrow's meeting will expect to receive official proposals from developers by Feb. 20. Members of the Alternative School Use Committee, and Town Engineer John Ciarcia are expected to be at the meeting tomorrow to answer questions.

Town Clerk Carolyn Ward, a member of the Re-Use Committee, said the interest in the site has been "tremendous. There seems to be a good climate right now," she said. "Of course, we won't know until we actually get the proposals but there certainly has been a lot of interest so far."

The door was opened for the transformation to condos when Fall Town Meeting voted to allow the Bartlett to move to Parkhurst. Meetings with the Wyman neighborhood shortly after that Town Meeting decision indicated that they favored condominium conversion of the Church st. facility.

In an informational packet that has been made available to developers the following specifications were outlined:

- It must be privately financed condominium proposal with no more than two parking spaces per unit allowed. No more than 18 units of housing will be accepted.

- No major additions to the existing building will be allowed but exterior architectural changes and graphics that will enhance the building's image will be encouraged.

-The image of the structure and its setting as seen from Church st. should be changed as little as possible. A landscape design that reinforces this spaciousness is encouraged and parking should be at the rear or sides of the building.

The timetable as drawn up by the Re-Use Committee has the committee, which is up of Ward, Chairman Charles Tseckares and Harry E. Chefalo, studying the proposals from Feb. 20 to March 20.

The committee will then make a recommendation to the Selectmen by March 23 and the Planning Board will hold public hearings on the required zoning changes by April 30.

Town, Codman Sign Pact

Selectmen signed a sale and purchase agreement Monday with a Boston-based developer which clears the way for the conversion of the Washington School building into condominiums.

Edward R. Haddad of the Codman Company, the firm selected in October to develop the site, attended Monday's meeting for the signing.

Developers plan to turn the building into an 18-unit condominium project.

Codman was chosen over three other developers last year and will pay $305,000 for the building.

Codman agreed not to insert a developer's control clause into the agreement at the time they were selected to develop the site.

Selectmen Chairman Wade Welch had voiced opposition to such a clause, saying he would support no developer who insisted placing such a clause in the agreement. Such a clause would allow the developer to retain control of the project indefinitely.

Under the terms of an agreement reached with Codman concerning the clause, the firm will give up one seat on its three-member board of directors when nine of the 18 units are sold. The company will give-up a second seat when 16 of the units are sold, thus handing over control of the project to condo owners.

The Codman plans for the structure were recommended by the Planning Board.

Selectmen's Notes

Cable Television

The Continental Cable Television Company is continuing it s search for an office location at or near Winchester, Center.

Jeff Carroll, the company's regional manager, told Selectmen Monday service would begin in Winchester Sept. 15. He could provide no date as to the company's stock offering.

Carroll also said he wouldn't discuss any plans for locating Continental's office until the negotiations had been completed. One location, at 898 Main st., has been discussed and while it has drawn support from at least two Selectmen, Chairman Wade Welch remains dissatisfied with that choice.

Welch has asked that the company seek office space in a location nearer the center of town.

License Sought

Selectmen voted Monday to issue a victualler's license to Kim C. Moy, the new operator of the former Dragon Pearl Resturant.

The new concern, called the Jade Panda, is expected to open March 7.

Selectmen issued the license upon the surrender of the current license and upon satisfactory completion of Health, Fire and Building Department inspections.

Saltmarsh Talk

State Rep. Sherman "Whip" Saltmarsh met with Selectmen Monday to outline a number of state and federally funded programs and to offer an update on MBTA service cuts.

Among the programs outlined by Saltmarsh was the Commercial Area Revitalization District program which allows bonding for the revitalization for downtown areas.

Each revitalization district, and there may be a number of them in one town, can receive up to a maximum of $10 million per district.

So far, Saltmarsh said, some 100 communities have applied under this program.

Saltmarsh also provided information on an off-street parking bill which has the state providing 70 percent of the funding for off-street parking areas. Currently, there is $12.5 million in funding available under this program.

A third program, Chapter 805, provides funding for the detection of water leaks and the rehabilitation of water systems. The cost of the program is shared on a 50-50 basis, Saltmarsh explained.

Of cut backs in MBTA service, Saltmarsh "a high level of service" would be maintained despite the recent approval of a $337,000 million MBTA budget, a figure well below the $400,000 million requested by transit authority officials.

Fireman Hospitalized

A Winchester fireman was hospitalized Friday after being taken to the hospital from the scene of a brush fire off Squire rd.

Edward A. MacKenzie, 34, was listed in good condition at Winchester Hospital Tuesday after he was admitted last week, suffering a possible heart attack.

An acting lieutenant at the West Side Fire station, MacKenzie was taken to the hospital after he emerged from the scene of the fire suffering from shortness of breath and nausea.

MacKenzie's family has a history of heart disease and he will remain in Winchester Hospital for observation until the end of the week.

The highest price paid for a house in town, according to Murphy, was $375,000. Prior to this sale, the highest price paid was $275,000.

Caci was also plagued by a lack of available housing.

"Sometimes, we don't have the right house," Caci explained. "Anyone who wants to buy a house in Winchester must have the time to wait for the right house to come along."

"You have to be motivated and you have to be lucky," Caci explained. "By motivated, I mean you have to be willing to send some time waiting for the house you need."

With 6,700 housing units in Winchester, Caci said, there were from 350 to 420 houses sold in town last year. He said there was an approximate six percent turnover rate. Caci said he believed that approximately one half of that six percent represented Winchester residents moving within town.

These in-town movers moved for reasons ranging from the the need for more or less space to moves to more efficient housing.

"I think the community is very stable," Caci said.

Most home buyers in Winchester are what realtors termed "young professionals."

Ann Blackham of Ann Blackham and Company ranked buyers in the following order: young couples, with or without children, "young professionals with good jobs," transferees, single people and older buyers.

In selecting Winchester, buyers are drawn by what Blackham termed the town's "reputation for quality of life and living which means excellant resale value."

Other buyers choose the Winchester market for it's school system while others are former Winchester residents returning home after having lived elsewhere.

Of the older residents who are putting their houses on the market, local realtors cited the "empty nest" situation, when children are no longer living at home and large amounts of expensive space is no longer necessary.

Other older homeowners have found their houses too expensive to keep-up in terms of heating and maintenance costs.

Some have found, as Blackham pointed out, that taxes and the costs of oil and maintenance are "out of their bounds."

However, not all older residents are selling their homes. Many are able to keep their houses because they "are on the tail end of a seven percent mortgage," Murphy explained.

At the same time, a number of older homeowners are opting to keep their houses because of the lack of available alternative housing locally.

A number of realtors cited a lack of apartments or elderly housing units as a weakness in the Winchester market.

"The rental market is currently the weakest in Winchester," Caci explained. "Construction costs are prohibitive."

Realtors have also witnessed a change in the type of homes buyers are seeking.

"There's more of an interest in efficient housing now," Caci said. "There's a strong need for smaller housings." Inquiries are also up for solar housing.

While the length of time a house stays on the market varies from 24-hours to six months, the average house remained on the market 37 days in 1979, according to Caci.

"The length of time varies," Caci said. "It's a function of financing and economic conditions."

Said one realtor, "If the house is not overinflated, it will sell within a month."

Sherman Josephson of Sherman Josephson Realtors and President of the Brokers Institute of the Greater Boston Real Estate Board said that while available housing begins with a low $80,000 price tag, "the low end of the line is rare."

"Listed prices often differ from the ultimate sale price," he said. "It could be lower."

He also pointed to a shortage of "good, saleable listings" as a local problem.

"We've never had an overabundance of listings," he said.

If a house price is "intelligently thought out," he said, it might last (on the market) anywhere from a week to a month to six weeks.

"If the house is not sold in two or three months," he explained, "the seller should look at one thing and that one thing is price."

Mortgage rates are currently running from 13.5 percent to 15 percent realtors said, though rates that are somewhat lower may be obtained from mortgage companies.

Blackham termed the current market "spotty and iffy," but said she sensed a feeling of optimism in the local housing market.

While mortgage rates fluctuate, Josephson forecast a drop in these rates to 12.5 percent within the first half of this year.

At that time, he said, the town may witness a "stampede of buyers."

While he doesn't believe the mortgage rate will go below 12 percent, Wes Swanson of Swanson Associates believes those rates will go "up and down."

What the buyer wants, according to Elektra Aposdolou of Allen and Elektra Reality, is inexpensive housing.

In Winchester, that wish is not always one which can be fulfilled.

★ Survey

survey will, according to the cover letter which accompanies it, offer "a good picture of housing needs of all people in Winchester".

Questions in the three-page survey range from length of residence in Winchester to elderly housing concerns to zoning by-law changes.

Information complied in the survey will be used by the Housing Authority in planning future housing needs.

Some ten to twelve other communities have conducted similar surveys, according to Constance Williams, one of the survey's organizers and chairman of the League of Women Voters committee which undertook the study.

The high school will handle result tabulation.

Some 2,500 households will receive the survey.

Organizers hope those receiving the questionaire will respond by the middle of February. Completed questionaires should be be mailed to P.O. Box 82 in Winchester.

School Meeting Open Session?

Tonight's School subcommittee meeting may or may not be held in open session.

School Committee member Constance Papas said she will be looking into whether tonight's meeting scheduled to be held in executive session with members of the Winchester Education Association (WEA) is legal.

WEA President Steve Gorrie requested a meeting three weeks ago to discuss the possible impact the cuts made because of Prop. 2.5 will have on the bargaining unit.

The meeting is scheduled for tonight with just Papas and Dr. Roger Bauman representing the School Committee. Town Counsel Douglas Randall reportedly told School Committee Chairman Catherine Alexander that the meeeting could be held in executive session for purposes of discussing collective bargaining.

Papas, however, said she "will have to think about it. We (School Committee) generally follow the advice of Town Counsel because he's the one who would represent us in court. But on this I don't know," Papas said. "The WEA made it very clear that it wasn't to be a negotiating session, but just an informational meeting. What information they might need that we didn't discuss at the public budget meetings, I don't know."

Tonight's meeting is scheduled for 7:30 at Sanborn House. Randall could not be reached for comment.

The annual meeting speaker for the Chatham Visiting Nurse Association Jan. 26 will be Jayne A. Tapia, MSN, professional director of Visiting Nurse and Community Health, the non-profit agency which provides home health care to Winchester.

Her topic will be "A Planning Report for the Lower Cape."

For Vietnamese Family

A Winter Of Adjustment

For the Duong family it has been a winter of adjustment.

They've had to deal with a new country and a strange language. They've had to put up with the coldest weather they've ever experienced and they've had to worry about the health of their father who has been hospitalized for well over a month with a virus.

They've had to do a lot of adjusting under the most difficult of circumstances and they're loving it. That's because compared to what they came from nothing could be finer than Winchester.

The Duongs, Tuan, his wife Anh and their four teenage children, have been living in the top floor of a two-family Florence st. home after surviving the chaotic litany of hardships of the refugees fleeing oppression in Southeast Asia over the past few years.

The Duongs feel very lucky to be here and a handful of local residents have helped them make that transition to America with as little difficulty as possible.

Led by Sister Winifred of St. Eulalia's Parish, who has helped a number of Vietnamese and Cambodian refugees settle in eastern Massachusetts, and a special "committee" of local residents the Duongs have been supplied with clothing, educational assistance (all the teenagers attend Winchester schools), help in looking for jobs and general orientation to American life.

Mary Carey of Mt. Vernon st. is one that has helped, specifically in coordinating their medical and dental care. Her reasons were very simple.

"All you had to do was watch TV a year ago, watch the refugee camps. You could see the needs of these people. They had absolutely nothing and just had to have help," Carey said. "There's been a lot of gratification for us in seeing them improve in such a short time. There's a real feeling of doing something," Carey said.

That the Duong's are even alive. especially the father, is a remarkable tale of triumph over horror and deprivation. Mr. Duong spent 18 months in a "re-education camp" following the Communist take-over in South Vietnam. For three of those months he lived in a cell that was 14-square-feet small with 40 other prisoners in need of "re-education."

They were fed one meal a day and tortured at irregular intervals. During Duong's three-month stay in the cell, 15 of his cellmates died.

"He told me that they only opened the doors to the cell to pull out the dead," Sister Winired said.

After his three-month nightmare, he was moved to a larger camp for 15 months where he worked in the fields with scores of other prisoners. The reason for his internment was the fact he had rather tenuous ties to the former South Vietnam regime. He had been the hamlet leader of his small village, a position similar to a small town mayor.

"He had worked with the government so he went to jail," Mrs. Duong said through an interpreter. "If anyone found out you had worked for the government you automatically went to jail," she said.

After the father was properly re-educated the family promptly lost their original home to the government and were sent to live with six other families in the new "economic zone" where they grew rice. It was at this point the Duong's decided that they could no longer stay in Vietnam.

"(Before the Communist take-over) they had food, they had freedom," explained Peggy Sullivan, another Winchester resident who has helped the Duongs to adjust to America.

But to leave was hardly a simple task and the accommodations were hardly "Love Boat-like." They had to pay $500 a head to the government for the right to build their own boat to get away on.

So they proceeded to build their own 65-foot boat and sailed off with 350 other people fleeing the country. In between Vietnam and the refugee camp in Bidong Island in Malaysia they were attacked twice by Thai pirates and lost virtually all their belongings.

They remained at Bidong Island for about one year along with 42,000 other refugees. They were finally able to leave that place through the United Nations and U.S. Immigration who flew them to the United States.

That's when the local residents, some from Arlington and Woburn as well as Winchester offered their assistance through Sister Winifred and St. Eulalia's.

Sullivan did not think it strange that St. Eulalia's would be so helpful. "The number of families at St. Eulalia's equals all the other parishes combined. It's only normal that we would help the most," she said.

The federal government will pick up costs for medical and other expenses until such a time they can become self-sufficient. Naturally, it has been slightly more difficult for the parents to adjust than the kids.

It's very isolated for the parents but the kids have adapted very well," Carey said. Sister Winifred tries to organize as many functions as possible with other refugee families living in Waltham and Dorchester.

Other area residents who have helped the Duongs include Jeannie Deignan of Woburn, Peg Bush, Nona Croke of Arlington and Marion Anderson. Barbara Leonardi has had 5he chore of finding clothes for the Duongs and says more are now needed.

She said there is a great need for winter clothes, especially men's coats in medium and small sizes. If anyone has some old clothes they might be able to donate they should contact Sister Winifred at St. Eulalia's.

Maureen Rotolo has coordinated the Duongs education, for both the parents who attend night school and the children who go during regular afternoon hours.

The Duongs have no regrets about coming here, understandably, and no further wishes to return.

"No, we don't want to go back to Vietnam. Living was easy in Vietnam once. Now it is not easy to live there. People here are friendly. Living here is very nice," Mrs. Duong said simply.

CAR CARE CORNER

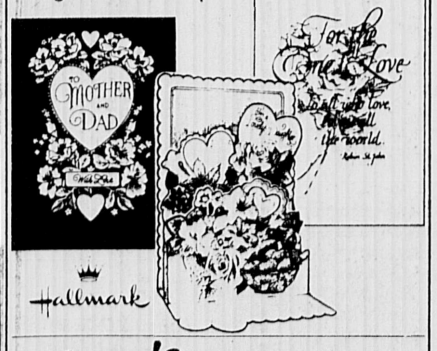

Mario Scenna, Serv. Mgr.

Did you know that an underinflated tire will not only wear out faster but will waste gas as well? . . . Yup — it takes more energy to push a mushy tire down the road . . . so find out the proper tire-inflation pressures for your car, then every week or so have them checked when you buy gas . . . Or, if you prefer, you can check them yourself . . . For about a dollar you can buy a tire-pressure guage which, when it's pressed down on the tire valve, will show you how much air is in the tire . . . The time to check air pressure, by the way, is when the tire is cool — before it's been driven enough to heat it up. . . .

Alexander Urges Involvement In Budget

Claiming that quality education is now "the responsibility of the entire town," School Committee Chairman Catherine Alexander made her pitch for public involvement in forming the future of Winchester schools at last week's public hearing on the proposed fiscal 1982 school budget.

About 15 residents appeared for the annual hearing on the budget, much more than in years past but considerably less than the crowds that had turned out the past few weeks for discussions of different segments of the budget. The committee is currently working on the administration's recommended $1.4 in cuts because of Prop. 2.5.

The major topics of interest last week were continued debate on the athletic cuts ($75,000 or about one-third of the budget) and the possible closing of two elementary schools or the McCall Junior High School.

But Alexander, after going over the figures she has read at the outset of the previous budget meetings,, pleaded with the audience to get involved.

"In the next few months the School Committee, Selectmen, Finance Committee and Town Meeting members are going to have to work in concert with each other and decide to what degree they are going to support the educational system for the children of Winchester. How serious is this town's committment to providing quality education? It is no longer the sole responsibility of the School Committee. It is the responsibility of the entire town. I urge you all to play an active role," Alexander said.

Alexander repeated that even after the committee formally votes on budget recommendations in two weeks, changes in the budget can be made right up until the start of Town Meeting on April 27.

Once again the wisdom of cutting the athletic budget by 34 percent and the rest of the budget by about 14 perscent was questioned by members of the audience.

But School Committee member Constance Papas remarked that only one-third of Athletic Director William Colella's proposals call for elimination of programs (freshman sports and golf). The majority of the $75,000 would be taken from the transportation and facility (ice time, and swimming and indoor track facilities) rentals.

The elimination of the golf team was also questioned. Jim Maconochie, the high school baseball coach, said the low cost of the sport (approximately $17 per student per week (approximately a weekly $17 charge for each participant) makes it worthy for reconsideration.

In depth debate on the merits of school closings will have to wait, probably until some time in March, when the Committee to Study School Closings is expected to have a recommendation ready for the School Committee.

The closings of two elementary schools would save about $260,000 while the shutting down of McCall, which would transform the system into a kindergarten-grade eight configuration, would save between $220,000-$230,000, according to Asst. Superintendent Jack Fallon.

The committee consists of Superintendent William MacDonald, Data Processing Director Art Sarno, Fallon and Mystic Elementary School Principal Martha Grenzeback. They had their second meeting last week.

In response to a question from the audience, MacDonald said the option of turning the McCall into a middle school (grades six-eight) was deemed unfeasible at this time.

Local Students Win Globe Art Awards

The Winchester Public School System has again this year had a very successful showing in the Boston Globe Scholastic Art Awards Competition. The Globe Art Awards involve a regional competition in which over 250 pieces were exhibited at Bradford College Jan 14-18. Ninety individual entries were awarded Gold Keys and will be exhibited in the state show at the Prudential Center in Boston from Feb. 10 - March 8.

Winchester High School and McCall Junior High School both submitted student work. All fifteen of the entries Winchester High School submitted were accepted and eighteen of the twenty-five entires submitted by McCall Junior High were accepted to the North Regional Showing. The high school has been competing in the Globe show for the past seven years. In three of these seven years (1974, 1979, 1981), Winchester has had the greatest percentage of acceptance of individual pieces in the state show.

The final exhibition of the ninety winning pieces to be shown at the Prudential Center will include 20 entries from the Winchester Public Schools, 11 from the high school and nine from McCall Junior High. This represents 22 percent of all the work submitted by 50 schools competing in the North Region. Among the enthusiastic comments that the Winchester entries received was the following from Richard Clancy, the Director of Art in the Belmont Public Schools.

"The value studies from Winchester High School in pencil were about as fine an example of pencil drawings as I have seen at the high school level — I was very impressed and a little envous — really top work." he said.

The following students submitted one or more pieces and some were awarded Gold Keys:

Town Elections

You Can't Complain If You Don't Participate

Town elections are set for March 31 and so far, there hasn't exactly been a stampede of candidates to the Town Clerk's office.

As of Tuesday, with seats open on the Board of Selectmen, the Board of Health, the Board of Assessors, the Planning Board, the Housing Authority, the School Committee and a number of one-, two- and three-year terms on Town Meeting, seven individuals had taken out papers to run for office. All seven are incumbents.

So far, no one has filed papers for positions on the Board of Health or as Town Meeting Moderator.

The deadline for filing is drawing near. The last day to obtain nomination papers is Feb. 19. Those paper must be submitted to the Town Clerk's office by Feb. 24.

The League of Women Voters is trying to stir candidate interest through a forum slated for Wednesday, Feb. 4, 7:15 to 9:15 p.m. at the Jenks Center. It's called, "Don't Just Stand There, Run."

That's a philosophy we agree with, particularly in the wake of the passage of Proposition 2.5.

Whether you voted for the measure or not (and the majority of Winchester residents did), you can't really complain about it's effects if you're not willing to participate and make those cuts where you think they should be made.

Town Clerk Carolyn Ward said she really wasn't surprised about the lack of interest in the elections. It happens year after year.

We encourage some of you to get involved and surprise Ward.

If you're not willing to involve yourself in town government, you really have no right to gripe when you're unhappy about the things it does and the way it does them.

Running Long

Better Scheduling Would Shorten Meetings

Monday night, just at the stroke of midnight, as Selectman Chairman Wade Welch was ajourning the regular meeting of the Board, he said, "I think this was an excellent meeting considering the amount of things we had on the docket."

He went on to characterize the meeting further, calling it a "terrific one."

We disagree.

The meeting began promptly at 7:30 and while things moved along pretty well for a while, they got snarled up around nine o'clock, when Rep. Sherman "Whip" Saltmarsh began what was scheduled as a 45-minute talk that stretched to more like an hour and twenty minutes.

Granted, the town doesn't always operate on a carefully delineated time table but we question the wisdom of scheduling so many items for consideration in one evening.

Last night's agenda was packed with a meeting with a cab company owner slated for 7:45, a hearing with Boston Edison set at 8, a license request at 8:15, a meeting with the Continental Cable Television Company at 8:30, a report from Saltmarsh at 9, a meeting on the Parkhurst School at 9:45 and a meeting with the Codman Company on the Washington School agreement at 10.

In addition, there were sixteen items listed on two dockets under Communications and Reports that called for at least some discussion.

Couple all this with the non-docket items from Selectmen and we think that makes for more than an evening's worth.

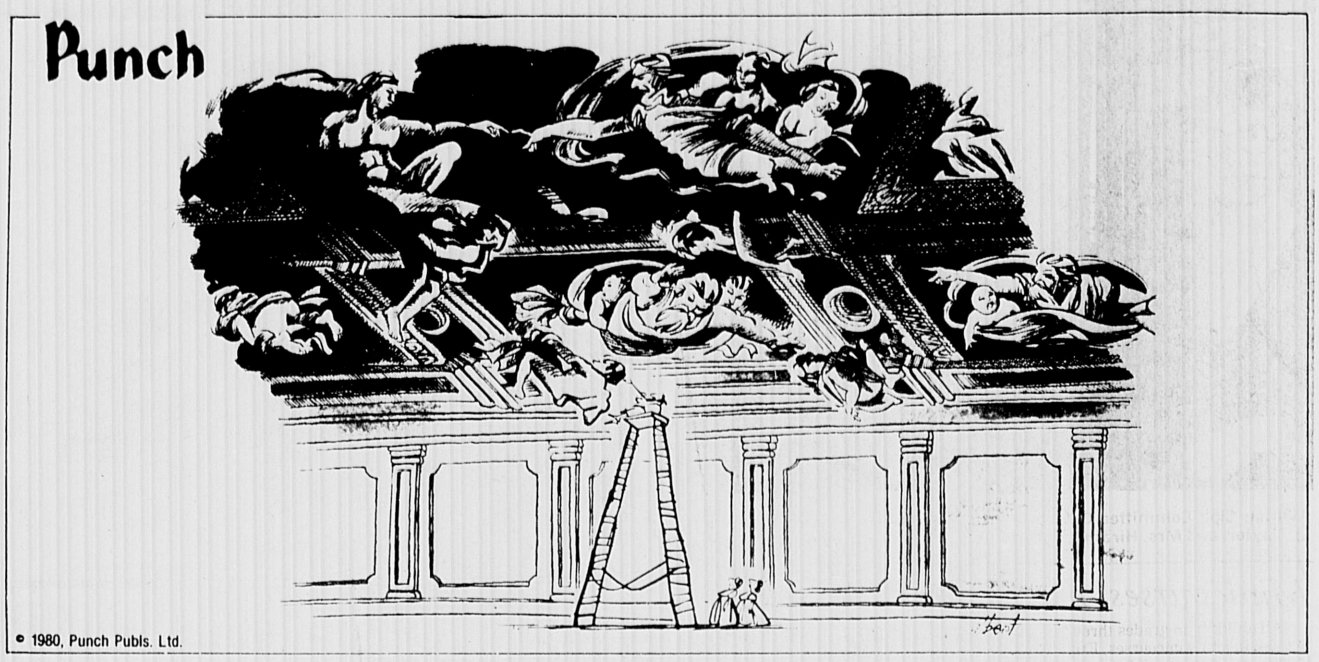

A four-and-a-half hour meeting profits no one well. Attention spans may begin to dissolve and weariness sets in. Things either get brushed over or, at the other extreme, discussed much longer than is merited.

While we're not advocating a strict time limitation of the meeting (though 10:30 p.m. would seem to be a civilized time to call it quits), we would like to see scheduling done a little more carefully so the meetings don't go on and on ad nauseum.

SEEN THROUGH THE reeds, this scene of Winchester is criss-crossed by the plants rising from the frozen water.

A Heavy Dose Of School Pride

By MARY CRESSE

We are sitting on the stone steps facing the crowded courtyard of the Quincy Market area, enjoying the half hour break from the noon rush and ignoring the tourists. We are co-workers, friends. I commute from a "ritzy" suburb and she resides in a heavily-populated metropolitan community just outside Boston. We often share light conversation and the cost of lunch.

"Umm, this is good", I say as I bite into half of a roast beef sandwich. "Wanna split another?"

"No, I gotta watch my money," she responds. "I have to save up for a new coat."

"Why? How could you lose a coat?"

"Lost it? It got ripped off. Brand new black rabbit fur, too. Seventy-five dollars, for nothing.

"Around Christmas, someone got the keys to the principal's office and burned some records and files. Then they spray painted the room, smashed out the window..."

"Oh my God..."

"Oh, I don't care about that so much, but they stole the list of locker combinations, opened all the lockers and took my coat. My mother says she's not going to risk buying me something nice again. Now I have to open two locks before I can even get to my stuff.

"I can't get my coat back until I testify in court beause it's being used as evidence. But I'm not going into court because they threatened to beat on me if I do. So I guess I'll wear my spring coat for the rest of the year."

Her matter-of-fact attitude amazed me. Didn't they have a vice-principal who kept order or even a hall monitor? I thought of our local "detention center" at Winchester High, otherwise known as "French's Bench," and the patrolling of another vice-principal whose very appearance demands obedience.

"Didn't anyone see the kids when they were stealing your coat?" I asked.

"You mean the police?" she responds.

"The Police!?"

"Yeah, the ones who stay in the hallways!"

"What hallways?"

She looks at me as if I came from another planet.

"In the school, Stupid!"

"You have police patrolling the halls?!" I practically scream.

"Yeah! Why do you think we have so few riots," she says proudly.

"Riots?!!"

"Well, they're not exactly riots," she admits, "But whenever we have any trouble with the black, we just show'em who's ahead."

I am speechless.

"What's matter with you?," she snaps. "Close your mouth and stop staring at me that way."

I risk another stupid question. "Are they armed?"

"Who — us, the cops, or the blacks?" she asks with a straight face.

I don't answer.

"Well," she continues. "The cops carry guns, and they always frisk the guys before they go in. So the kids just carry knives because they are easier to sneak in.

"But now that Prop. 2½ passed, the cops aren't around anymore, so I have to be more careful, I can only walk in certain parts of the building.

"See, they have their own sections and so do we. If anyone goes through our turf, forget it.

"Don''t you have a bathroom monitor?" I ask. "Don't the teachers do anything?"

She laughs. "Where do you live? Under a rock? The teachers always walk in groups. They're too smart to get involved."

"Isn't the principal around?" I ask.

"Oh, he hasn't been around since the threats and the damage to his car. They shot a bullet hole through his windshield because he threatened to break the drug ring. Then there were the threats."

I worry about my friend. "Do you mind all the trouble?"

"No, it just takes a while to learn what to say and where to go and who to hang around with."

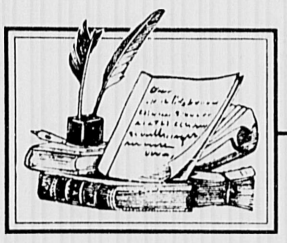

She says she routinely picks her way through gang fights, ignores provocative remarks, and often has trouble getting to class.

My most difficult problem at WHS is getting myself to stop gabbing with classmates to get to class.

I wish my friend were able to go to Winchester High. Through extracurricular activities, the spirit and morale of a true "Sachem Spirit," and the combined effort of teachers and students to maintain an academic atmosphere without the stigma of learning to survive, my friend would have the opportunity to discover a different person within herself.

And she would be lucky, like me.

Letters to the Editor

Hostages

Editor's Note: The following letter concerns the release of the 52 American hostages from Iran.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Do we really appreciate what we are a part of? My answer is no.

We take it for granted but, after watching T.V. and hearing, the joy of being home expressed lets us realize, how fortunate we are.

Let us show our thanks each in our own way starting now.

It can only help, and isn't that what we need.

Betty Kirk S.C. (Senior)

Teachers Meet

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Since the November vote endorsing Proposition 2.5, there has been a great deal of publicity about proposed cuts in the Winchester schools. The reality of these cuts is beginning to "sink in." The School Committee has recently completed a series of hearings addressing proposed cuts. They will be finalizing their recommendations in the next few weeks.

During the next month, a group of concerned Winchester teachers will be participating in a series of evening coffees to be held in the homes of Winchester parents. It is their belief that the taxpayers of Winchester should have additional opportunities to express their opinions about the direction of the schools. How should their tax dollars be spent? What should be the philosophy of the schools? What should be the major priorities?

Several coffees have already been scheduled. A team composed of director, counselor and classroom teacher will attend each coffee to act as facilitators of discussion and to answer questions. It is not the intention of these groups to either endorse or denounce proposed cuts.

All interested citizens are invited to participate in these coffees, either by sponsoring an evening, or by attending an already scheduled coffee. For further information, please call:

Good Concert

Editor's Note: The following letter was sent to Robert Fitzgerald, principal at the McCall Junior High School.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

This is just a short note to tell you how much we enjoyed the Winter Concert. It was a wonderful evening, and the performances of the Orchestra, Chorus, and Band were absolutely first-rate. We had a visitor from Canada with us and her praise of our young people — their musical achievement, conduct, and appearance was wonderful to hear. We can all be very proud of them.

Please convey our congratulations to the students, Mr. Kontoff, Mrs. Tjisthethwaite, and Mr. Jacobs for their fine work and evident dedication.

Mr. & Mrs. F. X. Curran

Cutting Costs

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

In keeping with his campaign promises Pres. Ronald Reagan should completely remove the tumors called the Departments of Energy and Education.

This should not be done slowly, over a period of time, but immediately upon taking office before they can grow one day larger. Those worried about how to balance the budget in light of promised tax cuts and expanded defense spending should note that the combined annual budgets of just those two departments is around $28 billion a year. And there are plenty more just like them.

The tab for running the Dept. of Energy is $10.8 billion a year, more than the combined profits of all the major oil companies put together. But for all that money the Department did not produce a single barrel of oil, not a gallon, not a drop! Over ten billion chained from the taxpayers pocket and what have we received in return? Regulations and allocations.

This isn't to say that the members of government aren't capable of producing energy. Just think, if they passed a law that required every polititian and bureaucrat to face a windmill before opening his mouth they could generate enough electricity to light up half of the country.

R. W. Kuglin

Rich Get Richer

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Thank you again for being so impartial. It is very encouraging to see this in a town like Winchester.

There is much selfishness here. Everyone is out for themselves and could care less who has what. Here I am whining again.

This really is not my nature, but who can help it today with people so self centered.

For example, why should one man have $20 million dollars when people are hungry all over.

The well-to-do will say, that isn't my problem. In a good many cases it isn't the poor's problem that they are poor. I suppose it is a better feeling to be poor and honest than to be-rich and dishonest, but that doesn't help when you are hungry and sick at heart. I know writing about it doesn't do any good, but at least my thoughts are those of a good many.

If you are going to do a good deed for someone, this is the time to do it because Jan. and Feb. are two overwhelming months when there is great suffering.

League Schedules Election Lecture Feb. 4 At Jenks

Are your concerns community concerns? Would you like to have more to say in our local decisions on tax cuts, how and where to meet the demands of Proposition 2 ½, how to manage our school budget, zoning problems, revitilization plans, pollution etc. etc. etc? Do you feel fully represented at Town Meeting? Do your precinct town meeting representatives have a high attendance record or are they falling down on the job? Could you do better?

If your answer to any or all of these questions is "Yes", "Don't Just Stand There - RUN" for public office with the help of the comprehensive Candidate's Workshop to be held by the Winchester League of Women Voters on Wednesday evening, Feb. 4 at 7:15 p.m. at the Jenks Senior Center.

A brief speakers panel will address how to take out nomination papers for any office, how to set up a campaign, how to manage finances properly and legally, and what's involved for you should you be elected to Town Meeting or any major position. You will learn all there is to know from Dick Wilsack, former Selectman, Cathy Alexander, out-going School Committee member, John Moore, campaign manager, Dick Richmond, campaign treasurer and Carolyn Ward, Town Clerk.

"Don't Just Stand There - RUN" for office in Winchester and address the problems for which you may have the solution.

Cable TV Work Underway

Jeffrey Carroll, Regional Manager for Continental Cablevision of Massachusetts, Inc., announced recently that stranding for the Winchester cable television system has begun.

Stranding is the process of stringing steel wire between utility poles to provide support for aerial coaxial cable. To date, ten percent of the stranding for the 79 mile system has been completed.

Construction Manager Russ Stevens expects to be expanding his work force from one crew to three in February, achieving a stranding speed of ten miles per week.

Construction crews laid 6,481 feet of underground cable before the ground froze. Underground construction will resume as soon as weather permits.

"We anticipate meeting or bettering our scheduled system turn-on date of September 15, 1981," commented Carroll.

Continental's license requires that a 52-channel Residential System and a 20-channel Institutional System be constructed in Winchester. Winchester will be one of the first communities in the nation to have a 52-channel home subscriber system.

Three levels of basic subscriber service will be available: Informational Three, featuring locally-produced programming, at $2.95 monthly; Basic Fifteen, with all area broadcast stations plus three Pay TV options, at $5.95 monthly; and Expanded Fifty-Two, offering the full range of satellite-delivered programming and distant stations, at $8.75 monthly. These rates will remain frozen for two years after system turn-on.

Subscribers will be able to choose among three premium Pay TV options; a Family Premium Package, at $3.95 monthly; Cinemax, at $6.75 monthly; and Home Box Office, at $7.95 monthly.

Continental will provide the Town of Winchester with local origination programming production facilities valued at $100,000. A full-time professional local program director will assist Winchester citizens in utilizing these facilities.

In addition, a 14-week course in video production will be offered free of charge to all Winchester residents.

Rotondi Named 'Legislator Of Year'

The Massachusetts Bar Association has announced that State Sen. Sam Rotondi, is the 1981 recipient of its "Legislator of the Year" Award.

Rotondi, who is beginning his third term in the Senate, chairs the Special Commission on Civil Service Reform and the Joint Committee on Public Service and is a member of the Judiciary Committee. Rotondi has been a supporter of judiciary reform and a major proponent of improvements in the legal system including Jury System Reform and Victim-Witness Programs. Legislation to expand the availability of Group Legal Services to middle income people was largely his responsibility.

Rotondi also serves a Vice Chairman of the Joint Committee on Taxation and is a member of Committees on Health Care, Counties and Transportation. Most recently Rotondi was an active participant in solving the MBTA crisis as a member of the Joint Conference Committee, which hammered out the final compromise legislation.

"I am especially pleased to receive this award considering its source," stated Rotondi. "The Massachusetts Bar Association has set high performance standards for it's "Legislator of the Year" recipients and to be acknowledged by them in this way is truly gratifying."

The Massachusetts Bar Association is not the first organization to name Rotondi as "Legislator of the Year". In 1978, he was so named by both the Massachusetts Selectmans' Association and the Massachusetts League of Cities and Towns. Again in 1979, the West Suburban Hospital Association cited Rotondi's work.

The award presentation will be made at the midwinter meeting of the Association to be held at the Sheraton Tara in Framingham on Jan. 31.

Heart Drive Begins In Winchester In February

Lucille Cawrse, Personal Banking Officer at the Shawmut County Bank, has challenged Winchester residents to "Give from their hearts" during next month's Heart Sunday campaign to benefit the American Heart Association. "The drive begins on Sunday, Feb. 8, and this year we're out to break all records," said Mrs. Cawrse, who is serving as Community Treasurer of the 1981 Winchester Campaign.

The Shawmut County Bank, under Mrs. Cawrse's supervision, will be the local drop-off center for contributions during February's campaign. Last year, 367 Winchester residents raised $3,527 during the fund raising drive; this year, 380 residents have volunteered for the Heart Sunday campaign.

"I want everyone in Winchester to realize how important their support is" noted Mrs. Cawrse. "The Heart Sunday campaign is the Heart Association's largest local effort to raise funds for its vital programs in the areas of research, public and professional education, and community services. Please give generously when a volunteer comes to your door—for they're fighting for your life!"

Family Often Victims Of Alcoholism

When an individual's drinking and alcohol dependency expands to the point where it interferes with the dynamics of daily life functions, their job, home life and health, the alcoholic's family inevitably suffers right along with the victim of the disease.

By the divisive and stressful nature of alcoholism, the family or person most responsible for the alcoholic may need more assistance and counseling than the alcoholic once an effective recovery program is undertaken. Because an alcoholic's recuperation process is so dependent on family support, the interaction and care expressed by the family must somehow overcome the emotional damage caused by the years spent watching a relative place more value in alcohol than in the family itself.

Spouses of problem drinkers, for example, may find themselves blamed for everything that is wrong in an alcoholic marriage. No husband or wife, however, ever made their partner an alcoholic and, therefore, they also cannot be held responsible for their spouse's recovery from alcoholism. Nevertheless, by lack of knowledge, a husband or wife may allow the illness to go unnoticed and, lacking real understanding and courage, the alcoholic's partner may actually force the development of the disease.

This same principle is true for all members of the alcoholic's family, especially the one person upon whom the alcoholic ultimately depends.

Of course, it's very possible for a family to do everything known or thought to be right to encourage the alcoholic away from drinking and still find that the illness persists unchecked. But, if a family is willing to learn the facts about alcoholism and puts them into effect, the alcoholic family member's recovery chances are greatly increased.

The alcoholic usually exerts great control over his or her family through drinking. Traditionally, the family argues, threatens, covers up and protects the alcoholic from the consequences of drinking. If the alcoholic continues in this position of power and intimidation through their drinking, it is often because the family is inadequate in opposing this attitude, simultaneously encouraging its continuance. The family must learn to defend itself against the alcoholic's ability to arouse anger and anxiety throughout the home unit, or else they will become virtual slaves of the illness, creating increased emotional and mental pressures.

Motivating the alcoholic to have a desire to stop drinking and accept help in the effort is far more effective than trying to take the bottle away. The only way this motivation can be achieved is by allowing drinking, with all its consequences, to become so painful in itself that the alcoholic will seek rescue from the psychological and physical pain caused by drinking.

Of course, recovery from any serious illness involves a long period of time and, on occasion, there may be relapses that must be learned how to be dealt with.

Begin with yourself in helping an alcoholic family member recover from his or her disease. Learn all you can about alcoholism and put it into practice for your family — not just into words! Attend A.A. and Al-Anon meetings and seek guidance from experienced local counselors, mental health clinics, or alcoholism information centers. Encourage all beneficial activities of the alcoholic that take him or her away from drinking and cooperate in making them possible; and try to change personal or emotional attitudes and approaches to the problem that might be standing in the way of recovery.

Children, and especially teenagers in a family with an alcoholic parent have a particularly difficult time. As turbulent as these years of adolescence are, they are made all the more confusing when the youngster has to deal with a parent with a drinking problem.

Sometimes teenagers wonder if their behavior or their relationship with their alcoholic parent may be driving him or her toward drinking. Nevertheless, for the teenager, it must be understood that every family experiences conflict and disagreement. What actually weakens the drinking parent's ability to handle daily family stress is the alcoholism itself.

For a daughter or son of an alcoholic parent, choosing the right moment for family discussion and interchange can be very important. If the teenager speaks sensibly about how they feel about their family situation, relying upon facts rather than criticizing, becoming emotional or showing partiality, the alcoholic, like all parents, may appreciate knowing how their children feel. When a parent is intoxicated, obviously, is not the time to bring up delicate subjects or to present reasons why that parent's drinking might hurt them and their family. However, if in a sober moment that parent speaks of how he or she is sorry for the damage drinking has caused, that might be the right time for teenagers to talk about things on their minds.

Bringing friends home can prove to be a source of embarassment for teenage children of an alcoholic parent. Sometimes it is good for the teenager to explain to friends before bringing them home, the problem he or she has in dealing with a father or mother who drinks too much. This technique may also prove helpful in securing a good friend with whom the teenager can talk over problems related to alcoholism.

Some teenagers of alcoholic parents feel they can bring their friends home without any explanations, figuring that if nothing is said, the friend will probably assume that the parent's drinking sessions only happen occasionally. Either way, discretion and choosing the right moment and friend to either speak with concerning the problem, or bring home to meet their alcoholic parent, is something that must always be considered.

If a teenager is having problems with his or her parent because of drinking interfering with home life, there is help readily available. Most high school guidance counselors are trained to help the children of alcoholic parents and, area social service agencies usually have programs designed to deal with teenagers who must contend with alcoholism in their families.

Alateen for teenagers is an outgrowth of Al-Anon, the organization for wives and husbands of alcoholics attending Alcoholics Anonymous. At Alateen, members encourage one another and learn how to cope with living in a household with an alcoholic. The sponsor of each Alateen group, who is an Al-Anon member or an experienced Alateen member, helps to lead discussions. Last names are never mentioned and, sometimes, Alateens invite parents from A.A. to attend their meetings to talk of what they went through before stopping their drinking. Along with a wide variety of social functions, the group offers mutual support and also a hot line to other members for dealing with immediate, or emergency problems in the home. To get in touch with Alateen, call the social service department at Winchester Hospital, 729-9000 ext. 361.

For any family dealing with a heavy drinker or potential alcoholic in their midst, above all, don't put off facing the reality that alcoholism is a progressive illness that gets increasingly worse as drinking continues. Start now to learn, to understand, and plan to assist in your family member's recovery. Doing nothing about alcoholism is the worst possible thing you can do.

League Sponsors Urban Run-Off Lecture Feb. 5

On Thursday, Feb. 5 at 7:45 p.m., the Winchester League of Women Voters invites the public to attend a meeting at the Winchester Public Library, 80 Washington st. to hear environmental planner Ingeborg Hegeman.

Hegeman will present through slides, a most graphic description of how urban run-off is affecting the Mystic Valley Watershed. The waterways through Woburn and Winchester are being seriously affected by yard fertilizers, road salting, car crankcase oils and industrial pollution to name just a few. The more asphalt we have, the more serious our urban run-off problem.

Most of the evening will be devoted to questions and discussion from the audience regarding what individuals and organizations can do to alleviate this increasingly serious problem.

If you are a resident of Woburn or Winchester, whether or not you depend on wells for your water, no matter where your home is located, urban run-off touches your life.

There are two morning classes and one afternoon class available for three and four-year-olds. The morning classes meet on Tuesday - Thursday and Monday - Wednesday - Friday. The afternoon class meets Monday through Thursday and is designed as a pre-kindergarten class.

The school employs two professionally trained teachers, one of whom also serves as the school's director. Jean Mortensen is both the director and the teacher of the morning classes. Anna Olivier is the teacher of the afternoon class.

Registration for the 1981 - 1982 school year will begin at the open house and will continue through March 6.

Cagers Slow Burlington But Still Fall, 51-40

By RICHARD McSWEENEY

It was a triumph of realism over daring, of practicality over recklessness.

When the Winchester basketball team met Burlington for the first time this season, the Sachems agreed to the track meet philosophy and were buried under a 74-38 avalanche.

So when the Red Devils returned to Winchester Tuesday for the rematch, with embarrassing defeats at Lexington and Wakefield perhaps still in mind, it became a hare versus the tortoise affair.

What the slowdown attempt created was a more competitive match as the Sachems held Burlington, who last Friday had racked up 98 points against Belmont, to a very respectable 51-40 triumph. The defeat lowers Winchester's record to 2-11 but Coach John Myers was encouraged.

"The plan against that team is not to speed it up," Myers said afterwards. "They have faster kids, that's all. But our kids did a great job. And if Burlington didn't do as well it wasn't because they were off. They didn't play as well because we played better. If they were off it was because our kids did a good job," Myers insisted.

This game had a decidedly different look from the early season blowout. Instead of trailing 12-0 midway through the first quarter, the two teams were mired at a 6-6 tie after a Matt Groux (6 points) 15-footer.

But two consecutive turnovers handed the lead over to the Red Devils for good, as Mike Sabatino (18 points) cashed in both on a drive down the lane and a pair of foul shots. That concluded the first period with Burlington up 10-6 after Winchester had whittled down the last two minutes of the period before Groux missed a jumper at the buzzer.

The first time around for these two teams, Winchester had trailed by a healthy 17-4 margin at the end of one quarter. Myers insisted that this was not just a play-to-keep-the-score-down ploy. But once the Sachems fell behind their task became a bit more difficult.

However, if people thought Myers was slowing it down too much when they waited for the last shot at 10-6 with over two minutes left, they should think again. Myers would have stalled it earlier than that if he could have avoided the two turnovers.

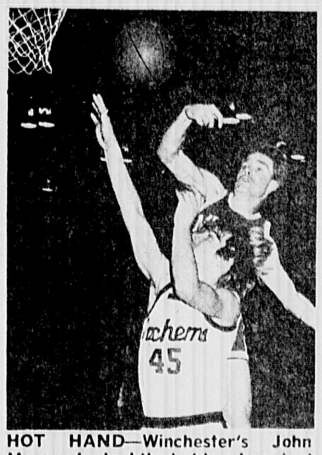

"At 6-6, I told them I wanted the last shot," Myers said. "But then we turned it over twice and that was critical. At 6-6, I said now that's a good way to end it (the quarter)."

The Red Devils opened some more breathing room in the second quarter with a 13-6 spree and left for the locker room with a 23-12 lead.

Except for one brief spurt by John Myers, Jr. (16 points, all in the second half) when he hit three straight jumpers to cut the lead to 27-20 in the third quarter, Burlington was in control. Their lead peaked at 18, 47-29 after a pair of Sabatino free throws.

No other Sachems reached double figures besides Myers. Chip Triglione and Groux scored six points and Mike Blackwood (who had his best game on the defensive boards) added five.

Turning It Around

When John Myers took over as Winchester basketball coach last season following a 1-19 season the previous year, he brought with him the legacy of making a similar Watertown team a decade earlier almost an immediate state tournament team.

When he guided the Sachems to a 7-13 record in his first season, some might have begun to think the turnaround would be quick in coming.

But after suffering defeats of over 30 points against Wakefield and Burlington and a humiliating 47-point shellacking at the hands of Lexington (at home, no less), even the most hardy fans had to wonder what the heck was going on.

Rockets Eliminate Trackmen From Title Fight

The role of the Sachem track team has suddenly been reduced to that of the spoiler but Coach Tom Kline and his squad fully expect to successfully fill that disappointing role.

The suddeness of the turnaround has, of course, taken its toll. Two weeks ago the Sachems were riding high at 5-0 and a share of first place with unbeaten Woburn who Winchester closes out the season against Saturday.

Two weeks later, however, the Sachems find themselves at 5-2 and out of the running for the league title following Saturday's 48-38 defeat at the hands of Reading. Now, ironically, the only team that can truly benefit from Winchester stifling the Tanners Saturday is none other than Reading. The season has taken on a decidedly different demeanor.

Against the once-beaten Rockets (to Woburn, naturally) the anticipated showdown in the relay never materialized primarily because Sachem anchorman Ken Jacobsen was on the sideline, restricted to a spectator's role because of illness. But Kline isn't sure it would have made much difference against the vaunted Reading foursome.

"I don't think we could have beaten them in the relay, even if he'd (Jacobsen) been there," Kline said afterwards. "They've only been beaten by Woburn. They're a well disciplined and well coached team. They had a lot more depth than we did. I don't know if we could have won or not. They had quality athletes out there."

Wayne Ciarcia notched the first points for the Sachems with a second place in the hurdles but Kline had hoped for more. "I thought we could have gotten a first and a third. That's what we were hoping for," Kline saudid.

Robert Mueller and Paul Manganaro took second and third in the dash behind the Rocket's superb Dan Larocco.

With Jacobsen out, Al Chen ran the 600 for the Sachems and recorded his best time of the year, 1:19.7, a time that was just over a second behind the winner.

"That was an excellent time for a junior," Kline said.

Jon Alcione chipped in with his season high in the 300, 34.5, for a first place but the Rockets followed in second and third place.

Mark Merritt took a second place in the 1000 with a 2:30.6 finish but again Reading grabbed the other two places as the usually deep Sachems began to wear down.

Until the field events, of course.

The Sachems roared back by stunning the Rockets in the high jump with a sweep in that event. John Wiseman, Brian Donnellan and Joe Waite took the top three spots as none of the Rockets could even meet the qualifying leap. Manganaro continued his domination in the shot, with a winning throw of 49-7. Tom Porell kept his recent form in the shot with a 44-2 throw, good for third place. "That's an excellent throw for a sophomore," Kline marveled afterwards.

Joe Callahan could take just a third in the mile, however, as Reading began to open it up again. In the two-mile Pat Kennedy and Peter Quine took second and third places to close the gap to five, 43-38, with just the relay remaining.

Reading breezed to a first place finish in that event however, sending the Sachems to their second straight loss and putting the Rockets back in contention for at least a tie for the league title.

Reading's 3:35.8 finish in the relay easily topped the Sachems time of 3:44.0, but Kline was not all that displeased with the effort.

"Without Jacobsen that's a pretty good time for that relay," Kline said of the foursome of Chen, Wiseman, Merritt and Alcione.

Afterwards Kline saw some good things despite the disappointment.

"We did very well in the high jump and Alcione had his best time all year. And Chen ran an excellent time for a junior," Kline said.

Senior Gymnasts Shine But Wayland Too Tough

No, the Sachem gymnasts did not beat Wayland last week. In fact, they didn't even come close in dropping a 105.5-82.7 meet with the visitors.

But Coach Steve Hood and his troops were more than satisfied with their efforts that produced season highs in a number of events against the powerful Wayland squad.

Russell Leach notched his best effort of the year in the side horse, Dave Lawton turned in highs on the horse, high bar and rings and Paul Abbanat also received his highest scores on the high bar, the parallel bars, the vault and the rings.

Against a team that probably rates as the best they've faced along with Lincoln-Sudbury, the Sachems performed as well as they had all season.

"We did well," a smiling Hood said afterwards. "Jonas Bjarngard wasn't able to compete (stretched abdominal muscles) at all. But Russell Leach did very well on the horse (secondplace, 4.9), his high for the year. And Dave Lawton had his highs on the horse (3.9) high bar (4.4) and the rings (4.3)," Hood said after the meet which dropped his team's record to 1-6.

The visitors jumped out to a quick advantage by walloping the Sachem entries in the floor exercises. Tom Powers claimed the best Sachem performance, a 4.0 that was good enough for only sixth place.

In the side horse Wayland's Jeff Cohen put on a dazzling show and breezed to a first place finish with a 6.3 score. But Winchester battled back weith Leach taking second and Paul Fuller (4.0) and Lawton taking fourth and fifth places.

Abbanat turned in a solid performance in the high bar but his personal high (5.0) was only high enough for a third place finish.

That's because Wayland's David Fardy (a scintillating display that more than deserved his 7.0 score) and Geoff Wood (5.8) were just too tough.

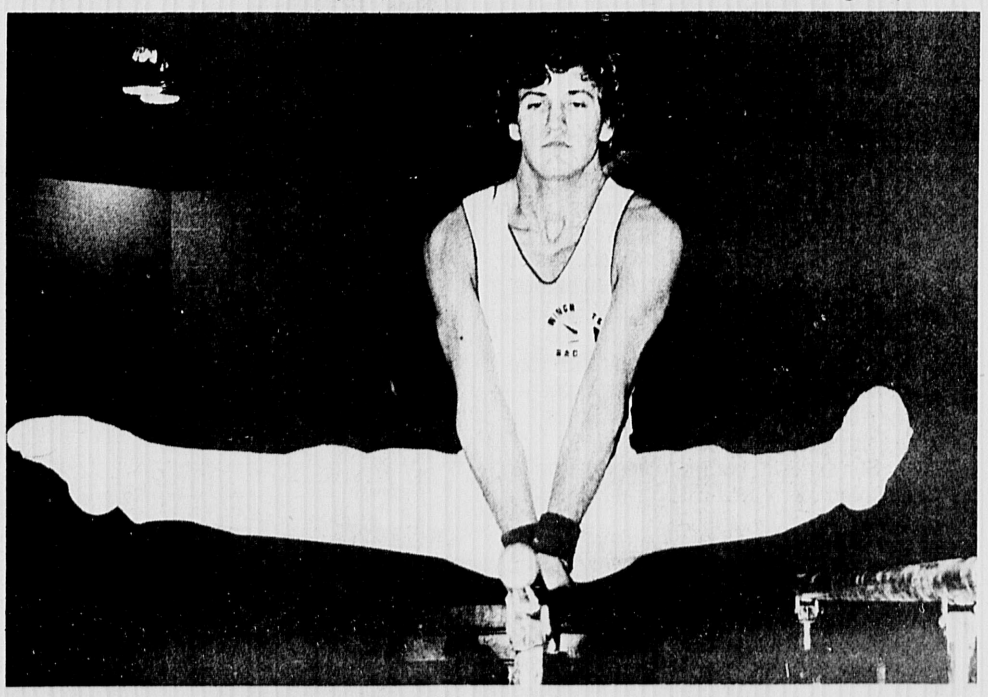

The Sachems again performed admirably in the parallel bars but again Abbanat's best (5.0) was only good enough for a second place tie. Leach followed him in third place with a 4.6 and Lawton was a few lengths back of him with a 4.4.

In the vault Abbanat finally broke through and took Winchester's only win of the day, with a 7.6 leap. Two of the younger Sachems, sophomores Mike Driscoll and James Waite performed well with 6.4 amd 6.6 scores, respectively, but they weren't good enough to place them in the top five. Four Wayland boys had scores in the 7's.

Wayland's Wood was too strong in the rings with a first place 6.3 but Abbanat again took hold of second place with a 5.5 and Lawton was two places behind him at 4.3.

So overall Hood and the team seemed happy with performances. There are six seniors on the Wayland squad and it showed. And many of them appeared to be year-round gymnasts as opposed to some of the senior Sachems, like Abbantat and Lawton who also toil for Manny Marshall's gridders.

"For us it's been kids that have been involved in other sports, not just gymnastics year around," Hood said afterwards. "I'd say three-fourths of the Wayland seniors are just gymnasts. It's the same with Lincoln-Sudbury. I'd rather see a kid more diversified."

SPLIT—Winchester's Russell Leach struts his stuff on the parallel bars during last week's meet against powerful Wayland.

Belmont Frustrates Swimmers

It was the meet to decide the league championship and if one looks at the first place finishes, you would have to think Winchester took it in a cakewalk.

The Sachems collected six first place finishes against the heralded Marauders but Belmont easily won the battle of the rest of the pack, and eeked out a 42-41 thriller of the Sachems.

The loss dropped Winchester's record to 5-2-1.

"It was the best meet of the year," said Vin Palumbo, Jr. "That was for the league championship."

And it won't go to the Sachems although not because of a dearth of superb individual performances.

Sophomore Hugh Murray added to that with a 1:58.33 first place in the 200 freestyle.

Peter Webber had to settle for a second in the 200 IM but the Sachems came right back in the 50 freestyle as Christy (23.8) and Robert McGillicuddy (24.6) took the top two spots.

Colin Green impressed in the diving, capturing 132 points, good for second place.

Palumbo added another second in the 100 butterfly which preceded the race of the day, the 100 freestyle between Belmont's Topher Heigham and McGillicuddy. Heigham edged the Sachem junior swimmer by a hair, 54.0 to 54.8.

Murray followed that duel with the best 500 freestyle race in the league this year, a 5:13 finish.

Rich Webber took a first in the 100 backstroke and Mike Guarnaccia added a third but the Sachems needed a first in the 100 breast stroke and Rich Webber came up just short against the Marauders Fred Marius.

But they didn't and the Sachem victory in the 400 freestyle relay was wasted. Christy, McGillicuddy, Murray and Rich Webber swam to a league-high 3:45.2 finish.

"There were good performances on both sides. It was very, very close. One break, and not a big one, would have been the difference," Palumbo added.

Stoneham (after The Star deadline) the Sachems close out the regular season against Woburn Saturday and Kline doesn't anticipate having any trouble getting his boys up for this one. After all, Woburn is Woburn. "Every event in the Woburn meet could go either way. We're capable of staying with them or even beating them, probably more so than Reading," Kline said. What Kline is hoping for is that the Sachems can at least stay within reach when the relay rolls around because he feels that is the only area where he sees a clear cut difference in the two squads.

The best time for a Woburn relay this season has been 3:46, well behind the Sachems top performance of 3:41.

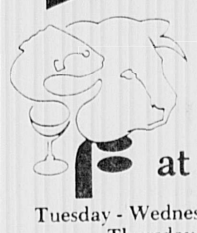

"I think if it goes down to the relay we're going to beat them," Kline said.

But to set up the showdown in the relay, the Sachems will have to lay the groundwork early in the meet. When Woburn beat Reading earlier in the season they did it by clinching the meet before the relay came up. So Kline is well aware of how important the hurdles and dash are, two events the Sachems have sometimes not done so well in.

"Every event there is going to be a key one," Kline said.

The meet starts at the Lexington Field House at 10:20 a.m.

Sachem Grapplers Tough Enough For Shawsheen Tech

The Sachem wrestlers have never been over .500 this late in the season since well over a decade ago. One might tend to think Coach Larry Tremblay would be pleased with his club's 6-4 mark following Tuesday's destruction of Shawsheen Technical High School, 39-27. Think again.

"We're at 6-4 which isn't bad. I don't think too many people thought we'd be 6-4. I know I didn't. I thought we'd be 8-2," he said, only half-laughing. The Sachems are wrestling well but Tremblay wants more and thinks it is not unrealistic to believe this program can be completely turned around.

And if toughness is a primary ingredient in attaining a winning wrestling program, then the Sachems may not have to wait long to become more than just respectable. Tremblay appears more than willing to see to that.

For instance, Heavyweight Charles Christopher is expected to be ready for today's match against powerful Melrose but will do so with a mask on to protect a recently suffered broken nose. Tremblay thinks it might have happened when the two were wrestling in practice last week.

"I don't know if I did it or not but he said he had trouble breathing so he went and got it fixed," Tremblay said after his junior wrestler had to sit out against Shawsheen. "I didn't think he'd get it fixed during the season. I told him to breathe out of his mouth. I think I've had my nose broken seven times," Tremblay said.

And if competitiveness is what makes a program a winner, Tremblay certainly isn't lacking in that department either. After the Medford meet last week, which was an impressive 44-26 win for the Sachems, Tremblay moaned about the pins Winchester suffered in their few setbacks.

"We either pinned them or got pinned," Tremblay said. "Just one, a tie, went the distance. I hate to see my kids get pinned. I tell them it's the worst disgrace they can get."

The Sachems utilized both those motivating factors in dispatching a pretty good Shawsheen club in a match that was not as close as the score indicated.

Tom Funk and Ed Welch opened with pins at 100 and 107 pounds and Scott Rappallo added an impressive 8-1 decision at 114 as the Sachems jumped out to a 12-0 edge.

The romp continued at 121 as Tremblay dropped Lee Fotsch from 128 and he got the win in a decision. Scott Carzo added yet another pin at 128 as Winchester put this one away early.

Junior Tom Gibbons rallied from a pair of deficits to take a last- second pin at 141. "He was down 4-1 and 4-3 but he just wore him down and pinned him," Tremblay said. "In the third period he just wore him out."

Jim Barger collected a forfeit win at 169 and Gary Errico notched his 10th consecutive pin,this time at 187. Three of his 10 pins have been at the heavier weight with most of them coming at 169.

Against the Mustangs, Welch, Rappallo (forfeit), Carzo, Fotsch, Gibbons, Errico and Barger all pinned their opponents and Eric Paskerian added a tie at 121.

But the Sachems modest two-game winning streak will be given a strong test this afternoon at WHS when Melrose pays a visit. Even the normally confident Tremblay has questions about his team's chances against the Red Raiders. But if they lose it won't be for lack of toughness or competitiveness. Tremblay will see to that.

★ Basketball

Burlington Coach Ray Lang said the slowdown "was a legitimate thing to do against a team with our manpower," but still found the evening distasteful and questioned the slowdown strategy.

"John's (Myers) a cagey coach, a good coach. But that creates a negative situation. You're saying to your kids, 'I can't win.' If the other team reacts badly then a negative situation can become a positive situation. But we didn't play badly. Our kids kept their poise pretty well. They knew what they had to do and they went out and did it. It was a sure win but a boring win," Lang said afterwards.

Myers disagreed that the strategy created a negative attitude for his club. It simply was a facing up to reality.

"All it's saying is we can't run up and down the court with them. They scored 98 points against Belmont and 87 against Lexington. It wasn't that we weren't not trying to score we were just trying to be patient and get the good shot."

Lang agreed partly. "John can't come out and run with us," Lang said. "They have to get an early lead. It's tough because it's your only chance to win but your not going to win," Lang added.

He also said the slowdown made it difficult for him to determine if the Sachems had improved since the first encounter.

"I'm not saying Winchester has not improved but it's hard to judge if they are when they played like that," he said.

But Myers says he has no problem perceiving improvement in his squad over the past three games. The Sachems had just 14 turnovers against Burlington, only five in the second half. Although a running game will naturally result in a higher turnover rate, Myers said he was pleased with that statistic.

He was also pleased with his son's performance of late. He had a season high 26 points in a 53-44 loss to Melrose last week to go with his 16-point second half effort Tuesday, most of that coming on howitzers from the 10 to 15 foot range.

"Now when we're in the zone you try to swing the ball to his side. That was one of the things we were lacking earlier. He's getting more comfortable playing varsity now. He said after the first few games that he had been really nervous. It's tough coming in from freshmen ball," Myers, the mentor, said.

And Myers is not the only one. Steve MacDonald and Chip Triglione, another pair of sophomores and junior Keith McCarthy have been playing solidly of late.

"It's the same with MacDonald and Chip. Both have had some good games for us. And Keith has played well for a junior," Myers said.

The Sachems have what could be called a more agreeable opponent to try their new found confidence on tomorrow night when they travel to Belmont to face the winless Marauders.

★ Future

"It was real embarrassing," said junior Keith McCarthy after he watched the Lexington game in street clothes because he was still battling the flu.

Embarrassing. That is perhaps the kindest word that could describe some of the early season efforts. But with three sophomores playing regularly, Myers says the best is yet to come. At least that is what he's telling them.

"Sure it's disappointing but not discouraging," Myers said before the Lexington debacle. "We're playing more young kids. I would hope it would be disappointing for them (to lose big) but I hope they realize they've got better ball to play."

The core of the sophomore contingent includes Myers' son, John Jr., Chip Triglione and Steve MacDonald. All have started just about every game and all have contributed, Myers with his scoring, Triglione with his rebounding and MacDonald with a little of everything.

"He's done some really good things for us. He's not that big but he's aggressive and he's pretty strong," Myers said.

Myers' coaching record indicates that he is used to rebuilding situations. He came into a similar situation in Watertown and the second season there ended up in the state's Division B final against Lexington. He didn't win but his team had arrived and the pattern was set.

"It happened quicker in Watertown but it wasn't a totally similar situation. What happened there was that in the second season the juniors finally beat out the seniors," Myers said.

Before Watertown, Myers coached at Winthrop and that was a different matter entirely. He took over a team that had been state champions the year before but had just one kid returning.

"That coach wasn't too dumb," he laughed about the departure of the former Winthrop coach. "My first year there we went 8-12, 9-13, something like that."

When he came to Winchester last fall he knewwhat he wanted to do but even he admits now he wasn't aware how much needed to be done.

"The biggest single need within the town is to fix up those downtown (outdoor) courts. It's a disgrace," Myers said. "At the one downtown the cracks are so big you can fall into them. I don't think that's too big a project. The same with the one near Bellinos (MacDonald Field).

"There's no reason there can't be a good one downtown, up by Bellinos, up on the west side near St. Eulalia's," he said.

"It especially helps the younger kids," he continued. "When the older kids start playing and they're short a kid then they'll get a seventh or eighth grader. Then you have a seventh or eighth grader playing with kids in the 11th or 12th grade. That's just tremendous for them. When Somerville had all those great teams that's the way it was there," Myers, a former Somerville resident, remembered.

But things are looking up despite the 2-11 record the team currently possesses.

"At the (basketball) camp this summer we had one of the better freshmen teams we've had in recent years. Down even further than that we've got some good seventh graders," Myers said.

But how about next year, Coach?

"Well the thing is we'll have these kids (this year's sophomores) back. But we're not talking a cakewalk. They'll still be juniors," he said.

Gymnasts Win Fourth

By BOB COOKE

The Winchester girls' gymnastics team upped their record to 4-5 by beating Concord-Carlisle, 88.25-76 in Concord Monday afternoon.

A healthy Sarah Gagan dominated the uneven parallel bars and the balance beam to help Winchester to a commanding lead after just two events.

On the uneven parallel bars Gagan scored an impressive 6.2 and Co-Captain Carla Gulino was right behind her at 5.7. Carol Culver grabbed third with a 4.7 and Co-Captain Hayley Greenberg scored a 4.5.

The scores in that event gave the Sachemettes an early 20.7-14.3 lead.

It was much the same on the beam as Gagan (5.8) Gulino (5.6) and Greenberg (5.4) swept the event, increasing the lead to 11.25 after the first two events.

Concord came alive on the vault as they scored almost as much as they did on the first two events combined. Lisa Thorgenson (7.4) and Carol Tortorella (7.0) were the main contributors to the hosts success.

But Winchester came right back with some good scores of their own. Gulino (7.2), Gagan (6.9), Liz Rowley (6.9) and Stephanie Houllahan (6.3) kept the Sachemettes lead at a comfortable margin after three events, 67.1-56.7.

Winchester's Michelle Collins wasn't satisfied with that, however, as she took first in the floor exercises with an outstanding 5.9. Following her was Anna Higgins with a 5.6 to put the meet out of reach.

If the Sachemettes continue to perform like this they should have little trouble in topping the .500 mark. They will have a chance to do that when they close out the season with meets against Woburn (yesterday after The Star deadline) and Feb. 11 against Beverly.

Frosh Cagers Win Impressively

The freshman Winchester High girls basketball "A" team has raced out to a 5-1 record while the "B" team has struggled to a 2-3 record.

The "A" team whipped Wakefield Friday for their fifth win against just one defeat. The only loss was to Stoneham by a 58-37 score. Earlier the Sachemettes whipped Burlington (39-15), East Watertown (34-29), Melrose (29-23), and the Kennedy School in Woburn (42-34).

The "B" team's two wins came at the expense of Burlington (40-18) and Stoneham (36-12).

Leading scorers thus far for the Sachemettes are Susan Barbaro (38 points), Laura Accardo (32 points), Laurie Schwerin (40 points) and Patricia Taylor (52 points).

The Winchester squad battles a pair of Lexington schools in their next two contests, the Clarke School this afternoon and the Diamond Tuesday. Both games are at Lexington and start at 3:30 p.m.

Members of the "A" Squad are: Susan Barbaro, Julie Burke, Lisa Galante, Pam Myers, Amy Peluso, Paula Ricciardelli, Jean Romeo, Laurie Schwerin, Karen Serieka and Patricia Taylor.

Members of the "B" Squad are: Laura Accardo, Deborah Cahill, Martha Carroll, Christine DiGiovanni, Nancy Flaherty, Julie Gibbons, Laura Haddad, Lauren Hartnett, Lori Jordan, Nishat Khatib, Linda Koenig, Joyce Kohr, Andrea Monson and Leslie Paskerian.

The Manager is Carolyn Hackett, the Asst. Scorer is Nancy Flaherty, the Captains are Pam Myers and Jean Romeo, and the Coach is Mary Boghigian.

Sachemettes Drop Third Straight, 65-49

Girls' basketball Coach Donna Tanner made it clear immediately after coming out of the locker room what she thought of her team's effort earlier Tuesday evening against Burlington.

"I have nothing good to say at all," she said simply after watching Burlington dispose of the Sachemettes, 65-49, sending Winchester to their third straight loss. Their record now stands at 5-8 and sinking fast.

"Inexperience is really killing us," Tanner moaned afterwards. "We've had bad luck, a lack of experience and lack of bench depth."

That, coach, pretty much covers it all.

But despite the gloom, Tanner was happy with a few individual performances.

Martha Doherty bounced back from an ankle injury last week and led the team in scoring with 11 points.

"She came back and played a real strong game," Tanner said. "She was high scorer with 11 points but she couldn't do it by herself."

The sole freshman on the varsity squad, Kristin McNamara, played the best she has all year, scoring eight points after coming off the bench. "She came off the bench and she wasn't afraid to do anything," Tanner said. "She wasn't afraid to dive after the ball, to drive to the hoop, rebounding, everything."

At the opposite end of the spectrum, two seniors who didn't play at all last year, also turned in their best efforts of the year. Therese Aylward (eight points) and Carol Donahoe (six points) both performed strongly at the guard spot.

"Neither one of them played last year and if they had they'd probably be better right now," Tanner said. "But this was the best they've played all year."

But it wasn't enough to stop Burlington (10-3) and the irrepressible Karen Grutchfield who led the hosts with 22 points. "She's played since she was a freshman," Tanner said, shaking her head in admiration. The senior sharpshooter is leading the Middlesex League in scoring, averaging 19 points per game.

After ending the first period down just 15-10, Winchester fell apart and fell behind by 19 at the half 37-18 as Burlington put this one out of reach quickly.

Of course, the Sachemettes were playing with a slight handicap. After a strong first period Joanne Maloney had to head to the bench with a sprained ankle and they were also operating without Ann Porell (flu) and Kathy Corkery who suffered a concussion after a fall in practice last week and will miss the rest of the season.

Last Friday it was more of the same for them as they dropped a 53-44 decision to Melrose. Kim Donlon led Winchester with 14 points and Maria Montuori chipped in with a dozen but it wasn't enough to halt Melrose.

Westbridge School

Westbridge School in Lexington will be holding an open house at the school on Sunday, Feb. 8, from 2-4 p.m. The school is located at 20 Pelham rd., off Mass Ave.

Westbridge is an independent, college preparatory school for boys in grades 7-12. Started four years ago in Concord, the school moved to Lexington in its third year and had its first graduating class this past year.

The school's curriculum is geared, for the most part, toward average and above average students. The student-teacher ratio is small (9-1), so that each student can get the personal attention he needs

At the open house, representatives of both the administration and faculty will be present.

Schools Scheduled

The Winchester Red Cross is pleased to announce that the Red Cross in New England will again sponsor two Aquatic Schools this spring. Winchester residents interested in becoming a Red Cross water safety, first aid, or adapted aquatics instructor are eligible for a scholarship to one of the schools.

The 10-day-long schools will be held at Camp Tevya, Brookline, N.H. and Camp Mah-Kee-Nac, Lenox, beginning June 14. The program at Camp Tevya will offer WSI, FA, CPR and Adapted Aquatics instructorships.

Anyone interested in working with the handicapped and already hold Advanced Lifesaving certification is urged to consider the Adapted Aquatics program. The program at Camp Mah-Kee-Nac includes, in addition to those mentioned, canoeing, boating and sailing instructorships.

Brochures on both schools are available at the Red Cross office. Applications for the schools and for the scholarship offered by the Winchester Chapter will be available after March 1. For more information call the Red Cross at 729-2300.

An IRA saves you taxes. But that's only half of it.

It's true. If you don't belong to a qualified employee retirement plan, the Medford Savings Individual Retirement Account is a great way to save taxes. It lets you deduct up to $1,500 ($1,750 if you're married with a non-working spouse) on your federal income tax return every year.

But the IRA really does a lot more. Because while you're saving taxes you're also building up a substantial retirement nest egg. And the earlier you start your IRA, the more money you'll have when you retire.

So whether you want to have tax relief now or retirement security later, there's only one account to have. The Medford Savings IRA.

Arthur Griffin:

Master Photographer

By STEVEN AUSTIN

The boys in the newsroom laughed at Arthur Griffin.

"What the hell does he think he's doing," they asked one another down at the Boston Globe back in 1938, "shooting pictures with that tiny 35 mm foreign camera of his. What a green kid. Everyone knows you can't shoot newspaper pictures with something that small."

Arthur Griffin let them laugh.

Griffin was one of what he termed "a new breed." Color useage was just gearing up. He had been trained as an artist, so he had an advantage over other photographers.

"I was entirely self-taught," Griffin explained from the dark-stained walls of his living room recently. "I had a darkroom and a key (to the Globe)" and while other newspaper photographers were using heavy four by five Speed Graphic cameras, Griffin preferred a smaller, lighter German 35 mm.

While the boys in the newsroom may have had a laugh or two at Griffin's expense, Life magazine wasn't laughing. They saw his work in the Globe and it's safe to say that they liked what they saw. They sent him on assignment and before you knew it, all sorts of magazines and companies were contacting him.

Small camera or no small camera, this kid knew his stuff.

"When I started with Life," Griffin said, "there were very few 'on-the-loose' photographers around. And I was the first newspaper photographer not to use the four by five camera."

Griffin shot everything from governors to Presidents to New England Telephone book covers to boxer Gene Tunney.

"I spent a week in Canada with him, fishing for tuna," Griffin explained, "and I liked him an awful lot."

Despite assignments from Life and the Saturday Evening Post and Holiday, Griffin remained at the Globe until January of 1946. The green kid of ten years ago was now a freelance photographer, traveling all over the world for companies like Kodak.

"I've had an awfully, awfully nice life," Griffin explained. "It's paid off well and that's important too."

Indeed it is.

You'd think that a man like Griffin, a man at the top of his profession, doing things on his own terms with Presidents and such to photograph would be satisfied with his lot. I mean, we're talking the big leagues. At any given session, it was no telling who he might find before him when he looked through the lens.

But Arthur Griffin wanted more. There was still something more that he wanted to do. He wanted to capture New England; to hold onto little frames of it; imprison the winter and spring and fall and summer.

And that's what he did, not once, but three times.

In 1962, he financed and published the book "New England," an over-sized group of photographs on the seasons and the people of the region. His daughter designed the book.

Then, in 1966, "New England Revisited" appeared.

He'd done a couple of earlier books, among them "The Boston Book" in 1948 with a text by Esther Forbes and "Village Greens of New England," with a text by Louise Andrews Kent.

But the New England books were unique. Not only were there lovely color pictures of New England, but each photo was accompanied by a text written by famous writers, John Kenneth Galbraith and William Buckley Jr. and the like.

But two books weren't enough.

Now there's a third, called "New England: The Four Seasons," and the text with the photos are by the likes of John Updike and Henry Cabot Lodge and Archibald MacLeish. Published by Houghton Mifflin, Griffin distributes the book from his Euclid avenue home.

The book carries a dedication to his second wife Polly (his first wife died three years ago). That dedication reads, "To Polly, my wife. She came with a casserole and stayed for dinner."

Griffin is planning a fourth book, with a New England theme.

He has discovered something during the time he snapped all those pictures and traveled all those places. Since 1968, he's given up all assignment work.

"Since then," he explained, "I haven't shot a picture for anyone, not for my best clients or for my best friends."

There's something else, though, something that the man who began taking pictures at the Globe with his funny little foreign cameras has learned.

"I did prove one thing," he said, his face soft with a grin. "I did prove that one man, all alone, can get out a prize winning book and not eat any."

REAL ESTATE
by Ann Blackham

MORTGAGE PROTECTION

Perhaps it's mercy, but many of us barely comprehend the degree of financial exposure we submit to in the ordinary course of life. Take, for instance, the mortgage on your home. This represents a huge, multi-thousand dollar debt. If a husband dies, it could be a staggering burden for a widow.

True, the house itself is security for the debt. In theory, you simply sell the house and use the proceeds to pay off the loan. But if the house is sold, the family will have to find other quarters. Also, a sudden sale may bring a poor price, thus wiping out the family's important equity.

One way to avoid all of this exposure is to buy what's commonly called "mortgage insurance". Actually, it's decreasing term insurance which will yield enough cash at any moment in time to wipe out the mortgage debt and leave the widow with a home that's free and clear. For more details check with your own insurance agent.

Icemen Almost Pull It Off - Lexington Wins, 2-1

By RICHARD McSWEENEY

Last week's 2-1 loss to Lexington proved conclusively two things Coach Mike Houghton and Asst. Coach Kevin Chrusz had believed to be true for a long time.

First, take Lexington away from their rink and they aren't nearly as tough. Saturday's contest was just the second time since 1975 that the Sachems have met the Minutemen someplace other than Lexington.

And secondly, if Winchester can avoid sitting in the penalty box, they would certainly win a few more contests. For probably the first time in modern history, a Winchester team went through 45 minutes of hockey with zero (yes, 0) minutes in penalties assesssed to them.

And what it all added up to was a display of forechecking, backchecking, strong goaltending from Bob Giarrizzo and almost an upset of the second place (8-2-1) Minutemen.

Houghton was happy.

"I said I'd be pleased when we stayed in there with a good team and we did that tonight," Houghton said after the game.

And, indeed, the Sachems played their most inspired hockey of this season and possibly a few others of recent vintage.

After a scoreless first period Lexington's Robbie Wilson ripped a slap shot from the top of the left circle off the face-off to put the Minutemen up, 1-0 at 8:20.

Giarrizzo was really put to the test the last five minutes of the second period as the Minutemen put on their best sustained pressure of the game.

First he robbed the flashy John Coughlin who was parked all alone four feet in front with a leg save of a quick wrist shot.

Then just before the buzzer Lexington's Robbie Good misfired on a golden opportunity when he rifled a slap shot from the top of the right circle just over the cross bar and the two teams left the ice with a 1-0 score.

The final period was a textbook display of solid goaltending by both goalies after the teams traded goals in the first 1:06 of the period.

It took Coughlin just 48 seconds to put a drive underneath Giarrizzo from the top of the right circle after being set up by Good.

But the Sachems "kept their paws up" and came right back with Tom Sullivan putting a rebound past Tim Lescalleet at 1:06 that cut the deficit to one again.

After that it was an exciting defensive battle starring Messrs. Giarrizzo and Lescalleet.

Moments after the Sullivan goal, John Oullette and Coughlin broke into the zone on a two-on-one and a Coughlin slap shot from just inside the left circle was kicked aside.

With Coughlin in thebox on a hooking call, Sachem defenseman Paul White, one of the four Sachem blueliners that played superb defense throughout, had a clean 15-footer in the slot that went wide.

Then with under two minutes left Doug Ross couldn't capitalize on what proved to be the last chance for the Sachems. He got the puck to the right of Lescalleet and after hesitating skated right in front and tried to tuck it under the goaltender. But Lescalleet rebuffed the move and Lexington regained control.

"We were backchecking like crazy," Houghton said. "It was 1-0 going into the third period. That's where we wanted to be. We just couldn't get that second one."

But the third-year coach was more than pleased with his penalty-free performance and general defensive prowess against one of the league's better offensive clubs, the same team that scored seven goals against the Sachems in the first meeting of the season.

"Our defense played very well," Houghton said. "And I mean all of them. John Ferullo, Steve Marino, Paul White and Bob DiVincenzo all played well. The defense has really solidified the last two games."

To help the defense, the Sachems also changed their forechecking format a bit as well.

"What we didn't want to do against Lexington was get caught up into too many two-on-ones and three-on-twos," Chrusz said. "We wanted to send just one man in and have the other two wings push them back on the way back."

Whatever the system was, it worked as the Sachems played their best overall backchecking game of the season. And what certainly helped make that possible was the lack of time in the penalty box.

"We've had 72 penalties in nine games," Chrusz said. "That's eight a game. We told the kids they can compete with any team in the league if they stay out of the penalty box."
